HELP FOR POOR BOYS

The Press would like to start at once a loan fund, which will enable the poorest boy in the county to enjoy all the benefits of our new county high school. Half of the young men who are graduating in some of our State institutions, and becoming leaders in the world's thought and the world's work, have been ragged, barefooted boys who have been helped through school by such a loan fund as we propose. If a boy who has an earning power of fifty cents a day, can borrow money without interest, which will give him an education, and thus increase his earning power to ten dollars a day, he can repay the loan in a few months, after he finishes school, and this same money is again loaned without interest to another ambitious boy who is struggling with poverty, and longing for the streams of knowledge "As the heart panteth after the water-brooks."

It is a great mistake to suppose that the rich boy is getting all the benefits of higher education. He is able to attend the schools but the value of such attendance is generally in inverse proportion to the amount of money a boy takes with him. It is not what he carries there but what he brings away that counts. While the rich boy is learning the yells and the games, the poor fellow who has found it hard to get there, and is finding it still harder to remain, usually improves his time and his opportunities, and brings away with him when he leaves, a complete equipment for his life work. Sending a rich boy to college is like taking to water a horse which is not thirsty, and which you can't force to drink. The principal element in an education is the thirst for knowledge. The boy who has that without any opportunities, is far ahead of the boy who has the opportunities without the thirst. The former is really in position to pity the latter, and the worst enemy to the cause of education is the man who obscures that fact, and who causes him to pity himself. It fills us with sadness to see a man who has a boy with intellectual hunger and thirst, but who does not possess the financial ability to gratify him. But one of the saddest of all pictures is a man possessed of ample means, with a son who is utterly destitute of all desire for intellectnal pleasure or profit. If the man himself has a just conception of his pitiful condition, his millions are but millstones about the neck of his fondest hopes and loftiest aspirations. Many such men are turning their disappointed hopes, and their financial assistance to the sons of other fathers, who are far more fortunate and happy in that they have great boys instead of great fortunes. This is the origin of these loan funds of which we shall have more to say after awhile.

PECANS

Wherever hickory trees have been cut down, and sprouts two or three years old have come up from the old stump, a pecan bud can be put in next Summer, which will bear in two or three years, and if the paper shell variety is selected, the nuts will sell for seventy-five cents a pound. Hickory trees may be "cut back" into Winter, so as to supply young vegetable bud on the next Summer. Most of the branches should be cut off, leaving just enough to keep the tree from dying. This should be done earlier than any other of the pruning. The pecan differs from the hickory in that it attains its full development on our uplands, it affords an ideal stock for budding. Experiments in Texas have demonstrated that the pecan does better on a hickory root than on a pecan root.

The pecan has a very long tap-root, and on that account transplanting is never more than a partial success, and in most instances, is a failure. By budding the hickory where it stands, we avoid many a disaster to the trees. It is a fine plan to plant the hickory-nut in checks forty feet each way in pasture or waste land for future budding. This is a good life insurance scheme for a young man, but no results can be expected for several years. Much more speedy results come from budding into a tree already growing, as the age of the tree is determined by the age of the root, and not by the age of the top. Thus a pecan that needs to be ten years old before it bears, will bear at two years old when budded into a hickory tree which is already in bearing.

There are lands in Chilton county which are too rocky or too hilly to cultivate, where hickory trees are now growing, or could be planted, which could be thus made to yield a thousand dollars an acre every year, for our children or grandchildren. In some parts of Texas there are marsh lands where nothing will grow except the "pig nuts" as they are called. They are entirely worthless except as a stock on which pecans grow to perfection, where they could not grow at all upon their own roots.

Chilton county will never be what it ought to be as a fruit-producer until our children are taught budding and grafting. With the nursery trees shipped in to us come the various nursery and orchard diseases and insect pests, which have destroyed old orchards. The more trees we ship in the less fruit we have. The editor has visited the nurseries from which these trees are shipped and knows that they are propagated by negro boys working for fifty cents per day. In five minutes time I can teach any boy in Chilton county how to put in a peach or plum bud, and with a little practice he can put in from one thousand to two thousand a day. If you want an orchard free from disease, and good for forty years, plant your own peach seed right now in nursery rows, and next Summer or Fall bud into them such varieties as you wish, and get ready for the big market and big prices that are coming to us with the good roads. You can bud plums into these same peach roots, but peach roots are not best for plums. The reason why so many Japan plum trees have died, is that the nurseries have budded them on to peach roots. If you want plums that will last as long as you can last and then bear for your great-grandchildren when you are gone, root some cuttings from the Mariana plum, and put your buds into that stock. These cuttings from the Mariana plum should be put in the ground in nursery rows, just as soon as the worst freezes are over.

The teachers in the county who have not attended a county high school, will find it very awkward to teach the various methods of plant propagation, but with a little private study these can learn themselves, and teach it to the children. It will prove a pleasant recreation both to themselves and to their pupils, and invest all the work of the school room with a new charm. Encourage your younger children to

FROM OUR MISSIONARY

Baptist Mission, Canton, China,
November 23, 1913.

Rev. C. R. Lamar,
Clanton, Ala., U. S. A.

Dear Sir and Brother: Let me express a word of appreciation for a copy of the Press and of congratulation that you have become editor of the paper.

The first issue I have received came yesterday. It was the issue of Oct. 16th. I read every word of it with eager interest. It was like getting a letter from home and yet it was different, for it had so much news about people and things there that I am interested in. It shall always be a pleasure to me to read its pages

I am frank to say that I like the tone of your opening words to the people. I think your ideal of a county newspaper is good, and believe you will do a great deal of good through its columns. A great good can be accomplished by the printed page even of a small paper. So accept my best wishes for your success in your new work with the Press.

Also let me express my appreciation of your opening your columns to me. My life here as a missionary of the Cross will be very busy, but I have a love for "my own native land" and shall deem it a privilege to write occasionally for the people of the county, and shall try to write such things as will be of interest to them.

Sincerely yours,
J. T. Williams.

there. It is strongly fortified. Besides the forts that can be seen it is said others are hidden among the hills on either side.

It is against the law to photograph any fortification in Japan. There is a heavy penalty for it. So kodaks have to be kept close in the fortified cities.

But the most interesting thing one sees as he goes up this bay is Fujiyarua. This is the sacred mountain of Japan. It is about 12,200 feet in height and is covered with perpetual snow. It is perfectly symmetical, rising with the same degree of slope on every side. There are no other high peaks near it. It is the highest single mountain in the world.

There are higher peaks but they are surrounded by other mountains while this one has only a few hills about its base. Thousands of pilgrims ascend it each year for the godless worship.

We put our feet on Japanese soil about nine o'clock The first thing was to get some money. They give you two dollars for one. Then off for a day's sight-seeing. You do not think of the East with modern things, but Japan has many things modern, among them automobiles and good roads.

YOKOHAMA.

It was my pleasure to head a party of ten for an auto trip to Yokohama. This little city is about 18 miles from Yokohama. It is famous for having the largest [illegible] in the world. The [illegible] are sitting is 50 feet high and [illegible] and throw it as a spit ball. This sticks to the god, and, of course, he reads their prayers as thus presented to him.

We saw also a beautiful temple and shrine to the god of war. This is known as Hatcherman's shrine.

This trip was my first sight of how the Japanese utilize every foot of soil. The hills and valleys we passed were beautiful beyond any power to describe. Rice fields and vegetable gardens were always before the eye. The hills are terraced and every foot possible is in cultivation.

A terrace in Japan does not mean what it does in Chilton county. A terrace is two or three feet high built of stone or dirt. The dirt is filled in, level with the top of it till it strikes the hill, and another is built, thus giving one the idea of huge steps up the hill. These plats of soil are often surrounded by a little dam higher than the soil to hold the water on it. A little stream in the mountain is turned toward the little fields, or patches, to water one, then the one below, and so on.

We went out one way and returned another way. The roads were just ideal. Several times we passed through immense tunnels. Hills are either cut through or tunnelled. As I went over such a perfect road in a heathen country I was made to wonder what is the trouble with Chilton county.

HIGH SCHOOL PRINCIPALS

The principals of the fifty-three high schools of the state met in Montgomery for a two days session last week. From the discussions it appears that the neglected country boy is being reached and and benefitted in all the counties where these schools exist. In order to cheapen board, housekeeping clubs are formed, by means of which the cost of board has been reduced in some counties to $5.00 per month. Ignorant old farmers who would not at first send their boys to the school, have been won over by what they have learned of scientific farming from their neighbors' children. One was taught how to stop his grape vine from bleeding, and another how to drain his land to best advantage, and decided his children should go where these things are taught. Through the influence of these schools, the farmers are learning how to innoculate their soils, and grow clovers and vetches. Each county high school is becoming the center for holding county farmers' congresses, and the county demonstrators all over the state are taking an active interest in the success of the county high school. During the vacations a species of extension work is being done without charge by the high school teachers in the rural schools throughout the varios counties. This has given a great impetus to the work of the boys' corn clubs and the girls' canning associations. By this extension of the high school's influence, every country neighborhood has the benefit of the most scientific and up-to-date methods in industrial education, and is showing great improvement in the yield of crops, and in better farm and household management.

HIGH SCHOOL LOCATION

A large and enthusiastic mass meeting of Clanton citizens was held at the court house Monday night, to prepare the way for the approaching visit of the High School Committee of the state. Tentative arrangements were made by which the city of Clanton will donate $4,000.00. The committee on finance reported that they were about ready with their $4,000.00. On motion Senator Curry was appointed to wait on the Governor, at once, and present Clanton's claims for the location.

The finance committee consists of J. B. Downs, Dr. J. E. Gowan and J. J. Pickens.

POLITICS

Some of our readers complain that we are unjust to Mr. Underwood. We do not mean to be, and have several times said that he was a man of great ability, and of the very highest and purest character. His name is associated with the best piece of legislation which the country has seen in fifty years, and this legislation was due in a large measure to his wisdom and statesmanship. We are unwilling that our ardent admiration for Mr Hobson should lead us into the error of appearing to reflect upon Mr. Underwood, and shall be more garded in our expressions. Alabama will have an able senator, no matter which of these men shall wear the toga. In the meantime let those who have allowed their very firsl duty to be neglected, proceed at once to plant oats and vetch.

It isnot the mission of this paper to exert a divisive, and disruptive influence, but to bring all of the best elements in the county to harmonious adjustment and co-operation for the upbuilding of our local interests. The editor and every body else must bear this in mind.

FOR THE COMING YEAR

IN this valley of life, on each side of which are the mountains of eternity, I resolve to walk onward, taking the sunshine and the rain in good spirit, helping any one whom you will meet on the way.

SUPPOSE your life is in the home. Resolve to make that home brighter and better for your presence. Do not spoil the happiness of life that is every human being's heritage. Rather add to the joy of the hearth, so that when you go, never to pass this way again, a loving thought will be your meat.

HAVE you children? Then remember that once you were young. Be kind to them. Never let it be said that you needlessly turned a child's laughter to tears.

IF YOU have gossiped either over the back fence or over the tea cups, here is your opportunity to make a change for the better. Of course you cannot recall the unkind word that has gone on with snowball proclivities, growing to unrecognizable proportions. But you can resolve to guard your tongue and to think twice before you speak once.

EACH day read one beautiful thought, do one beautiful deed. It may be just a phrase of your favorite author. The sunset or a sunbeam or a child's golden curls will give a picture, if you are looking for it. And as for doing something—that's easy!

DON'T polish the waiting bench with "hard luck" stories. Stir yourself. Hard luck never caught up with a hustler. This is true of any kind of work. Resolve to fight your battle minus weak excuses.

LOOK at your face. Do the lines curve down or up? It's never too late to smile. A frowner is an unwelcome companion. If persons make an effort to miss you, change the lines!

BE HONEST! Even with yourself. Some beings can believe their own lies. Don't enroll your name on the self-deceivers' list. There is no hope for you if you do.

HAVE you been a little bit shaky toward any ideal of conduct that you have formed? Surely you must have a conduct standard! Well, what's the use if you have ignored it? Make it a potent factor in the coming year. And may that standard be the best ever!

WHATEVER your work, let it be done better than it has been done before. In this world each one is filling a place. If you haven't any special work, make it. Don't be a parasite.

IF YOU have cheated any human being of his right, be ashamed and be penitent. And don't stop there. Resolve to make restoration of that which you have stolen. This may be a word of praise; it may be a dollar and it may be—many things. Who are you in this great scheme that you should withhold that which is due?

DON'T be a doormat. The homely rug on which people wipe their dirty shoes has a place; but you are a human being with a spine and a heart and a soul. Doormats must not be on your next year's calendar.

BEING a human being, you have the ability to grow in all ways toward the superman, the ideal. If you grit your teeth and hold back as a recalcitrant, ignorant child, you are sinning. You cannot stand still; you either move forward or backward.

THAT question of love—how are you going to answer it this coming year? If you have closed the door of your heart against it, be merciful to yourself, if to no one else. Let love for some human being enter your door with the new year. It is the greatest force in the world. Let it come into your life!

WHATEVER has befallen you in the past, remember that there is another chance. The new year is on the threshold. Open the door and smile a welcome to it. It is as rich in hope and possibility as you care to make it. The happy new year is up to you!

The Turn of the Page

By FRANK FILSON

(Copyright by W. G. Chapman)

"Come along, 752," said the head warder cheerfully, clapping an enormous hand upon the young man's shoulder. "The chief wants to say goodbye to you."

The convict stepped out of his cell and followed the head warder obediently. Three years of discipline had taught him to ask no questions, to demand no reasons. He hardly dared to hope that the pardon board had granted his petition.

"'Tention! Eyes front! said the head warder mechanically, and the convict mechanically obeyed. But the governor stretched out his hand and took the convict's in a hearty clasp.

"The board of pardons has granted you your freedom, Graves," he said. "I strongly recommended it at the last monthly meeting. I know that you will run straight in future. If you shouldn't, remember that the dishonor and shame will be mine, and it will be just so much harder for the rest of us. Here's a letter from your mother in Mapleton," he added, handing the missive to the prisoner.

Graves read it and the governor watched him curiously. The young fellow had impressed him favorably ever since he had entered the penitentiary three years before to serve a first sentence for forgery. He had been a model prisoner, but he seemed curiously hard. Even now he seemed unaffected either by the letter or by his release.

"Yes, sir, I'll run straight in future," he answered.

"Good," answered the governor. "And my advice to you is, go home to your mother. You have about thirty-seven dollars coming to you. Go home, face the world if your home town, be a man and begin your life anew. You will find people kinder than you imagine. Good morning."

He grasped the prisoner's hand again and dismissed him. Graves went out. Subdued and deferential though he seemed he remained totally unmoved.

As a matter of fact Philip Graves was deeply moved, but for all that not with any purpose of reforming. He was going home. He was going to get his own back from life.

The second cousin [illegible] and the only [illegible] the other prisoners had told him soon after he was brought to the jail. "Take my tip, lad, cracking a crib's the only thing worth while. Why, all you've got to do is to walk in after the lights are out, take your pick, and walk out again. But say, don't carry a gun, for that don't pay. Just trust to your legs if you have to get away quick."

Graves felt in his pockets. At the bottom of one, hitherto overlooked by him, was a dime. Graves knew where he could get all the whisky he wanted for a dime—if he chose the time when the bartender was not looking his way. He went there.

Graves tossed off the fiery liquid, set down the glass, and went out. New Year's eve! He had not thought of that. This was the evening for making good resolutions. The recording angel was writing the title at the head of a new page of life. What record would his page show this time next year?

He walked the streets until his head swam from the liquor. It was very dark and the rain fell steadily. Graves was wet to the skin. He walked an immeasurable time, until at last, looking up, he saw a house.

A flame of anger burned in his heart, hotter than the fire in his brains. Good resolutions! What were they for such as he? They were for the rich, for those who could afford to keep the laws! He was no fool to be bound by such a code.

He crept up the garden, felt a lower window, and found that he could raise it. A minute later he was groping inside a dining room.

Cautiously he struck and lit a match. Then he gasped in astonishment. For on the buffet, carelessly laid out, was a galaxy of silver plate. That central piece—that flat tray, which he could put under his coat and walk away with, must be worth a couple of hundred dollars alone! He would take it on his way out. He opened the door and crept upstairs.

There were two rooms at the head of the first flight. The door of one was closed, the second door was open and inside, by the light of the lowered gas jet, Graves could see a table strewn with rings. He crept in and stood staring at them. There were nearly a dozen of them—diamond, pearl, sapphire and—ay, flashing emeralds and rubies. Below the dressing table of some wealthy woman's wife.

There was somebody in the bed. As the white figure stirred, the light shone [illegible] white head resting on the pillow. Graves [illegible] a step nearer. [illegible] the face of a woman [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and

FOR CLOTURE RULE

MAY ADOPT THE HOUSE PLAN

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—The somewhat laggard consideration of President Wilson's currency bill may be the cause of forcing an issue on the senate of the United States, that of the wisdom of the adoption of a cloture rule similar to the one which has been in operation in the house of representatives for years out of mind.

Is the Glass-Owen currency law, for as such it will be known although it might have "Wilson" imprinted on it, to bring about a change in the procedure of the senate of the United States? Is the senate to lose its name as the most deliberative body in the world, or is it to be allowed to go on in its old way, a way of talk at times seemingly unending, talk that on more than one occasion has caused the death of bills which the people would have preferred to be endowed with life?

Leading Democrats in Washington are advocating the adoption of senate rules which will give the majority the power to fix the day on which a bill must be voted upon, to limit debate to any measure and to make certain that March 3 and March 4 in the years of short sessions, and the last two days of the years of long sessions, shall not witness senators "spelling one another" in speech in order to compass the failure of some piece of legislation to which three or four of them object.

Once Threatened by Republicans.

Republican leaders are criticising sharply the plan of the Democrats to limit senate debate. Republican leaders are saying that never did they threaten or even suggest that the right of free and unlimited speech should be denied to any senator of the United States. The old party men have short memories.

By coincidence it was the last currency bill which was passed by the United States congress which brought from the Republicans a threat that unless opposing senators should forego their intention to talk the bill to death it might be necessary for the Republican majority to adopt the cloture rule of the house and to prevent such a "talking to death" occurrence in the future.

It was during the Roosevelt administration that the Aldrich currency bill was passed. Senators La Follette, Republican, and Stone and Gore, Democrats, were opposed to the bill and they entered into a compact to relay one another in speech until the close of the session, so that the bill could not be put to a vote. This compact—conspiracy, the Republicans called it—failed only because Senator Gore was blind. He thought Stone of Missouri was in his seat ready to take up the talk at the point where the Oklahoman should drop it. Stone was not there. There was a lapse, and the vice-president put the bill to a vote and it was passed, only a few hours before the close of the session would have brought its death.

The Republicans on this currency bill have been doing just exactly what they condemned in La Follette, Stone and Gore on another occasion. Now the Democrats are doing the condemning and it is the "give and take" of the party systems.

Would Arouse Opposition.

There are Republicans and Democrats both, who maintain that cloture for the senate would be a good thing provided it could be limited in its scope, but this admittedly is impossible. No party majority in the senate would dare to rule that certain bills should be voted on at a certain date and that debate should be restricted, while giving sanction to as much talk as any one chose to engage in on other measures. Such an elastic rule would bring trouble in a minute, not only from the minority, but from members of the majority, perhaps few in number, who either wish for the full expression on a clotured bill or else wanted cloture on some bill to which the rule was not applied.

There is some Democratic opposition to the application in the senate of the house rule for closing debate and forcing a vote, but in the main the leaders seem to be in favor of a change which will enable the present majority to get all of Mr. Wilson's legislation through in due season.

Most of the Republicans will oppose such a change in the rules. The question is whether the Democrats will attempt to make a party measure of their plan and be force it through by a party majority. If they do, Mr. Wilson's legislation will be expedited in its passage, but it does not follow as if the country can expect just as prompt a senate on the antitrust bill as they had on the tariff and currency bills than they had on the [illegible]

ADMONITION HAD NOT SUNK

Small Girl Calmly Put Aside the Chiding Administered by Her Paternal Relative.

Here is a "kid" story which Dr. Oakley Smith, president of the Chicago College of Naprodathy, enjoys telling his friends:

"An eastern intimate of mine," said Doctor Smith, "has a child of extraordinary precocity. She is only three, but has a mind of her own which she sometimes asserts to the consternation of her father and mother.

"It became necessary one day for the child's father to reprimand her gently, but firmly, when she misconducted herself at the table. The child's face bore a pained expression. The mother was silent. A guest at the table wore the resigned air that guests always do on such occasions. As the father finished his admonition the silence was electric—burdened with foreboding. And the strand was broken only when the baby looked up at her mother and asked:

"'Mamma, did somebody say some thing?'"

Wise Johnnie.

When father came home from the office the mother told him of his son's misdeeds.

"The next time you tease your sister you go to bed without dinner," the father said sternly.

The kiddie sat in silence for a few moments. Then all of a sudden he turned to his father.

"The next time I want to hit sister I'll wait till after dinner," he remarked.

ITCHING, BURNING ERUPTION

Themasville, Ala.—"I suffered with eczema on my hands and feet two or three years. About eleven years ago I became troubled with an itching, burning eruption which came on my hands and feet in little water blisters and in about a day or two when I would let the water out or wash it out, using my hands, then the places would fester and itch to beat the band. I could not do any work that was rough on my hands at all. It caused me great suffering and inconvenience.

"I tried everything that I knew of or was told and never was really relieved until I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I would wash the parts in water with the Cuticura Soap and then when I dried them I would apply the Cuticura Ointment on the surface in the daytime, and at night I would get a soft piece of cloth and apply the Cuticura Ointment on my hands and let it stay that way all night. A perfect cure was effected. No one will ever know how glad I was to get my hands and feet cured." (Signed) Geo. C. Crook, Nov. 25, 1912.

Pessimistic Deacon Philander.

Deacon Philander of our church is so practical that at times he appears to be profane, says the Kansas City Star. Our minister, a very modest and well meaning man, approached Philander the other day and said: "Brother Philander, we are to be congratulated. Of course you noticed what an immense congregation we had at our special services the other evening. I am told that at the opera house there was a very small crowd out to see the show. The interest in our work is certainly increasing wonderfully. "Yes," replied old Philander, very solemnly, "I noticed the things of which you speak, but I much fear that things would be different if we charged a dollar admission and the show at the opera house was free." As church treasurer Philander gets onto a lot of things.

What He Wanted It For.

Little Caillon, a French boy, was allowed to take luncheon with his mother and her guests on condition that he ate only that which was offered him, making no comment. By and by, however, when dessert was on the table, Caillon could not resist a certain temptation.

"Please, mamma, may I have a sardine?"

"No, my son, you know very well that you may not have a sardine, that such things are not allowed you. And I thought you promised me not to ask for anything special to eat."

"Oh, I don't want to eat it," was the little boy's ingenuous and astonishing answer; "I just want to put it in my glass of water and see it swim."

Housework is a Burden

The daily chore of keeping house and bringing up a family are hard enough for a healthy woman. The tired, weak mother who struggles from morn to night with a lame, aching back is carrying a heavy burden.

Many women believe that urinary disorders and backache are "female troubles" and must be endured. But men suffer the same aches and troubles when the kidneys are sick.

Women are especially subject to kidney disease. Tight clothing, indoor work, the ordeals of childbirth, the worry, and the stooping, straining and striving of housework all help to bring it on. At first the trouble may be only backache, sick headache, dizziness and a drowsy, dull languid feeling, but this condition is dangerous to neglect, for dropsy, gravel and deadly Bright's disease start in some such small way.

Don't be discouraged. When backache, nervousness and irregular or painful passages of the kidney secretions begin to bother you, use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that has brought new life and strength to thousands of suffering women. There are no poisonous nor narcotic drugs in Doan's Kidney Pills—nothing to injure nor cause a habit. Delicate women can use them with perfect safety.

"Oh! What a pain."

A PHYSICAL WRECK

Confined to Bed For Six Weeks

Mrs. J. Lenane, Monroe St., Archbald, Pa., says: "I had awful lameness across my back and it kept me from resting at night. I suffered from terrible headaches and dizzy spells and they affected my sight. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage, and my health was going down day by day. Finally my feet and ankles began swelling and I wasn't able to tie my shoes. I got so bad I couldn't stay up any longer and for six weeks, I was sick abed, unable to move hand or foot. I was a physical wreck. At this critical time, a neighbor sent me a few Doan's Kidney Pills and told me to try them. To my delight, they helped me from the first and I kept on using them until I was completely cured. I have been free from kidney trouble ever since and I am now enjoying good health. If Doan's Kidney Pills had only come to my attention sooner, I would certainly have been spared a good deal of expense and suffering. My recovery has surprised everyone."

REFUSED TO GET EXCITED

Old Man Jones Philosophically Reasoned That Norah Had Right to Go Out as She Chose.

The topic switched to taking a philosophic view of things, and Congressman Patrick D. Norton of North Dakota told of the beautiful composure with which one Jones met a rather trying situation.

"Oh, John! Oh, John!" she exclaimed with a lot of emotional thrills. "Norah made a mistake and tried to light the kitchen fire with gasoline!"

"Gasoline, eh?" calmly responded John. "Did she get it started?"

"Did she get it started?" cried the amazed Mrs. Jones. "It blew her out the kitchen window!"

"That's all right, my dear," returned the philosophic Jones. "It was her afternoon out, anyway."

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

Poor Woman's Gift.

A poor blind woman in Paris, we are told, put 27 francs into a plate at a missionary meeting.

"You cannot afford so much," said one.

"Yes, sir, I can," she answered.

On being pressed to explain, she said: "I am blind, and I said to my darling dear mother, 'How much more do you spend in a year for oil in your lamps when it is so dark as much as when it is not?' They replied: 'About [illegible] francs.'

"Then I said to my dear mother, 'I think that I could save as much for the year [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] that is what I am going to [illegible] to the [illegible] fund.'"

HORSE HAD TO KEEP GOING

Might Choose Its Own Time to Die, but Driver Selected Spot Where It Was to Fall.

A South Dakota congressman tells a story of the old coaching days, when a certain Pete McCoy, one of the most skilful of the old stage-drivers, operated a conveyance that made a circuit of Deadwood, Carbondale, Spearfish, and Bear Gulch. Pete was famous for his fast, furious, daring driving.

One day, the story runs, Pete tore into Carbondale on his usual dead run. Up to the "hotel" door clattered the stage. There, suddenly, as it stopped, one of the four horses fell dead.

"Kinder sudden, that, Pete," said a bystander.

"Nuthin' sudden about it," said Pete. "That hoss died at the top of the hill, ten miles back; but I wasn't goin' to let him down until I got to the reg-lar stoppin' place."—Lippincott's Magazine.

His Contribution.

A little boy of five was invited to a children's party. The next day he was giving an account of the fun, and said that each of the little visitors had contributed either a song, a recitation, or music for the pleasure of the rest.

"Oh, poor little Jack!" said his mother. "How very unfortunate you could do nothing!"

"Yes, I could, mother," replied the young hopeful. "I stood up and said my prayers!"

ANNOUNCEMENT.

FOR STATE SENATOR.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the Senate of Alabama from the the Fifteenth district, composed of the counties of Chilton, Shelby and Autauga, subject to the action of the Democratic primary.

W. W. Wallace.

Pay your poll tax or quit politics.

Pay you poll tax and your opinion amounts to something.

It makes no difference what candidate you favor unless you pay your poll tax.

Underwood is campaigning in Alabama, but finds it harder to answer Hobson than to answer roll-call.

The High School question has all been settled now, and it is in order for the howlers to start up their work.

The newspaper reporter frequently finds himself on the side that his bread is buttered on. Graft supplies more butter than conscience does.

"There are some mighty good men against Hobson." Yes, there are just enough exceptions to prove the rule. It takes more than one or two swallows to make a Summer.

Rich spots of waste land about the barn, or back of the garden or hen house, should be occupied by fig trees. Set cuttings where you want them to grow, and then forget them.

The country school teacher who prepares one boy to put ten acres in fruit trees, is worth more to the community than the teacher who prepares forty boys to be president of the United States.

There have come to us from many sources, many expressions of gratitude toward the Clanton Press and its kind hearted subscribers, for the Christmas cheer carried to the Poor House by our representatives, Mr. J. W. Stanfield and wife.

The quince is one of tne very best fruits for preserves and jelly, and the tree is the tree is the easiest of all to propogate. It roots easily from cuttings and it is nearly time to put them out. No cutting should have much tops.

Quit looking for mud paddles. The work is carried on by a twenty inch dredge-pipe, conveying a libellous stream from the furtherest end of nowhere, and leaving a heavy deposit of cartoons numerous enough to raise the grade, and filthy enough to lower the standard of the lowest politics ever known in Alabama.

HAD DONE NOTHING MUCH

Woman Testifies at Trial That She Had a "Little" Work to Do Following Man's Arrest.

"You say, madam," said the lawyer to the woman on the witness stand, "that it was ten o'clock at night when you first heard the trouble in the street in front of your house, and your family were all in bed. Did you do anything after going to the window and watching the policeman arrest the man?"

"No—at least nothing to speak of. I just set some bread to rise and mended a hole in one of my children's stockings, and put some clothes I wanted to wash the next day to soak, and chopped up some potatoes and meat to make hash for breakfast, and put a button on my husband's trousers, and set the table for breakfast so as to save time in the morning, and laid the fire so I wouldn't have anything to do but light it in the morning. Then I sort o' tidied up my kitchen and seeded some raisins for a cake I wanted to bake the next morning, and emptied the water under the ice-chest, and went down cellar to see that the furnace was all right for the night. I brought some apples up from the cellar and peeled them so as to have them ready for something I wanted to make the next morning. Then I wound the clock and read the paper a few minutes, and did three or four little things a woman is apt to have to do before she goes to bed when she has a family to look after, but nothing to speak of, after all."

SEEKS KEY TO POPULARITY

Man Much Sought After by Book Agents and Solicitors Wonders Why Elite Scorn Him.

"I don't know what's the matter with me?" grumbled the Old Codger. "By people of worth and substance—busy, clean, representative folks whose good opinions I really feel I ought to possess—I am regarded as more or less of a kicker, back-puller, grouch and mossback; and by some few, I believe, as an object of suspicion. But, on the other hand, I never fail to make a favorable impression on, and an immediate hit with, every blamed bore, agent, solicitor, bum politician and other nuisance that happens into my vicinity. Auger-eyed gentlemen with schemes, oily ones with encyclopedias, somber ones with town lots in the middle of Dismal Swamp, apocryphal friends of my boyhood, up-getters of funds for the preservation of historic huts and the amelioration of far-flung heathen, and deadbeats and lame ducks of all kinds, come miles and fairly fall over each other to get to me. What in fire is the matter with me, anyhow?"

Records in Writing.

"Michael Fairless," according to her biographer, wrote her masterpiece, "The Road Mender," in nine days. A remarkable feat, but by no means a record, for did not Johnson write "Rasselas"—a book of about similar length to "The Road Mender"—in the evenings of a single week, and Dumas undertook, for a bet, to write a first volume of the "Chevalier de la Maison Rouge," to consist of 50,000 words, in 16 hours, and won with six hours to spare! Among modern writers Sir Arthur Wing Pinero turned out his play, "Two Hundred a Year" in a single afternoon. On the other hand, it took Gray years and years to write his elegy. So you cannot set the record of time and achievement.—London Chronicle.

Last Works of Great Composers.

It is curious how the great composers of opera have turned their attention to religion at the end of their careers. The last work of Wagner, "Parsifal," though a "music drama," is a work of decidedly religious import. Mozart's last, and perhaps greatest work was a "Requiem." Verdi also completed his career as a composer by writing a "Requiem" of marvelous beauty. Even the frivolous Rossini turned his attention to religious matters, and his last work was the "Stabat Mater."

Lazy.

"He was very lazy, Mr. Perkins," said old Mrs. Jones. "I must say my first husband was a very lazy man."

"How lazy was he?" I asked.

"Well, he was so lazy, Eli, Mr. Jones was so lazy, that he wouldn't shovel a path to the front gate."

"How did he get the path broken out?" I asked.

"Oh, he used to lay on the lounge and pinch the baby's ear with the nippers until the neighbors came rushing in to treat down the stairs."—Eli Perkins.

From a Teacher's Collection.

Fay came tardy to school one morning, but her eyes [illegible] shining and her cheeks glowed as she rushed to the teacher to explain. "The stork brought a baby brother to our house last night, and of course mother's not up yet, but she has a little boy!" Fay announced proudly. The teacher could not in any way see why the stork should go to Fay's house with a baby, but finally decided it must be all right, and [illegible]

At the Methodist church on Sunday morning, 28th inst., at the close of the eleven o'clock service, Mr. David Cherry of Autauga county and Miss Norma Denty were married.

As the soft strains of music sounded under the skillful touch of Miss Glennie Eugene Evans, the charming bride with her maid of honor, Miss Bertha Smith, and the groom, with his best man, Mr. Willie Cherry, of Birmingham, walked up the aisles, meeting at the altar, Rev. L. H. S. Chappelle spoke the solemn words that united the destinies of the happy young couple

WILL RAISE BAR SKY HIGH, IT IS STATED

REPORTED EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO KEEP OUT REPUBLICANS.

DISCUSSION A LIVE ONE

If Rule Is Adopted It Will Effect About Thirty Thousand Voters.

Birmingham.—That the state democratic executive committee which meets in Montgomery on January 7 "will raise bars" in the coming primary higher than ever before in the history of democratic primary elections in Alabama, is the prediction being made by politicians here.

For some time there has been discussion as to what qualifications should be prescribed for the voter who participates in the primary election to be called by the committee to nominate a United States senator and state officials. In view of the fact that there are about 30,000 republicans and progressives in Alabama, a large percentage of whom, it is stated, have been accustomed to take part in the democratic primaries, the discussion of qualifications has been a live one.

It is stated that a majority of the members of the executive committee have expressed an opinion that the primary should be confined exclusively to voters who supported the democratic nominees in the last general election. It is further stated that the committee will bar all citizens who voted in the last general election and who declined to support President Wilson.

If the rule is adopted and enforced it will keep at least 20 thousand voters who supported either Taft or Roosevelt out of the primary election, for it is estimated that fully that number would take part in the primary.

ALABAMA LEADS.

Southern Raisers Can Produce Beef Cattle to Better Advantage.

Washington.—The declaration that the south for a long period is to be "the country's principal source of cheap beef," is made in a statement submitted to the House committee on agriculture by George M. Rommel, chief of the animal husbandry division of the department of agriculture. No northern farmer, or any other farmer, asserted Mr. Rommel, "can raise beef at less than 5 cents a pound, but we have and are doing that in Alabama. If the northern feeder is raising beef right on his farm he must get more than 5 cents per pound. If he is fattening it is an open question how much it is going to cost."

MILL AT MOBILE BURNS.

Fire Tugs Do Good Work, But Fail to Save Building.

Mobile, Ala.—The planing mill of the Ollinger and Bruce Dry Dock company, located on Pinto Island, opposite the foot of Eslava street, was destroyed by fire, and but for the powerful streams from the government steamer Holabird, the tugs Lapwing, Claude and Echo, the loss would have been a great deal heavier. Powerful streams from these seagoing tug boats saved the other buildings near the planing mill.

Mr. Branscomb will enter Oxford next October and will remain for three years. The award was announced by the Alabama Rhodes scholarship committee.

Sanford of this city, who was recently appointed United States attorney for the Middle district of Alabama by President Wilson, officially assumed the duties of the office December 23. Mr. Sanford has resigned his position here as United States commissioner, which place he has held for thirty-four years, to accept the appointment.

CHARLES G. BROWN DEAD.

Was Former Attorney General of the State of Alabama.

Birmingham.—Charles Gayle Brown, former attorney general of Alabama, under the administration of the late Gov. Joseph Forney Johnston, died at his residence on Fountain Heights.

Mr. Brown was the eldest brother of Eugene L. Brown of this city, Wilbur Brown, and H. T. Brown of Cleburne, Tex., and of the late Wilson Richard Brown and William Garrott Brown, recently deceased. His death is believed to have been hastened by reason of the recent death of his two younger brothers, to whom he was tenderly attached. His body was laid to rest in Elmwood cemetery.

SOIL SURVEY OF BARBOUR.

Believed Data Will Be of Great Value to County.

Eufaula.—Howard C. Smith, of the United States department of agriculture, will start some time this month to make a soil survey of Barbour county. He has just completed a survey of Bullock county, which is proving of much help to the farmers there. The local survey was secured at the instance of the Commercial Club of this city. The data will be of great value in bringing settlers to this county, which has an extremely varied soil. There are valuable mineral deposits in the vicinity of Baker Hill, 15 miles below Eufaula.

STENOS MEET IN BIRMINGHAM.

Birmingham.—Third annual convention of the Alabama Shorthand Reporters' Association was held at the Young Men's Christian Association building in Birmingham December 29-30. Hugo L. Black, of Birmingham, delivered the address of welcome. The attendance was large. An interesting program was carried out. This association was organized at Birmingham December 19, 1910.

NEW INDUSTRY LOCATED.

HELP FARM WOMAN

Housewives of Progressive Farmers Asked for Views.

Many Best Means of Increasing Personal Income and Better Means of Marketing Produce — Other Farm Topics of Interest.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To ascertain the fields in which farm women desire specific assistance, a letter of inquiry has been addressed to the housewives of 55,000 progressive farmers in all the counties of the United States. This letter asked no questions and left every woman free to discuss any need which occurred to her. She was invited to take the matter up with her neighbors and make a reply which represented not merely her personal need but the recognized need of the women of her community. Replies to this letter have been received in great numbers.

There has not been time for a complete analysis of these letters, but from those which have been read it is evident that women want help in practically every phase of home management, from the rearing and care of children to methods of getting the heavy work, such as washing, done by co-operative agencies.

Many women seek means of increasing the precious personal income which they receive from poultry, butter making, or the garden in their care. Many asked the department to suggest new handicrafts or gainful home occupations, and others seek better means of marketing the preserves, cakes, or fancywork that they now produce.

The overwork of farm women and their fear of the effect of overwork on their children is the text of many of these letters. The difficulty of securing domestic help, due seemingly to the fact that daughters of farmers no longer take positions as home makers, has added to the farm housekeeper's burden.

Many ask the department to prove to the men that their work is worth something in dollars and cents. Still others express a realization that their own lot is hopeless and self-sacrificingly ask that better things in the way of education, cheaper schoolbooks, improved schools, lectures, libraries, and museums be provided for their children. Many request that the department establish a woman's bureau, issue weekly or other publications designed for women and dealing with matters of cooking, clothing, home furnishing, education of children and care of the sick.

Co-operation in Soil-Survey Work.

With the view of making soil surveys more valuable to the farmer, a new basis of co-operation has been established by the department of agriculture with the states through their experiment stations, agricultural colleges, and agricultural bureaus. Under this plan the department will give precedence in conducting detailed soil surveys to those states which co-operate with the department in the matter and which request that such surveys be made.

During the past year 19 states have appropriated money for soil surveys in co-operation with the department. If the request for soil surveys on the part of co-operating states absorbs all the department's funds for such work, no projects will be undertaken in non-co-operating states. It is believed that where the soil surveys are made at the special request of the state agricultural agency and in districts where the state is actively engaged in extension work, the state authorities will be willing and able to help the farmer to gain the greatest possible benefit from the department's reports and soil-survey maps.

Farm Demonstration Work.

In the boys' demonstration work in the south, 130 members of the boys' corn clubs in the various southern states produced yields of over 100 bushels of corn to the acre. The work of the canning and poultry clubs, through which the girls of the farm are encouraged to preserve in a form suitable for home use or sale such products as tomatoes and other vegetables and fruits as can be profitably produced for local consumption, on many farms has yielded satisfactory results.

In the northern states a good beginning has been made in farm demonstration work during the year. This work is prosecuted for the most part in co-operation with the agricultural colleges through county agents, who devote their entire time to the study of local agricultural conditions and needs and act as propagators and advisers to farmers, encouraging the adoption of improved methods and where advisable the introduction of new crops.

While the organization and establishment of this work in the north and west is not known to authorities in any way comparable with what may be expected to result from the development of the work of the branch in the 30 counties included, additional demonstration agents were added during the year [illegible] and Grand Forks, N. Dak., [illegible] agents were added to the force [illegible] agents [illegible] and supply needed local effects. Under present conditions it is necessary in the individual prosecution to establish by evidence a standard for each individual article. This procedure is very expensive, and sometimes its cost is out of proportion to its value.

Moreover, it may result in lack of uniformity in different jurisdictions. With legal standards established, the control of foods would be more uniform and measurably less expensive. The lack of such standards is today one of the greatest difficulties in the administration of the food and drugs act. These standards, however, should be in the form of definitions, because numerical standards furnish recipes for sophistication. The standards, moreover, should be sufficiently flexible to permit improvements in production.

There were 14,476 employes in the department on July 1, 1913. Of these, 2,924 were employed in Washington and 11,554 outside of Washington. Of the entire force, 1,812 were engaged in scientific investigations and research; 1,323 in demonstration and extension work; 687 in administrative and supervisory work; 6,051 in regulatory and related work and 4,635 were clerks and employes below the grade of clerk.

The Production of Eggs.

According to statistics of the department of agriculture, the products of the American hen aggregates a total value of over $600,000,000 annually. Poultry and eggs are produced in all sections of the country, but it is a noticeable fact that the bulk of these important products is produced by the farmers of the Mississippi valley. In this section there are practically no large poultry farms such as are commonly found in the eastern states and on the Pacific coast. Poultry keeping, therefore, is usually incidental, the hens being considered and treated generally as an agent for converting material which would otherwise go to waste into a salable product. Consequently the poultry and eggs produced constitute merely a by-product of the general farm.

In order that the farmer may sell more eggs, better eggs, and obtain a better price for them, the department has issued the following suggestions:

Improve your poultry stock.

Keep one of the general purpose breeds such as the Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte, Orpington, or Rhode Island Red.

Provide one clean, dry, vermin-free nest for every four or five hens.

Conclude all hatching by May 15 and sell or confine male birds during the remainder of the summer.

Gather the eggs once daily during ordinary times and twice daily during hot or rainy weather.

In summer, place eggs as soon as gathered in a cool, dry room.

Use all small or dirty eggs at home.

Market frequently, twice a week if possible during the summer.

The department has also issued the following suggestions to the country merchant and cash buyer:

Candle all eggs and buy on the loss-off basis.

Allow the farmer to see you candle the eggs occasionally and return those rejected if he wishes them.

Pack carefully in strong, clean cases or fillers.

Do not keep in a musty cellar or near oil barrels or other odoriferous merchandise.

Ship daily during warm weather.

Bouillon Cubes Not Concentrated Meat Essence.

The belief of many people that bouillon cubes are concentrated meat essence and of high nutritive value, is shattered by a bulletin of the department of agriculture. The department authorities say that while they are valuable stimulants or flavoring agents they have little or no real food value and are relatively expensive in comparison with home-made broths and soups. The bulletin compares the contents and food value of bouillon cubes with meat extracts and home-made preparations of meat.

The ordinary commercial bouillon cubes, according to this bulletin, consist of from one-half to three-quarters table salt. As they range in price from ten to 20 cents an ounce, purchasers of these cubes are buying salt at a high price.

The department's meat chemist has carefully analyzed semi-solid meat extracts, fluid meat extracts, and commercial meat juice, which are offered on the market to the American public, in addition to the bouillon cubes. He has also conducted experiments in making home-made beef broth, and meat and vegetable soup.

Both the bouillon cubes and the meat extracts are stimulants and flavoring agents, but have only a slight food value and are more expensive than home-made soups.

The bulletin recommends a wholesome meat and vegetable soup which will furnish enough for a family of five, at a cost of approximately 15 cents. This may be made according to the following recipe:

[illegible] and [illegible] meat (prices usually paid by department clerks).

BANK COMMITTEE WILL VISIT CITIES

BOUNDARIES WILL BE DETERMINED AS CLAIMS OF APPLICANTS ARE HEARD.

FORM MUST BE FILED

Each Bank Will Be Given Sixty Days to Comply With All Requirements.

Washington.—The federal reserve bank organization committee supplemented its plan for locating federal reserve cities with an unofficial announcement pointing the way for all cities to present their claims for banks. Before the committee, consisting of Secretary of Treasury McAdoo and Secretary of Agriculture Houston, starts upon its tour of the country, it will advise clearing house associations and boards of trade in cities that are in the field for a reserve bank, when and where they can be heard. The committee will suggest that representatives of such organizations be supplied with all the facts each city wishes to produce in its favor.

Only 14 large cities in addition to Washington will be visited, but it was the understanding that any city and any community can be heard at some point on the trip around the country which has been mapped out.

Although details for the hearings have not been worked out, it is probable that the claim of Baltimore, Philadelphia and Washington will be heard here. Pittsburg will have an opportunity either in Cleveland or Cincinnati. Fort Worth, Tex., which is in the field, will be allowed to argue in Houston, and St. Paul and Minneapolis, in Chicago. Information the committee procures from these cities will be useful in determining the boundaries of the reserve districts.

It was said that neither cabinet officer on the organization committee had determined upon the number of reserve districts and cities. The trip to be taken is almost as much for this purpose as for actually locating the cities and defining the districts. Treasury officials praised the decision of the committee to work out the district limits and cities by public hearings. They said that already scores of telegrams had been received asking for a hearing in Washington, on the supposition that the work was to be done here. By holding hearings in many cities the committee hopes to avoid trouble and save time.

The committee took its first formal step when it made official announcement of the procedure to be followed by banks which wish to make legal application for membership in the new system. In accordance with this announcement, every bank desiring membership shall, within 60 days, through its board of directors, pass a resolution certifying its desire to enter the system. The resolution is to be signed by the cashier of the bank and forwarded to the committee. It provides for the full acceptance of the terms of the law and expresses the intention of the board to subscribe, on behalf of the bank, for stock in the proper federal bank reserve.

The filing of this form will be the first step of a bank toward membership. It will have nothing further to do toward coming into the system until the organization committee announces the geographical limits of its district and the city where its reserve bank is to be located. Within 30 days after such announcement a bany must take the second step that will bind it to the federal system. It must begin to put up its money for stock in the district federal reserve bank. Each bank entering must subscribe to stock in the federal bank equal to 6 per cent of its paid up capital and surplus, but not all of this sum is to be paid at once.

MARKED CHANGES IN CURRENCY SYSTEM

New Money Law Displaces 122-Year-Old Code.

IS FAR-REACHING IN SCOPE

Most Important Law Relating to Finance Passed in Many Years—Essential Features of the Measure Explained in Nontechnical Language.

Washington, Dec. 23.—The new bill affecting the currency, banking and finances of the country is one of the most far-reaching measures relating to finance that have been enacted in many years.

The magnitude of the subject, the diversity of interests affected and the length of the debates in both branches of congress has to follow the changes and grasp the essentials of this highly technical measure in its important bearings on money, finance, banking and the entire range of fiscal subjects, public and private, which it affects.

Summary of the Bill.

With a view, therefore, of presenting succinctly and in non-technical language an epitome of the salient features of the measure as finally framed, the following summary is given of the bill as a whole and of its principal details:

Generally speaking, the first steps to be taken to bring into operation the nation's new financial system will be through an organization committee consisting of the secretary of the treasury, secretary of agriculture and controller of the currency.

Banks have 60 days within which to file their applications for membership in the new system, and one year's time is allowed before the government will compel the dissolution of any national bank that refuses to join.

Will "Take Up the Slack."

The new law will make little direct change in the operation of the present national banks, except to allow them to loan a certain amount of their funds upon farm mortgages.

Its chief purpose is to add a new piece of machinery to the banking system that will "take up the slack" during the changing business conditions of each year; that will give the banks a place to quickly convert their assets into cash in time of need, and that will bring out new federal currency when it is needed, and retire it when money becomes "cheap."

Banks are now required to keep a certain percentage of their deposits as "reserves," part in cash in their own vaults and part of which may be redeposited in the banks of New York, Chicago, St. Louis and other designated cities.

In times of sudden financial demands, when banks have loaned up to the full limit of their resources, these reserves furnish little relief, because if they are paid out to meet demands the banks are left in a precarious condition.

Basic Principle of Law.

The basic principle of the new law is to get these reserve funds out into circulation when necessary without lessening the safety of any bank, and to provide a place to which local banks may rush in a crisis and get cash for the "prime commercial paper" they hold in their vaults.

This is to be accomplished through a chain of regional reserve banks, or "reservoirs of reserves," in which all banks shall deposit a stated part of the money they are required to hold as reserves.

Under the new system, when a financial flurry comes the banks can take commercial paper, such as notes, drafts and bills of exchange, to these "reservoirs," and secure the use of their own reserves, or, if necessary, even the reserve of other banks, by depositing this security.

The new regional banks will receive about one-half of the bank reserves of the country. They in turn will be permitted to loan back to the banks all but 35 per cent of these reserves, so that in case of emergency millions of cash can be brought out into circulation quickly.

The banks will have to pay for these loans, however, as individuals have to pay for a loan from any local bank, and this charge is expected to prevent the too free use of the reserves held by the regional banks.

New Paper Currency.

A new form of paper currency is also provided for, to come out in case of emergency, and which is expected to go back into the hands of the government when times are normal. These "treasury notes" will be printed by the government and issued through each regional reserve bank and will bear the guarantee both of the regional bank and of the government.

If the demand for currency in any section of the country exceeds the supply of circulating money a regional bank can secure this new money from the government and put it into circulation; but a gold reserve of 40 per cent and commercial paper equal to the full value of the note must be held as a reserve behind each note issued.

This provision is expected to be the instance that will drive the new money back into retirement when it is no longer needed.

Clearly Explained.

At the head of the system [illegible] a federal reserve board at Washington, appointed by the president, and to consist of the secretary of the treasury, the controller of the currency and five other members. Two of these shall be expert bankers, but none shall have banking affiliations or own bank stock during their service. This board will exercise general control over the entire system.

The temporary "organization committee," or the federal reserve board, will select from eight to twelve cities where regional reserve banks shall be located and will divide the entire country geographically with these cities as the centers of districts. All national banks in a district will be required to subscribe for the stock of the regional reserve bank in that district and to keep a portion of their reserves there.

Known as "Member Banks."

Local banks will be known as "member banks" because they will own the stock of the regional reserve bank of their district. Each member bank will be required to take capital stock of the regional reserve bank, equal to 6 per cent. of the member bank's capital and surplus. The capital of the regional bank will increase or decrease so that it always represents 6 per cent. of the combined capital and surplus of all the banks of the district that have joined the system.

National banks are compelled to join and state banks are permitted to if they bring their reserve requirements up to the standard set for national banks and submit to national examinations.

Public Can Buy Stock.

Public ownership of the stock of the regional reserve banks is permitted only in case enough banks do not join in any district to provide a capital stock of $4,000,000. In such event the public may purchase the stock in quantities limited to $25,000 for each individual, but the voting of this stock will be placed in the hands of government representatives on the board of directors of the regional reserve bank.

The regional reserve banks may do business only with their member banks, not with the public, except that certain "open market operations" such as the purchase and sale of gold, government, or municipal bonds, and certain forms of bills of exchange, are permitted. These banks will make their earnings from the loans made to member banks, and from the purchase and sale of bonds and foreign bills of exchange.

Must Put Up Cash.

Member banks will be compelled to put up in cash only one-half of their subscription to the capital of the new banks, the rest can be called for if needed by the regional bank. Dividends of 6 per cent. will be paid on this stock to the member banks, and the stock will be non-taxable.

After these dividends are paid one-half of the surplus net earnings goes to create a regional surplus fund, and when this has reached 40 per cent. of the regional bank's paid in capital these earnings are to go into the United States treasury. The balances of the net earnings are to be paid to the United States as a franchise tax.

With the machinery thus created for a new banking system that is supplementary to the commercial banks of the country, the law provides for a gradual transfer of part of the bank reserves to these new "reservoir" banks.

In order not to disturb business conditions, or to withdraw too suddenly the heavy deposits of country banks in the large cities, the law provides that three years may be consumed in shifting these balances and that, if necessary, part of the reserves transferred to the regional banks may consist of commercial paper.

The amount of reserve required from every bank under the new law, and the place where it must be kept, are as follows:

Country banks—Total reserve required, 12 per cent. of demand deposits and 5 per cent. of time deposits. Five-twelfths must be held in the bank's own vaults for two years and four-twelfths after that. For the first year two-twelfths must be kept in the regional bank, increasing one-twelfth each six months thereafter until it reaches five-twelfths of the total reserve. For three years the unallotted part of the reserve may be kept in the banks of reserve cities. After that time it must be kept either in the country banks and vaults or in the regional reserve bank.

Reserve city banks—Total reserve required, 15 per cent. of demand and 5 per cent. of time deposits. Six-fifteenths must be kept in the bank's vaults for the first two years and five-fifteenths after that time. Three-fifteenths must be kept in the regional reserve bank for the first year, increasing one-fifteenth every six months thereafter until it reaches six-fifteenths. For three years the unallotted portion of the reserve may be kept in other banks, in its own vaults, or in the regional bank; after that time in one of the latter two places.

Central reserve city banks (New York, Chicago and St. Louis)—Total reserve required, 18 per cent. of demand and 5 per cent. of time deposits. Seven-eighteenths in the regional reserve banks and the remaining five-eighteenths in either place the bank may choose.

Regional Reserve Banks.

These immense funds of reserves from "member banks," together with government moneys, will make up the deposits of the regional reserve banks. Each of these banks will be administered by a board of nine directors, six of whom will be elected by the banks, and three appointed by the federal reserve board.

The regional reserve banks may rediscount—that is, buy at a discount from its member banks—"prime commercial paper" when the member banks desire to convert these assets into money.

Character of Paper.

The exact terms of this important provision as to the character of paper upon which the regional reserve banks may furnish cash are as follows:

"Upon the indorsement of any of its member banks, with a waiver of demand notice and protest by such banks, and federal (regional) reserve bank may discount notes, drafts, and bills of exchange arising out of actual commercial transactions; that is, notes, drafts, and bills of exchange issued or drawn for agricultural, industrial or commercial purposes, or the proceeds of which have been used, or are to be used, for such purposes, the federal reserve board to have the right to determine or define the character of the paper thus eligible for discount, within the meaning of this act.

Eligible for Discount.

Nothing in this act contained shall be construed to prohibit such notes, drafts and bills of exchange, secured by staple agricultural products, or other goods, wares, or merchandise, from being eligible for such discount; but such definition shall not include notes, drafts, or bills covering merely investments or issued or drawn for the purpose of carrying or trading in stocks, bonds or other investment securities, except bonds and notes of the government of the United States.

"Notes, drafts and bills admitted to discount under the terms of the paragraph must have a maturity at the time of discount of not more than 90 days; provided, that notes, drafts and bills drawn or issued for agricultural purposes or based on live stock and having a maturity not exceeding six months may be discounted in an amount to be limited to a percentage of the capital of the federal (regional) reserve bank, to be ascertained and fixed by the federal reserve board."

The "Elastic" Element.

The new treasury notes, which are to furnish the "elastic" element in the currency system, and to add to the country's circulating money in time of need, will come into use in the following way:

The notes will be printed by the government, with a distinctive style for each regional reserve bank. One of the three directors named by the federal reserve board for each regional bank will be known as the "federal reserve agent" for that bank, and a supply of the notes will be placed in his custody.

Should a regional bank desire to pay out more money than its cash resources will permit, the law provides that it may put some of its rediscounted commercial paper into the hands of the "federal reserve agent," and received in return the new treasury notes.

For each note that it puts out into circulation, the regional reserve bank must set aside in gold 40 per cent. of the value of the note as a guarantee for its redemption. This gold, with the commercial paper held by the "federal reserve agent," is the protection behind the new money, but these notes will also be guaranteed by the government and may be redeemed in gold in the United States treasury.

Reserve Required.

Each regional bank, under the act, must keep a reserve of 35 per cent. of the deposits it has received, besides the 40 per cent. gold reserve behind the treasury notes it issues. If the gold reserve behind the notes falls below 40 per cent a heavy tax is imposed on the bank, which in turn adds the tax to the rate it charges member banks for rediscounts. This was designed to stop an over-expansion of currency. In times of sudden stress the federal reserve board can suspend these reserve provisions, in order to furnish quick relief to any community.

One regional bank cannot again pay out the notes of another, except under a heavy tax. These notes are expected to return to the regional banks and be withdrawn from circulation when the need of their use passes.

Take Up Bonds.

None of the existing forms of currency except the national bank notes will be disturbed by the new law. The United States bonds, now used to secure the issue of national bank notes, are to be taken up at the rate of $25,000,000 a year by the regional reserve banks and new treasury notes or short term three per cent. bonds will take their place. National bank currency is expected gradually to retire.

The federal reserve board will exercise final control over the entire operation of the system. It can compel one regional bank to loan to another in time of need; can suspend all restrictions surrounding the reserves which regional banks must hold, and can remove directors of regional reserve banks whenever it is believed necessary.

Banks in Control.

While the banks retain control of the boards of the regional reserve banks, their connection with the federal reserve board is only through an advisory council made up of one representative from each federal reserve district. This council will meet in Washington to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

STUMPS

The editor has talked with several farmers recently, who have cleared their lands of stumps during the winter. Some say that the wood will pay the cost. If this be true there is no reason why our fields should not all be put in readiness for the most improved implements. By the use of harrows and wheeled cultivators, one man can do the work of four, with one half the horse power, and do it better than it can be done by the old methods.

Mr. Guy, near Verbena, has a stump puller that has proved highly satisfactory, and others have found dynamite to offer an effective method of dealing with the stump problem. The mesquite lands of Texas are never cultivated until all the stumps have been cleared away, and they pay more for clearing than we pay for our lands, and yet they find it profitable because the lands are so much easier to till and so much more productive. The farmer who spends the winter loafing around among his stumps, waiting for rains or for plowing time to arrive, is going to find himself at a great disadvantage, when he competes with his stump-pulling neighbor in the markets. A new industrial era is upon us, and it promises to be an era of prosperity to the farmer especially, but there will always be a difference in the rewards of good farming and bad farming. There can never come a time in the history of the world when poor farming will not make a poor farmer. A short time ago I passed a farm-house which offered but few comforts to the miserable family which called it home, and yet there was enough thrown away in full sight of the road to improve the conditions. There was a hundred dollars lying in front of the house, soaked by rain, and as much more scattered around the back yard. I don't mean that it was in the shape of dollar bills. These would have been picked up and put under shelter. It was in the shape of tools, wagons, buggies, and plows, which are worth money, and are worth more than money, or we would not exchange money for them. It is utterly impossible for the country to legislate such a family as that into a state of plenty. If all the millions of all the millionaires were divided out among such people they would still be poor. You cannot pour in through the spigot more of prosperity than they can waste through the bung-hole of their inordinate profligacy. Where you can find one man in our country who is poor for the want of a fair chance, you can find many who are poor because they have wasted their chances, and sinned against opportunity.

FIND CAPT. KIDD'S TREASURE

Gypsy Enlightens Searcher—It Is in a Rocky Cave on Western Coast, He Tells.

Oregon City, Ore.—Declaring that he has received an inspiration from a gypsy fortune teller which will lead him to discover the famous treasure of Captain Kidd, which has been sought for centuries, I. M. Hoyer, a prominent Willamette resident, will start from this city shortly for the Oregon coast.

Hoyer states that several years ago while he and his wife were visiting at the Gulls they consulted a fortune teller, who told them that they would discover the wreck of a ship which is a combination of the most famous pirate ships of the world. Last June Hoyer and his wife visited the Gulls and found the spot which is exactly as described. Hoyer says that he has dreamed of the treasure for years and is confident that he will find it.

I HAVE just bought the entire stock of goods formerly owned by Mr. J. A. Jones of Prattville, Ala. They are new goods and I must sell them in a hurry, because I need the money. I bought at half factory cost. Dry goods of all kinds; sweaters for old and young; clothing of all kinds, crockery, hardware, barbed wire, fence wire, nails, $2.50 per keg; 3c per pound by retail. I have just bought a car of Texas Rust-proof Oats from Liberty, Texas. I sold a car of these oats last season and never had a single complaint. I have some young mules and horses for sale on time or cash.

Remember the above prices will only prevail as long as the goods last which I have on hand, for I cannot buy them at this price. I am selling them. The above sale is for cash only. If you are in the market for any kind of merchandise, come in and take a look before buying. Sale opens Saturday, January 3rd, at 9 o'clock, and the first five ladies who buy $10 worth I will give them a coffee urn; and the first five men who buy $20.00 worth will receive a hat. One thousand dollars worth of Craddock Terry Shoes just from factory, at less than wholesale prices.

ORGANIZATION OF UNDERWOOD'S CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

The Underwood campaign in Chilton county was launched this week by the election of a County Campaign Committee, of which State Senator Thos. A. Curry is Chairman, Dr. H W. Caffey, Vice-Chairman, and Victor J. Heard, Secretary. A chairman was also elected for every precinct in the county. At this meeting, representative citizens from every precinct were in attendance either in person or by proxy.

There were present friends of all the gubernatorial candidates, prohibitionist and local optionist, but an enthusiastic unit for Underwood. An open letter to the voters to the voters of the county, setting forth the policies to be adopted by the organization in presenting the claims of Mr. Underwood for his election to the Senate of the United States, will be issued at once by the Chairman.

Arrangements were made for the reception of Mr. Underwood on January 7th, at which time he will address the people of Chilton county, at the court house at eight o'clock p.m.

COUNTY FARMERS' CONGRESS

Very few Chilton county farmers have felt able to pay railroad fare, and hotel bills, in order to attend the State Farmers' Congress, which meets every year at Auburn, but when such a congress shall be held in this county, the attendance of farmers will be larger than at the State meeting, perhaps, and we shall get the benefit of the speeches and the experiments of the experts who are doing so much to increase production, and to improve rural conditions. Just at this time when the Department of Agriculture is giving special emphasis to the question of distribution, and to co-operative marketing, such a meeting would be helpful indeed. The community which gets the county high school will also get these annual farmers' congresses, as all the agricultural movements throughout the State center in the county high school, and are usually led by the teachers in the agricultural department of these schools, who are always experts in their lines of work. The place which gets the location should furnish wagon yards and camping facilities, so that the poorest families in the county could afford to attend these annual meetings of the farmers, and get the lessons in cooking, canning, sewing and home keeping, as well as those for preparing, marketing and production.

CLANTON PRESS

PUBLISHED IN THE INTEREST OF CHILTON COUNTY AND HER PEOPLE

VOL 1. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY JANUARY 2, 1914 NO. 40

VALEDICTORY

The editor has tendered to the stockholders his resignation to take effect with this issue of the paper. He leaves to accept a similar position with the Wetumpka Herald, which has a larger plant, and a wider circulation, and offers some better opportunities for public service. In connection with the work of the Press, he has formed some close friendships, and has become attached to the people of Chilton county generally, who have always spoken so kindly of his efforts, and have been so indulgent toward his shortcomings. So far as he knows, all his personal relations have been cordial, and he is very certain that the interest he has come to feel in the general wellbeing of the people shall be permanent, as it has been unselfish and genuine. He has advocated in these columns what he conceived to be right, and has tried to be both conscientious and conservative in all his editorial utterances. Some of his humor may have been mistaken for ascerbity, but he hardly thinks so. He regrets nothing that he has said during these short weeks of his connection with the Press, but he does now regret to say GOOD BYE.

FROM OUR MISSIONARY

At Kobe, Japan we visited a school that is owned and run by the Southern and Canadian Methodists. It is a very fine school. It has grammar school, college and theological departments;

About six hundred students were in attendance when we were there. Here these boys are trained for life with Christian ideals and some are trained to go out and preach the Gospel to their own people.

They teach English in the school like we teach French and German at home, except they do more of it. One of the most interesting classes we attended was a class in English where the boys were reading the lesson about Washington and the Corporal in Baldwin's Third Reader. It is surprising how many of the Japanese can speak English.

MOJI.

Moji is not such an important city commercially, but is important as a coaling station and as a fortified city.

It was at this place that our steamer took on coal. That is an interesting process in Japan. They take the coal from small boats that come up by the side of the large steamer and instead of putting it in by means of a steam shovel like they would in America, they take it in by hand in little baskets. Several fill up the baskets while others stand in a row and pass the baskets from one to the other. So after all, they get it on pretty fast. The anchor was hoisted Sunday morning, Nov. 2d, and we were all aboard for China.

IN SHANGHAI.

Early in the morning of Nov. 4th I rose and looked through the port hole of my cabin. Saw trees in the distance, and exclaimed with great joy, "China, China, I am actually looking on the land of China." I was in sight of land in the country I had been for a long time wanting to see, and where I expect to spend the rest of my life. It was a very queer feeling for me.

We were going up the [illegible] river, a great [illegible] hat. The river [illegible] reminds one of a [illegible] the waters are [illegible] color the water [illegible] mud from the [illegible]

Shanghai.

In Shanghai we were actually in China and yet it was not the real China, for Shanghai is largely a foreign city. There is a native city built after the old Chinese fashion, but by far the larger part of the city is modern. It is laid out and built up very like a modern city in America. Street cars, automobiles, electric lights, big stores and everything you would see in a modern Western city.

Being missionaries the places of most interest to us in this city was the work our missionaries are doing. We went first to our Baptist college and seminary. This is located a mile or two outside of the city limits on the bank of the river. The grounds and buildings would not remind one much of a college in America, but for China the plant is quite good. It consists of one large building for students' living rooms and class rooms, and homes for the missionaries who work there. We walked into one of the class rooms where chemistry was being taught and found that it was being tanght in English. So we did not feel that we were so far from home after all.

We next went to another place in the city where a boarding school for girls and one for boys is being conducted. At this place one of the missionaries gave a reception for all the Baptist missionaries in the city. This afforded us a good opportunity to meet all the Baptists.

That night there was a meeting of all the missionaries of the city—Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and all others. I was very much impressed with the fine and intelligent appearance of the crowd of missionaries. They met at the large Union church. All the denominations come together for a service in the church in English. There are not enough foreigners there for a church of each denomination so they go in together for this service, and have one fine church.

Shanghai is headquarters for most of the mission work of Central and North China, so all denominations are well represented there. One interesting place I visited was the Methodist Publishing House. At this place they publish all kinds of books in the Chinese language for use in their schools and Bibles and Testaments and every thing of the kind. So the place is general headquarters for the Methodist. The Presbyterians also have a large publishing plant there.

After two days of sightseeing it came time to separate from our party. Only Mrs. Williams and I were left on the steamer from our party. We had such a jolly time on our way over, and more than that some of the party were old school friends of ours, so it all made it a rather sad parting. But it was one of the ways of life and soon we were separated from our dear friends and on our [illegible] down the coast.

THE END OF THE JOURNEY.

On Sunday morning, November 9th, the "Tantin Maru" steamed into Hong Kong and our boat trip was over and we were safe and sound on this side of the world. There is no need to tell that we were glad to be at the end of our trip on the water. One of our friends from Canton met us there, but he did not come [illegible] strangers in a strange land.

We spent the morning with our friends and left early in the afternoon for Canton. Some of the readers of the Press may think of China as a home of savages, but with all their failings they have some good things that are good. From Hong Kong to Canton we came over a railroad kept up as well as the L. & N. and made as good time as the fastest trains there make. The trains are built on the English style and are not American. In fact, the railroad was built by some Englishmen for the Chinese government.

Hong Kong is an English colony. In reality the name of the town is Victoria on the island of Hong Kong, but the city is generally known as Hong Kong. The island is about nine miles long and four miles wide and is very hilly with many deep fertile valleys between the hills. The city stretches along the side facing the mainland for about four miles and rises up the hill from the shore. The houses are mostly white and arranged in rows one above the other as the hill gets higher. All of them have wide porches for every story and from the ship out in the harbor it gives the appearance of numerous pigeon holes or mail boxes. Altogether it is a very beautiful city.

This island was ceded to England in 1841. On the mainland across the strait England has acquired another tract of land. It was at first a small place, but every time there would be a little war between England and China, England would seize a little more land. Kowloon is the name of the town on this side of the strait. England has very strongly fortified her possessions here. Hong Kong is next to Gibralter in the strength of her fortifications. Gibralter is the strongest in the world.

Hong Kong is the greatest shipping port in the East. It is a free port, that is, no duty has to be paid on goods brought in from other countries. This makes it a very popular port for all shippers. Ships come there from all parts of the world. Ships going to America and ships from Europe make Hong Kong their headquarters in the East.

The trip from Hong Kong to Canton on the train was very interesting. We spent most of the time looking out the windows at the sights that continually came before us. Fields of rice, sugar cane and sweet potatoes, with now and then a grove of orange trees, could be seen from our window. And the villages were very interesting. The farmers do not live out on their farms like they do at home, but live in villages and go out from them to their farms.

About seven o'clock that night we reached the grounds of the Baptist Mission in Canton and [illegible]

W. O. PERSONS

FOR AGRICULTURAL COMMISSIONER.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Nov. 1, '13

Editor Times-Gazette,

Dear Sir:—The departure of the Barge "Tuscaloosa" with coal and iron for Mobile and New Orleans shows that the development of the mineral resources of Tuscaloosa, and the whole of North Alabama and is now able to take care of itself and "go it alone."

The next movement is to educate our farmers in South Alabama to "head off the boll weevil" by varying their crops to something besides cotton and to get the most out of the various sixty kinds of soils by thorough culture and by using intelligently the fertilizer adapted to each.

What Alabama needs now is a Commissioner of Agriculture who knows the composition of the soils and of the manufactured fertilizers.

Dr. A. A. Persons is now available for this office. He was raised on a farm from his 12th to 16th year, ploughing his own furrows. After four years at Auburn he was assistant professor at Auburn for three years. He was then Prof. of Agriculture in the University of Florida for six years. And then came to University of Alabama for a period of ten years as Prof. of Chemistry and Agriculture.

He taught his classes the nature of soils and of the different fertilizers, and he can extend his field of labors to the farmers.

Having all the qualifications of a practical farmer, a skilled Scientist and a business man, he will make an ideal Commissioner of Agriculture.

George Little,
Formerly Prof. of Geology and Agriculture, University of Georgia and University of Mississippi.

REV. J. TOY WILLIAMS

The editor has been interested in the life and personal character of this young man, because his success ought to fire the ambition and, awaken hope in the breast of every poor boy in Chilton. I have been in the county but a few weeks, and certainly shall not remain here always, and it would seem that the permanent citizens would feel as much interest in your boys as I do. Soon after my arrival here, I said in a public address that you could not find in the county a boy whose present condition, and whose future outlook were so gloomy, but that I could point you to another boy of equally unfavorable circumstances, [illegible] were very happy to be on the spot where our home will be for the rest of our lives on earth, if all things work out as we expect them.

At the time of that statement, I had in mind many characters of history, as well as many examples that have fallen under my own observation. The case of Mr. J. Toy Williams appeals to me more than others because he is well known, and universally liked. No family among us can boast of a clearer title to our sympathy on the ground of honest poverty. Unknown to them were the improved methods of farming by means of which our products are multiplied and prices increased. Their's was a desperate and determined scuffle with the forces of inhospitable nature to bring from her parsimonious grasp a few crumbs for her miserable children, pinched with hunger and shivering with cold. The fields had to be conquered from the forest with the woodman's axe. The plowing was of that dreadful "new-ground" type, which has been celebrated in the annals of the poor, if not in song and story. There were no riding cultivators, or two-horse mowers. It was the days of the Building Alabama

Much has been written and said concerning the work of development conducted by the L. & N. in the State of Alabama.

To present concrete evidence of our activity in this State, and our faith in it as an investment center, we have caused figures to be compiled showing to what extent expenditures have been made.

July 1st, 1907, to June 30th, 1913:

L. & N. for additions and betterments	$1,122,447.21
South and North, same purpose	4,888,140.16
Nashville & Decatur R. R., new line	221,992.06
Revision of line, Athens to Decatur	244,908.33
Tuscaloosa Mineral Railroad	770,614.66
Total expenditures for additions, betterments and new lines	$7,248,102.40

In addition to the items above enumerated, expenditures for numerous industrial spurs, new depots and other facilities have been made during this period.

Paid to Employees.

By Louisville & Nashville	$21,335,083.06
By South & North Alabama	14,450,762.88
Total paid employees	$35,785,845.94
Total for betterments	7,248,102.40
Total expended in Alabama	$43,033,948.34

The above figures are actual, absolute. These dollars represent more than any argument possibly could the effort put forth by the L. & N. to supply perfect freight and passenger facilities to shippers doing business in and out of Alabama.

Every dollar of this $43,033,948.34 was spent by the L. & N. within the State of Alabama, for the development of the Company's lines and the territory through which those lines operate; to afford lucrative employment to loyal employees engaged in that work of development, and in supplying transportation service.

The L. & N. was not, and is not, satisfied with merely having the best railroad system in Alabama. It was, and is, determined to make that best system better.

The people get equal benefit from this policy of development, and from these expenditures for betterments and salaries to employees. The betterments are permanent, while the salaries to employees are spent in Alabama.

We ask the people to think over these facts, and cooperate with us for a more extended development of the rich, natural resources of the State.

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

DIDN'T KNOW GREAT PLAYER

Boy Would Have Fallen Down and Worshiped If He Had Realized of Whom He Was Speaking.

Joe Tinker brought this story from the east with him. He declares Willie Keeler, now a scout for the Giants, told it on himself.

Keeler likes nothing better than to watch a bunch of boys playing a "sand lot game." While scouting in a western league town late in the season he chanced upon such a game, arriving just in time to see a lanky, scrubby-haired lad, who was umpire, give a decision. The little captain of the team fighting the decision rushed up to Keeler.

"Wasn't that a strike, mister?" he demanded.

"Sure it was," replied one of the greatest batters in baseball history.

"Aw," said the other kid captain, fiercely, "what does that old hoop know about baseball, anyway?"

SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR DARKENS YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. —Adv.

The Miller's Turkeys.

Condemning political grafters, John A. Hennessy said in New York:

"When I look at these sleek millionaires who never did a day's work in their lives, I think of the miller.

"The miller, on the way home from church one Christmas morning, met the village idiot and said, thinking to have a little sport:

"'Sam, I'm glad to see you. Now, Sam, look here, some folks say you know a lot, and some say you know nothing. Tell me, Sammy, my lad, what do you know?'

"'I know,' said the idiot, with a crafty smile, 'that the miller's turkeys are fat.'

"'Ha, ha, good,' said the miller, for the compliment pleased him. 'And now, Sam, my lad, tell me what you don't know.'

"Sam smiled more craftily still.

"'I don't know whose meal fattens 'em,' he said."

Evolution of Billiards.

The development of the billiard table has been interesting. In those far back days when billiards seems first to have become an indoor game, a billiard table was about the size of a big room. The average table was 30 feet long and 15 feet wide. The size was gradually but irregularly decreased, until the present standard seven table was introduced at a billiard tournament held in Sansom hall, Philadelphia, in 1861.

MUCH SWINDLING THROUGH MAILS

IS RECORD OF TWO YEARS

Many Schemes to Defraud the Public Are Operated Through the Mails.

Washington.—Loss of $120,000,000 in two years by the unsuspecting public through swindling operation carried on by use of the United States mails has stirred the postal authorities to a drastic campaign against fraudulent schemers. Wholesale use of government's right to deny the mailing privilege to persons or firms whose operations may be tainted with "get rich quick" and other false promises is the weapon to be employed.

An effort to stop this swindling by reliance upon criminal courts has proved ineffective, according to W. H. Lamar, assistant attorney general for the postoffice department, whose annual report was made public on the first.

"Criminal proceedings are necessarily slow," says the report, "and by means of appeals and other methods the execution of sentence are deferred for long periods, during which the concerns and individuals engaged in such fraudulent business continue to reap a harvest through their fraudulent enterprise. In some instances, the penalty being merely a fine, there was nothing to prevent the parties from continuing their schemes except fear of subsequent fines. These they could easily afford to pay in view of the large revenue derived from the business."

Mr. Lamar points out that a fraud order immediately cuts off the source of supply of funds upon which the scheme largely depends for its continuance and puts many prospective victims on their guard.

Postmaster throughout the country, the report says, daily ask rulings on various lottery schemes which cause the department no end of worry. Numerous concerns located abroad continue to mail their advertisements of foreign lotteries into the United States. Fraud orders were issued against 74 such firms during the year.

CIVIL COURTS UNDER TROOPS

West Virginia Authorities Arraigned for Conduct During Strike.

Washington.—A severe arraignment of the authorities who administered martial law in West Virginia from September, 1912, to June, 1913, when the Cabin Creek and Paint Creek coal mine strike troubles were in progress is contained in a subcommittee report made public by Senator Borah, member of the senate committee that conducted an investigation into all phases of the West Virginia disturbance.

The report does not bear the formal indorsement of the full senate committee, but was given out as the "statement of facts," prepared by Senator Borah as the member charged with preparing that section of the report bearing on courtmartial trials and alleged violations of law by military courts.

Senator Borah's statement holds that the military authorities, acting under the direction of the governor, superseded all constitutional courts in West Virginia, imposed sentences not authorized by any standing laws, and took over all the duties of the civil courts of the district; and that at the time such martial law was being enforced there was no evidence that the civil courts had been intimidated or that they would have failed to perform their duties faithfully.

Five Persons Killed in Collision.

Memphis, Tenn.—Five persons were killed and several injured when a train of freight cars struck a street car at a grade crossing here. The accident occurred in the southern outskirts of Memphis where a belt line and the street railway tracks cross. The street car was crushed and the bodies of the dead badly mangled.

Negro Is Lynched in Louisiana.

Shreveport, La.—Dave Lee, a negro, was taken from the Marion county jail at Jefferson, Texas, by a body of masked men and hanged to a bridge nearby. The mob compelled the jailer to give up his keys, quickly searched the prisoner, escorted him and quietly dispersed. Lee was charged with shooting and wounding Constable Matt Taylor, while resisting arrest. It is said there were not fifteen men in the lynching party. No arrests have been made.

No Outrage in Mexico Valley.

Mexico City.—The announcement that President Wilson's policy would cause bloodshed after June 1 has caused a decided slump in business and many Americans

John Skelton Williams of Richmond, Va., at present assistant secretary of the treasury, is the choice of Secretary McAdoo for controller of the currency.

BATTLE FOUGHT IN MEXICO

REBELS ATTACK THE TOWN, MANY ARE KILLED AND WOUNDED.

Red Cross Workers Find Two Hundred Corpses on the Battle Field.

Laredo, Texas.—With the dead variously estimated at from 150 to twice that number, and the wounded several hundred, both armies fought for possession of Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, the Revolutionists under Gen. Pablo Gonzales less than a mile from the town and the Federal forces entrenched within Nuevo Laredo.

The government commander at Nuevo Laredo admitted that at least fifty of his troops had been killed, including Captain Francillas. Official reports from the attacking forces place their dead at 100, including Capt. Ezliquel Parara. Red Cross workers who crossed to Nuevo Laredo during a lull in the firing reported that they found more than two hundred dead on the field.

Fighting, which began at daybreak, lulled at noon, but was reopened three hours later, by a machine gun squad who drew away from the main body of Revolutionists and poured a hail of bullets into the Federal stronghold. Undaunted by the bursting of shells, the gunner, said to be a Frenchman named Brien, trained his gun with deadly accuracy whenever a sufficient number of Federal targets appeared.

Many bullets fell on the American side of the river. Narrow escapes were numerous, but no deaths.

UNCLE SAM GUARDS HEALTH

Patrols From Ocean to Ocean to Keep Down Disease.

Washington.—Uncle Sam's health patrol is catching its breath on New Year's day in anticipation of the biggest year's work it ever has undertaken. The summary of the last 12 months of its work contains a record of heroic fights against disease, opposition to the invasion of foreign maladies and excursions into new fields of medical exploration which has had no equal in the history of the organization.

Experts working under the directions of Surgeon General Rupert Blue and Assistant Surgeon General Rucker have during the last year covered every nook and corner of the country, routing out unknown diseases, cleaning up infested places, teaching communities and individuals how to guard against disease and protecting the American public against diseases immigrants, itinerant "carriers" of disease, unhealthful surroundings, infected rats and polluted drinking water.

New York Tops London.

New York.—New York City leads London in population by 1,000,000, according to figures made public by Dr. W. H. Guilfoy, statistician of the board of health. He gives New York's population at 5,375,360, a total based on the city's tremendous growth since the last count was made. This comparison, however, does not include as part of London those many large suburban areas. While New York is gaining rapidly in population the city and county of London is retrogressing.

INCOME TAX FORMS SENT OUT TO PEOPLE

EVERY PERSON RECEIVING $3,000 OR MORE FROM U. S. INVESTMENTS LIABLE.

PENALTY PLACED ON FRAUD

Rate of 1 Per Cent. Imposed, and Additional Graduated Tax Placed Upon Incomes of $20,000.

Washington.—The form to be used and regulations to be followed by individuals in making returns of income subject to the new federal income tax were sent out by the treasury department. Every citizen of the United States, whether residing at home or abroad, every person residing in the United States and every nonresident alien who has an income from United States investments of $3,000 or more, must make return.

For the past year, 1913, specific exemptions will be $3,500 or $3,333.33 in the case of a married person, and in future years $3,000 and $4,000. Where the tax has been withheld on the part of the income at the source, or where part of the income comes as dividends upon stock of a corporation, taxable under the corporation tax section of the law, the regulations set forth that such income shall be deducted from the individual's total net income when computing the amount on which he is taxable.

The law imposes a tax of 1 per cent. and provides that individuals who have an income between $20,000 and $50,000 shall pay an additional tax of 1 per cent. on such amount; on all between $50,000 and $75,000, 2 per cent.; $75,000 to $100,000, 3 per cent.; $100,000 to $250,000, 4 per cent., $250,000 to $500,000, 5 per cent., and all over $500,000, 6 per cent. Return must be in the hands of the collector of internal revenue in the district where the payee lives or where he has his principal place of business, not later than March 1, failure to observe this limit to be punished with fines ranging from $20 to $1,000.

Refusal or neglect to file returns, except in case of sickness or absence, will result in an addition of 50 per cent. in the tax assessed. In case of false or fraudulent return, 100 per cent. would be added to the tax assessed, and any person required to make, render, sign, or verify such return, who makes a false or fraudulent statement, with intent to defeat or evade the tax, will be guilty of a misdemeanor, and subject to a fine of not more than $2,000, or imprisonment for one year, or both.

An extension of 30 days from March 1 in case of sickness or absence may be allowed by the proper collector, provided an application is made by the individual concerned. Returns must be accompanied by oath or affirmation.

Expenses for medical attendance, store accounts, family supplies, wages of domestic servants, cost of board, room or house rent shall not be deducted from gross income, and individuals who own their own residence cannot deduct the estimated value of the rent.

The farmer is required to include in his net income all money from produce and animals sold, for wool and hides of slaughtered animals, provided they are sold. He may deduct the sums actually paid for the animals sold or slaughtered during the year, but the value of animals raised shall not be deducted as expenses or loss. The farmer also may deduct money paid as expenses for producing farm products, live stock, etc., and for repairs for the current year. The cost of tools or machinery is deductible.

Persons receiving fees or emoluments for professional or other services must include all actual receipts for services during the year, together with all unpaid accounts, charges for service, or contingent income for the year, if good and collectible.

Debts contracted within a current year may be deducted from gross income, when found worthless, but not before legal proceedings have proved unavailing.

"Look pleasant," said the photographer. The sitter raised his eyes and gave a sickening smirk. "Your head just a little more to the left, please," suggested the voice from the black shroud. "No, don't move the eyes." Like a man suffering from a stiff neck or an Eiffel tower collar, the sitter tilted his head gingerly till it reached the desired angle, and he resembled a dying fish trying not to mind. "That's very nice, very nice indeed," said the photographer. "Stay just there while I make the exposure." He removed the cap as he spoke and counted out a minute and three-quarters. "Thank you," he observed. "You can get up. I'm afraid you have been sitting on your hat." "My hat!" roared the sitter, angrily, regarding the flattened felt. "Why the dickens didn't you tell me I was sitting on my hat?" "My dear sir," protested the photographer, blandly, "that would have spoiled your expression."

Pleas for Patriotism.

SELF DELUSION.

Many People Deceived by Coffee.

We like to defend our indulgencies and habits even though we may be convinced of their actual harmfulness.

A man can convince himself that whiskey is good for him on a cold morning, or beer on a hot summer day—when he wants the whiskey or beer.

It's the same with coffee. Thousands of people suffer headache and nervousness year after year but try to persuade themselves the cause is not coffee—because they like coffee.

"While yet a child I commenced using coffee and continued it," writes a Wis. man, "until I was a regular coffee fiend. I drank it every morning and in consequence had a blinding headache nearly every afternoon.

"My folks thought it was coffee that ailed me, but I liked it and would not quit it was the cause of my trouble, so I stuck to coffee and the headaches stuck to me.

"Finally, the folks stopped buying coffee and brought home some Postum. They made it right (directions on pkg.) and told me to use that instead of coffee. I would make with my cook and during that first week on Postum my old affliction did not bother me once. From that day to this we have used nothing but Postum in place of coffee—headaches are a thing of the past, and the family is in fine health." Individual Clock.

A gentleman in a club in Grand Rapids, Mich., formed the hopeless and harmless habit of taking too much to drink—alcoholically speaking—before he went home every evening, says the Popular Magazine.

"How does he know what time to go home?" asked a stranger in the club one night.

"It's this way," exclaimed a member. "He goes to the head of that long flight of stairs leading to the street. If he falls down them, he knows it's time to go home."

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

DIDN'T KNOW GREAT PLAYER

Boy Would Have Fallen Down and Worshiped If He Had Realized of Whom He Was Speaking.

Joe Tinker brought this story from the east with him. He declares Willie Keeler, now a scout for the Giants, told it on himself.

Keeler likes nothing better than to watch a bunch of boys playing a "sand lot game." While scouting in a western league town late in the season he chanced upon such a game, arriving just in time to see a lanky, scrubby-haired lad, who was umpire, give a decision. The little captain of the team fighting the decision rushed up to Keeler.

"Wasn't that a strike, mister?" he demanded.

"Sure it was," replied one of the greatest batters in baseball history.

"Aw," said the other kid captain, fiercely, "what does that old hoop know about baseball, anyway?"

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. —Adv.

The Miller's Turkeys.

Condemning political grafters, John A. Hennessy said in New York:

"When I look at these sleek millionaires who never did a day's work in their lives, I think of the miller.

"The miller, on the way home from church one Christmas morning, met the village idiot, and said, thinking to have a little sport:

"'Sam, I'm glad to see you. Now, Sam, look here, some folks say you know a lot, and some say you knew nothing. Tell me, Sammy, my lad, what do you know?'

"'I know,' said the idiot, with a crafty smile, 'that the miller's turkeys are fat.'

"Ha, ha, good, said the miller, for the compliment pleased him. 'And now, Sam, my lad, tell me what you don't know.'

"Sam smiled more craftily still.

"'I don't know whose meat fattens you,' he said."

Evolution of Billiards.

The development of the billiard table has been interesting. In those far back days when billiards seem first to have become an indoor game, a billiard table was about the size of a big room. The average table was 30 feet long and 15 feet wide. The size was gradually and irregularly decreased, until the present standard size table was introduced at a billiard tournament held in Sansom hall, Philadelphia, in 1364.

IS RECORD OF TWO YEARS

Washington.—Loss of $120,000,000 in two years by the unsuspecting public through swindling operation carried on by use of the United States mails has stirred the postal authorities to a drastic campaign against fraudulent schemers. Wholesale use of government's right to deny the mailing privilege to persons or firms whose operations may be tainted with "get rich quick" and other false promises is the weapon to be employed.

An effort to stop this swindling by reliance upon criminal courts has proved ineffective, according to W. H. Lamar, assistant attorney general for the postoffice department, whose annual report was made public on the first.

"Criminal proceedings are necessarily slow," says the report, "and by means of appeals and other methods the execution of sentence are deferred for long periods, during which the concerns and individuals engaged in such fraudulent business continue to reap a harvest through their fraudulent enterprise. In some instances, the penalty being merely a fine, there was nothing to prevent the parties from continuing their schemes except fear of subsequent fines. These they could easily afford to pay in view of the large revenue derived from the business."

Mr. Lamar points out that a fraud order immediately cuts off the source of supply of funds upon which the scheme largely depends for its continuance and puts many prospective victims on their guard.

Postmaster throughout the country, the report says, daily ask rulings on various lottery schemes which cause the department no end of worry. Numerous concerns located abroad continue to mail their advertisements of foreign lotteries into the United States. Fraud orders were issued against 74 such firms during the year.

CIVIL COURTS UNDER TROOPS

West Virginia Authorities Arraigned for Conduct During Strike.

Washington.—A severe arraignment of the authorities who administered martial law in West Virginia from September, 1912, to June, 1913, when the Cabin Creek and Paint Creek coal mine strike troubles were in progress is contained in a subcommittee report made public by Senator Borah, member of the senate committee that conducted an investigation into all phases of the West Virginia disturbance.

The report does not bear the formal indorsement of the full senate committee, but was given out as the "statement of facts," prepared by Senator Borah as the member charged with preparing that section of the report bearing on courtmartial trials and alleged violations of law by military courts.

Senator Borah's statement holds that the military authorities, acting under the direction of the governor, superseded all constitutional courts in West Virginia, imposed sentences not authorized by any standing laws, and took over all the duties of the civil courts of the district; and that at the time such martial law was being enforced there was no evidence that the civil courts had been intimidated or that they would have failed to perform their duties faithfully.

Laredo, Texas.—With the dead variously estimated at from 150 to twice that number, and the wounded several hundred, both armies fought for possession of Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, the Revolutionists under Gen. Pablo Gonzales less than a mile from the town and the Federal forces entrenched within Nuevo Laredo.

The government commander at Nuevo Laredo admitted that at least fifty of his troops had been killed, including Captain Francillas. Official reports from the attacking forces place their dead at 100, including Capt. Ezequel Parars. Red Cross workers who crossed to Nuevo Laredo during a lull in the firing reported that they found more than two hundred dead on the field.

HOW TO BUILD A SILO

Care Should Be Exercised That Diameter Is Correct.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In determining the size of a stave silo, the first thing to be considered is the diameter, and this depends upon the number of cattle to be fed. When the diameter of a silo is too great the silage is not fed off rapidly enough to prevent some of it from spoiling. This is particularly true when silage is fed in summer. Care should therefore be taken that the diameter of the silo is not too great for the number of cows to be fed from it.

The foregoing advice is given by experts of the United States department of agriculture, on how to build a stave silo. From 30 to 40 pounds of silage per cow per day should be provided for average dairy cows during the time when no other green feed is available. After the diameter of a silo has been determined the next consideration is the number of tons of silage that will be needed, and this depends on the length of the silage feeding season. The silo should be located if possible so as to open into the feed room.

To lay out the foundation for the silo, drive a stake in the ground in the center of the proposed silo. Saw off this stake at the height desired for the foundation wall, which should be at least one foot above the ground on the high side if the ground is sloping. One end of a straight 2x4 inch scantling, a little longer than is necessary to reach from the center of the silo to the outside of the foundation wall should be nailed on top of the stake with a 40-penny spike. The thickness of the wall should vary from 10 to 18 inches, depending upon the size of the silo, the material of the foundation, and the ground on which it is located. The inside of the foundation should be at least two inches nearer to the center of the silo than the inside of the staves. The material of the foundation should be of stone, brick or concrete.

If the earth in the bottom of the silo is firm and comparatively dry, no provision need be made for drainage, and a concrete floor is unnecessary. Still, such a floor makes the silo easier to clean and makes it impossible for rats to burrow underneath the foundation wall and gain access to the silage.

The hoops should be made of three-fourths, five-eighths and one-half inch rods, in sections from 10 to 14 feet in length. The ends of these rods should be threaded for six inches so that they may be joined together by means of lugs. Two hoops should be placed below the first door, two between doors all the way up, and two above the top door, if this space is more than two feet; if less than two feet, one will be sufficient. Three or four hoops should at first be put on at the bottom and tightened up. Planks can then be thrown across the top of the silo to serve as a scaffold, so that the top hoop may be put around the silo loosely, within reach of the ground, after which they are pushed up to the proper position with slats, and made fast by stapling them to the silo from a ladder.

It is sometimes very difficult to get lugs for the hoops. In such cases four by six inch timbers may be put in instead of ordinary staves at the three or four points where the hoops will join. These timbers should be placed with the four-inch face flush with the staves on the inside and they will extend four inches beyond the wall on the outside. Through the outside projections holes should be bored to receive the hoops and the ends may be fastened with nuts. Large iron washers should be used under the nuts.

Truck Soils of Atlantic Coast Region.

The great winter garden which supplies the cities of the northeastern states with the fresh vegetables demanded for consumption during the latter months of winter and those of early spring stretches in a narrow belt along the Atlantic coast from the vicinity of Savannah, Ga., to the southern portion of New Jersey, according to the department of agriculture.

This particular belt of territory, favorably situated with respect to intensive vegetable production, is the result of the concurrent existence of a number of favoring factors. In the first place, the climatic conditions within this belt render its successive portions from south to north earlier in the date of maturity for the different crops than any other portions in the eastern states which are located in the same latitudes. This arises from the fact that the land over the region lies at low altitudes, from Savannah, Ga., to Cumberland, N. J., along the Atlantic coast; there are no mountains. The coastal land rises gradually from sea level with gentle slopes, the vast coastal plain being for the most part nearly level, and there is throughout what is known as the "sandy" section.

The presence of [illegible] chiefly of sandy [illegible] permeability [illegible] this region is [illegible] soils [illegible] lower [illegible]

While it is impossible to give an accurate statement of the acreage available for the production of winter and spring vegetables in the Atlantic coast region, it may be stated that the areas now utilized for these purposes constitute only a fraction of one per cent of the total land areas which may ultimately be made available.

The first requirement for the development of these lands will be a market demand which shall justify the increased production, through paying a price for the production commensurate with the expenditures and risks undertaken by the producer. This may be attained through the natural increase in the consuming population and, to a more marked degree, through the extension of the markets to hundreds of thousands of city dwellers who never taste the fresh vegetable products at the period of the year when these crops are placed upon the market. Extensive community and private drainage works must be undertaken before some of the best soils for trucking are rendered available in the coastal regions.

Potatoes in Germany take a more important place than they do in this country. Though the country is much smaller than the United States, the area planted is 8,165,000 acres, as compared with 8,568,000 acres in here. The average total yield is 1,653,403,000 bushels, or 202.5 bushels per acre, as compared with an average annual American yield of 343,587,000 bushels. If the states of Maine, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota alone were to plant 12.5 per cent. of their arable land in potatoes, as Germany does, and secure an equivalent yield, the produce would amount to 1,553,944,000 bushels, four and one-half times our present production from the entire country.

At the present rate of consumption of potatoes in the United States, which is considerably less than three bushels per capita, the needs of the entire country could be supplied from any one of the states of New York, Michigan, Wisconsin or Minnesota and leave a surplus unused, whereas all the states combined have several times failed to produce enough potatoes to supply the domestic consumption, and in such years large quantities of potatoes have been imported from foreign countries.

Such an immense production of potatoes as is found in Germany is manifestly not required to feed the people. To a matter of fact, only 23 per cent. of the crop is used for human food, while 40 per cent. is fed direct to farm animals and 12 per cent. is set aside for seed purposes. The Germans plant over twice as many seed potatoes per acre as is the custom here, or more than 24 bushels. An additional portion of the surplus, in round numbers, 100,000,000 bushels, a little less than six per cent. of the total crop, is made into alcohol and used for industrial purposes, and to replace petroleum products. Over 50,000,000 bushels, or about four per cent., are made each year into starch, dextrose, and related products. This accounts for about all except ten per cent. of the German crop, which it is estimated is lost through decay.

WINTERING THE LIVE STOCK

Cattle Owners Have Faith That Prices Are to Rule High for Some Time—Numbers Decreasing.

One of our neighbors put up a silo this fall and filled it with what the dry weather left of his corn. He has bargained to feed a bunch of 400 head of cattle for six months, says a writer in the Farmers' Mail and Breeze. For this he receives $1,500, $2.50 a head a month. This seems a good price compared with what we used to get in former years. We wintered cattle, years ago, for $5 a head for the winter, regardless of whether it was a long or short winter. We have heard of other cattle being taken at $1.25 a head a month for the winter and as high as $2.75 being paid for some.

Time will tell whether cattle will pay out when wintered at such prices. It will mean the cattle will have to sell for $15 more a head next spring if they are to cover the cost of wintering alone. In addition there is the danger of loss and the interest on the value of the cattle, which will be no small amount. But cattle owners have faith that prices are to rule very high for some time to come and probably they are right. Cattle are decreasing in number every year. Missouri alone has almost 1,000,000 head less than 20 years ago and in that time its population has increased 700,000.

Best Fortune Teller.

The quest of noblemen of wealth in America has been talked about for decades; but few, if any, can rival Baron Assebach in being witty in a practical way.

Miss de Millyuns, his prospective wife, was entertaining the baron one evening, and apropos of lovers' nothingness she asked:

Orderly Service.

A Methodist parson, called to preach at an out-of-the-way town in California was informed, before entering the pulpit, that he must be careful, as many of the assembled congregation were "roughs," and would not hesitate to pull him from the pulpit if his remarks did not suit them.

The minister made no reply, but having reached the sacred desk, he took from his pocket two revolvers, and placing one on each side of the Bible, gave a sharp glance around the room and said: "Let us pray."

ECZEMA ITCHED AND BURNED

R. F. D. No. 3, Maryville, Tenn.—"My baby, when three months old, took eczema on his face and head. His head and one side of his face were almost in a solid sore. It would itch and burn so badly that he could not rest at all and his hair just all fell out at once till his head was perfectly bald. He could not sleep at night and was very cross.

"I tried remedies without any relief at all; he only got worse all the time until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. He had great relief the first application. He was soon cured and his hair began to grow back and now he has just beautiful fine hair and has no sign of eczema." (Signed) Mrs. H. P. Claborn, Jan. 26, 1912.

"'Yes, sir,' said the clerk. 'And would you prefer, sir, a sea view or a mountain view—a view of the Mediterranean, or a view of the Maritime Alps?'

"'Oh, I don't care nothin' about that,' said Cashley. 'The dearest room in the house, young feller—that's what I want.'"

AUBURN-MADE FARMERS

The editor has had occasion very recently to trace the careers of our boys who have been educated at Auburn, and is very glad to find that a very large percentage of those who have graduated in the Agricultural department are actually engaged in farming, and almost without exception they are the most successful and the most prosperous farmers in their respective communities. The reason why others are not actual farmers is that the schools and colleges of the country have laid hands upon them, and pressed them into the service of teaching agriculture and kindred subjects. The practical benefits to the individual, and to society at large, from the work done by the agricultural schools and colleges, have been so great, and so manifest, that those in charge of the work have found it more and more difficult to meet the ever-increasing demand for men who are prepared to discharge its duties. Graduates from our agricultural colleges furnished an ideal supply just in time to meet this demand, and hence the great advance which we have seen in farm life and farm methods. This state of affairs has created an atmosphere of hope and cheer which was unknown among the rural population a few years ago. One of the most extensive, and, at the same time, one of the most promising enterprises now in progress, is the work being done by our practical and scientific Auburn graduates who are engaged as farm demonstrators. Their leadership among the rural population is characterized by a wisdom and a knowledge of details which bring prosperity to the farms and the homes under their guidance. As "wisdom is justified of her children," so Auburn is vindicated by the actual success of the men she has sent out to the farms of Alabama, and by their pre-eminent ability to cope with the difficulties which confront our agricultural population. A large—a very large—number of her students have not been financially able to remain in her halls long enough to graduate. They have only remained long enough to learn the fundamentals of scientific agriculture, and to catch the spirit of progress and enterprise, and then they have returned to their farm homes to revolutionize its old antiquated methods, and to cover with the rainbow of hope and happiness, the dark clouds of dread and misfortune which have hovered so long above them. What they learned at Auburn was a beginning, and the end is not yet. They have not only continued to learn, but they have begun to teach among their neighbors and fellow-citizens. When Auburn blessed them she made them a blessing to others, and every graduate that visited by the presence of the Auburn boys and girls [illegible]

DISASTROUS FIRE AT THORSBY

Ten stores, one dwelling and a livery stable were destroyed by fire in Thorsby Monday night. The blaze originated in the store of Mr. Cox and spread rapidly as there were no water-works to furnish means of extinguishing the flames The man who can sleep soundly in a town that has no water-works may think he has an easy conscience, but it is really a paralyzed brain that he has.

AUBURN-MADE FARMERS

The editor has had occasion very recently to trace the careers of our boys who have been educated at Auburn, and is very glad to find that a very large percentage of those who have graduated in the Agricultural department are actually engaged in farming, and almost without exception they are the most successful and the most prosperous farmers in their respective communities. The reason why others are not actual farmers is that the schools and colleges of the country have laid hands upon them, and pressed them into the service of teaching agriculture and kindred subjects. The practical benefits to the individual, and to society at large, from the work done by the agricultural schools and colleges, have been so great, and so manifest, that those in charge of the work have found it more and more difficult to meet the ever-increasing demand for men who are prepared to discharge its duties. Graduates from our agricultural colleges furnished an ideal supply just in time to meet this demand, and hence the great advance which we have seen in farm life and farm methods. This state of affairs has created an atmosphere of hope and cheer which was unknown among the rural population a few years ago. One of the most extensive, and, at the same time, one of the most promising enterprises now in progress, is the work being done by our practical and scientific Auburn graduates who are engaged as farm demonstrators. Their leadership among the rural population is characterized by a wisdom and a knowledge of details which bring prosperity to the farms and the homes under their guidance. As "wisdom is justified of her children," so Auburn is vindicated by the actual success of the men she has sent out to the farms of Alabama, and by their pre-eminent ability to cope with the difficulties which confront our agricultural population. A large—a very large—number of her students have not been financially able to remain in her halls long enough to graduate. They have only remained long enough to learn the fundamentals of scientific agriculture, and to catch the spirit of progress and enterprise, and then they have returned to their farm homes to revolutionize its old antiquated methods, and to cover with the rainbow of hope and happiness, the dark clouds of dread and misfortune which have hovered so long above them. What they learned at Auburn was a revelation, and the end is not yet. They have only continued to learn,

MOST ANCIENT DRAWING OF HUMAN FACE

THE ACKNOWLEDGED BEST MADE MAN

A FLEETING GLIMPSE INTO THE ADVANCED THEORY OF EVOLUTION

PERSONS CONSIDERED SKILLED SCHOOL OF NEW AND INCREDIBLE KIND OF DRAWING

WHAT is declared by its discoverers to be the oldest known depiction of a human being has just been unearthed in France. It is the rude figure of a man engraved on a prehistoric monster's bone. According to those who dug it up it is at least 5,000 years old, dating back to the so-called Aurignacian age.

If they are right in their contentions and the strange drawing was actually made by an artist in his prehistoric "studio," it materially strengthens the theory that our ancestors, instead of possessing the ape-like skulls of the type found at Neanderthal, Spy, and La Chappelle-aux-Saints, were creatures with skulls resembling that found at Piltdown, England, last year, declared by some to have had a brain development greater than that of present-day man.

This remarkable discovery was made on October 3 last in the cave of La Colombiere, beside the River Ain, in southern France, by Dr. Lucien Mayet, professor of human palaeontology at the University of Lyon, and M. Jean Pissot of Poncin, a town close to the cave. The official report of the great find was read to the Paris Academy of Sciences by M. Douville and summarized at length in L'Illustration.

The cave of La Colombiere is situated on the right bank of the Ain, about 20 meters above the present level of that river, between Poncin and Neuville-sur-Ain. As long ago as 1875 a scientist, Mr. Moyret, called attention to it as having been inhabited in prehistoric times. Ever since numerous investigators have visited it. They conducted their investigations so assiduously that the level of the cave formed during the Neolithic age—comparatively recent in the eyes of geologists and anthropologists—was dug away, also the contiguous level of the earlier Magdalenian age. This lowered the level of the cave by 75 centimeters and brought to light rich fields of Neolithic and Magdalenian relics.

But the richest find of all was yet to come. Beginning last May, the latest investigators began to dig deeper into the soil forming the floor of the cave, and after they had penetrated about one meter further down they found a stratum of fine gravel, showing unmistakable signs of dating from the still earlier Aurignacian age. This proved to be a veritable treasure trove.

In it were uncovered the "studio" of a prehistoric artist, containing a number of different sorts of engraver's tools, pieces of mammoth, rhinoceros, and reindeer bones, pieces of stone ready for engraving, and stones and bones with engravings already cut into them.

One of the latter represents a horse of a remarkably finished type; another shows a bison, still another a wild sheep. But the prize of the whole collection, the prize which, it is confidently expected, will make this an epoch-making find in the annals of anthropology, is the piece of mammoth's bone on which is cut the figure of a human being. This, in the words of those who have unearthed it, "is the first document representing, in engraved form, the man of the Middle Quaternary age, the minimum age of which is 15,000 years."

As those who delve into the remote history of our race are aware, picturings of himself by prehistoric man are extremely rare. He delighted in drawing and carving the strange beasts which he saw about him—bisons, reindeer, mammoth, horses and the like—but when it came to giving us an idea of what he looked like himself he was strangely coy.

Especially rare are depictions of man in the form of drawings or engravings. Rude carvings of human beings, dating far beyond the dawn of history, have been dug up at Willendorf, in Austria; at Brassempouy, the Lamanel cave, and the grottoes of Grimaldi in France and other places. Owing to this paucity of first-hand information reconstructions of prehistoric man from the various skulls and bones found at different times have been largely a matter of conjecture. It has been a case of every ape guessing for himself, legion. One group of savants, endeavoring to build up our remote ancestor from the fragments found in the Neanderthal, near Duesseldorf, Germany; at Spy, in Belgium; and at La Chapelle-aux-Saints, in France, have thought to strengthen materially strengthening the Darwinian theory that man is descended from the ape group, basing its deductions on the [illegible] erected from the Piltdown skull, and purporting to prove that prehistoric man from [illegible] descended, never became [illegible] possessors of the Neanderthal [illegible] aux-Saints skulls, and that [illegible] branch of the race which [illegible] until it finally became [illegible] superior branch kept [illegible] we know him was [illegible] This latter theory, [illegible] rovers of the prehistoric [illegible] La Colombiere, with [illegible] what they have [illegible] ple, the best known [illegible] a similar sort—notably [illegible] man found at Aurignac [illegible] as well as the sketches [illegible] ched in the cave of [illegible] the Magdalenian age [illegible] erally accepted by [illegible] now supposed to [illegible] thing dating from the [illegible] Granting, then, that [illegible] Colombiere really [illegible] and the reason [illegible] conclusive [illegible] to them [illegible] recent date [illegible] cave artist [illegible] ately to [illegible] the "

PREHISTORIC DRAWINGS FOUND (A) BY THE GROTTY DIG VIES, IN THE GIRONDE; (B) IN THE FONT-DE-GAUME CAVE, AT LES EYZIES, DORDOGNE; AND (C) THE DRAWING JUST DISCOVERED IN THE COLOMBIERES GROTTO

OTHER FACE ENGRAVED ON PART OF THE SHOULDER-BLADE OF PERHAPS OF A MAMMOTH DISCOVERED ON THE AURIGNACIAN PERIOD

Aurignacian age, bears a most striking resemblance to him of the Magdalenian age, supposedly a much more developed individual.

Compare this man of La Colombiere with the middle one of the three human faces from the cave of Marsoulas, shown on this page. He has the same respectable skull development, much more like that of the possessor of the Piltdown skull than that of the ape-like Neanderthal man and his congeners. The nose, it will also be noted, is very similar to that of the Marsoulas man, likewise the heavy chin.

So much for the contentions of the Frenchmen who have made this remarkable find. Backed up though they are by good arguments, it is not likely that they will be swallowed without a struggle. On the contrary, they will probably be the cause of still another controversy to add to the already stormy annals of anthropology. For there is undoubtedly another side to the question.

First, as to the pictures just found at La Colombiere. In spite of the fact that those similar to them—including the human faces of the cave of Marsoulas—are generally ascribed by Frenchmen not to the Aurignacian but to the later Magdalenian age, others think them productions of Aurignacian artists. If this latter theory is accepted, the "man" of La Colombiere is simply one more to add to the motley gallery of Aurignacian depictions of human beings. Even if he proves to be that and nothing more, he will be accounted a precious find, but naturally his price will not be so enormous as those who have found him and those who share their views would have us believe.

Second, as to whether the "man" of La Colombiere portrays that we are descended from the Neanderthal-Spy-La Chapelle-aux-Saints race or the race represented by him of the Piltdown skull.

These, too, matters are by no means as cut and dried as they look to the Gallic Frenchmen. Plenty of learned men who have studied the subject of the descent of man are of the opinion that man may be descended from neither of these interesting groups they contend that both of these apes may have become extinct and that mankind sprang, possibly, from some race which appeared later.

The latest news from abroad shows that the man of La Colombiere has already set learned tongues to wagging against each other. Already Messrs. Mayet and Pissot, the savants who found him, have a hornet's nest about their ears. In London Dr. A. Keith Anderson, writing in the Illustrated London News, has placed Mayet's discovery as a blow to the belief that by all the evidence the earliest picture of a man [illegible] he will have to sit back and wait [illegible] before [illegible] system.

[illegible] is very [illegible] the [illegible] that it is unique, but in the fact that it is not unique. It is a matter of the deepest interest to find in these three drawings certain identical conventions. The general shape of the head, nose, and chin is the same in all of them. The way in which the mouth is placed in the same in the two which show the mouth, and what our discoverers speak of as the "indefinable expression of the eye" is produced by identical lines in all three engravings.

All of this suggests several things, among which we may mention that the Colombiere drawing can hardly be taken to represent any particular individual. It is hardly possible that it was intended as a realistic production. It may be a rude outline which each child would make, or it may be a deliberate convention with a meaning of which we are ignorant. If the drawing from the Font-de-Gaume cave was made by the artist who drew the figures of bison and other animals on the rock walls of that cavern, then there is something curious and mysterious in the fact that the drawings of the wild animals are wonderfully realistic, while the one intended to represent a human face is vastly inferior to the others.

We have probably not yet gotten informed prehistoric man's ideas and conventions in all their work. Another proof that the Colombiere engraving cannot be intended as a realistic drawing is sent in the photograph and outline drawing of the skull of the Cro-Magnon race, said to be generally accepted as the typical Aurignacian skull. But by no possible arrangement of the soft parts around that Aurignacian skull could we produce a representation of a face resembling any of the three fragmentary prehistoric drawings shown above.

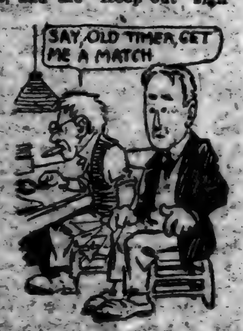
WASHINGTON GOSSIP

His Oratory Is Loud Though State Is Little

WASHINGTON.—It is not often that the little state of Delaware is heard from in the House of representatives, but when she does arise to address the chair she bellows like a bull. It was worth while listening to Representative Brockson of that state when he took considerably more than an hour in his effort to divert the house of the opinion that the whipping posts of Delaware are inhuman, brutal, unconstitutional, and relics of a medieval age when pillories and alleged witchcraft walked hand in hand.

Mr. Brockson received great applause for his oratory, which is just as loud as that of Representative Sisson, who comes from a much larger state, Mississippi, and the applause was not limited to the members of the house. Over in the southwest corner of the gallery sat a man who applauded with his two hands just as loud as any of members. In fact, when Mr. Brockson made a particularly strong point this well-wisher clapped his palms so vigorously that a doorkeeper had to admonish him that applause in the galleries is not allowed. In the midst of a hot debate one of the numerous Smiths of congress arose.

"According to the gentlemen's statement," he said, "there are six cases pending in Delaware. If that is a fact does it not indicate that corporal punishment has not stopped these brutal crimes? In a little state like Delaware you have six cases at the present moment in which whipping is to be administered."



"What state is the gentleman from?" asked Delaware's sole representative.

"New York," replied Representative Smith, and the contrast between the two states made the house laugh with great glee.

However, Representative Brockson came right back at him. He told Buffalo Smith that the last time four New York crooks came to Delaware they were given the whipping-post treatment—and never came back.

Didn't Know Hearst, but Was Glad to Meet Him

PARKER ANDERSON of North Carolina mingles with the great of the nation with exactly the same nonchalance as he uses in lighting a cigar. Parker knows cabinet officers by their first names, and the "Keep out" sign is always automatically reversed to "Welcome" when Parker strolls into the office of a senator or representative. It was only a few days ago that he paid a call upon Commissioner of Internal Revenue Osborn. The office was crowded with folks big and little, important and unimportant, job hunters and patronage grabbers, and a clerk was keeping them all back in line until the commissioner had signed his mail.

"I would like to see my friend Osborn right away," announced Anderson in a smooth voice.

"No one gets in that door ahead of me!" announced a shrill female who would have been at home brandishing a war ax. "I got here first."

"Pardon me, madam," said Anderson, bowing, as an attendant deferentially opened the door for him to pass within.

Well, there are a lot of fellows like that, and a lot of good they can do if they want to. You see, Anderson is a newspaper man. He got into the business from the telegraph end.

They tell a story of him in his telegraph days, which may throw some light on the way the great men of the nation ask him to set down and listen to stories. Once, when he was an operator here in Washington, some fellow made an attack upon William Randolph Hearst.

The telegraph company sent Anderson over to the American bureau to handle the key. His fingers spat lightning for an hour. During that time a long person came out and sat by him. Anderson's cigar went out.

"Say, old timer, get me a match," he said, and he leaned over and slapped the long person a resounding thwack on the leg.

"All right," was the reply, and the lanky one went out and got a box full.

"Sivian," said the janitor. "Don't ye know that's Mister Hearst?"

"No," responded Anderson, still making the key hum; "but I'm glad to meet him."

Great Excitement in the Suburb of Brookland

WHEN is a burglar not a burglar? Answer is:

Out in Brookland the other night a woman rushed to the engine house crying for help. A colored man was in her house, she said. No fire fighter who stands ready to risk his life any hour of the day or night, and all the minutes between, is going to disregard a Macedonian cry like that. So the engine house marshaled one fireman and two citizens, who, returned with the woman to her home, and, sure enough, a light shining from one of the windows showed that a burglar was on his job.

The one fireman and the two citizens mounted guard at the doors, front and back, and one of them—don't ask which; you won't know every little last thing about an incident you get second hand—called to the man to come out and show himself.

The burglar-man stepped on the porch, as big as life, with a gun in his hand. The gun looked as if it were loaded, and knew it. And the man had every appearance of one who is well acquainted with triggers.

The one fireman and the two citizens went into conference and appointed a committee of one to go for the police. And while all silence showed up and called out for the [illegible] to come and show himself, the answer came sizzling back:

"Come in and get me."

There was no mistaking the invitation that time, so the policeman, with his gun in hand, went in the front entrance to the house and got him [illegible]

The [illegible] was a burglar, after all. He was a guard.

[illegible] for Those Something to Smoke At

The following was introduced by Alderman Slaton:

AN ORDINANCE

To further suppress the evils of intemperance, and to secure obedience to, and the enforcement of and to prevent the evasion of, the laws of the Town of Clanton for the prevention of intemperance and for the prohibition of the manufacture of and the traffic in or unlawful disposition of prohibited liquors and beverages; to provide for the abatement of liquor nuisances and the seizure and destruction of forfeited liquors and beverages, and to prescribe the procedure in such cases.

MAIN INGREDIENT IN COOKING

Not the Simplicity or Richness of Food, but the Manner in Which It Is Prepared.

The gentle reader who has been observant of these columns, as far at least as the poetry and eating is concerned, could not have failed to notice how much we enforced the idea that the cook was the main ingredient. What she is so is the pie, the pudding, the hash, the buckwheat cake, the biscuits, and whatever graces the table. It is her divine conceits that make all the delicacy and fragrance of the viand which she constructs. Some have, no doubt, regarded this idea as purely fanciful, but greater men are now laboring it. Speaking of pumpkin pie in an article in the Independent, H. P. Powell, one of the greatest authorities in matters of this kind, says:

"But you must find the right woman to mix and cook it—that is, the pie. It is like ginger cookies; not too much ginger; not too little, and the same with the sugar; and after that if you stir the mixture just once too many times you spoil the cookies. Nobody can tell why, only it is so. But the pumpkin pie must have a biting charge of ginger, and sugar enough to be really sweet in the raw; and as for the milk? our word for it, don't try condensed milk, and one more thing, don't try making just one pie. We have never known stinginess to work well with pumpkins."

It is not the pumpkin, or the sugar, or the milk that make the pie—it is the woman, says the Ohio State Journal. And the more poetry she has in her soul the more she puts into the pie. We forget this. We think the artist puts his soul into his landscape, the architect his in the edifice, the musician his into his soaring strains, but when it comes to the cook, she is just nothing but corn, molasses and potatoes. That's sacrilege. Anybody can tell whether a woman puts a smile or a growl into a pie. And everybody can tell immediately if it is some fellow down in a cellar making a pie for ten cents.

Which Kills Most—Worry or Drink?

That the optimism which pervades Kate Langley Bosher's new book, "The House of Happiness," has the racy quality of the philosophy of those who live near the soil, would seem to be proved by the following remarks of one of its characters:

"And if anybody will tell me what good worryin' does they can have every egg my hen is again' to lay this spring. More folks wear out from worryin' than dies from drink, and drink is the king-bee killer, Mr. Dave says, and he ought to know, bein' a preacher."

"He thinks all the world of her, waits on her like she was a baby. I used to think she was a fool critter, but it's me who's been the fool. A man don't think much of a woman he don't have to wait on."

"I ain't never heard tell that the Lord pays folks, or sets the firebrand or needle the roof when it leaks, or puts mines the like children, and all them things has got to happen. Just makes Hatch-leaves things look as if he'd like to do to the Lord. He gets sin and the Lord mixed up."

Coat Sewn Suitable for Daily Wear

As comfortable and easy looking as a morning gown but with every mark of afternoon apparel, this design is the simplest of all interpretations of our present modes. The skirt and bodice appear to be cut in one, but are separate.

The skirt, made of two pieces in goods of average width, might be draped on the figure from a straight width of the widest material. It is shaped in at the hips and there is a little fullness at the back. The shaping and gathers afford just room enough for the swell of the figure at the hips.

The waist line is high and very easy in order to make a free movement of the arms possible. It is cut with long shoulders and large armeyes. The fullness at the bust is taken care of by a group of plaits at each side terminating under the bust.

It is in its graceful finishing touches that the gown displays the talent of its noted designer. All very simple models must rely upon finish and elevation in cut or drapery to rise out of the class of the commonplace.

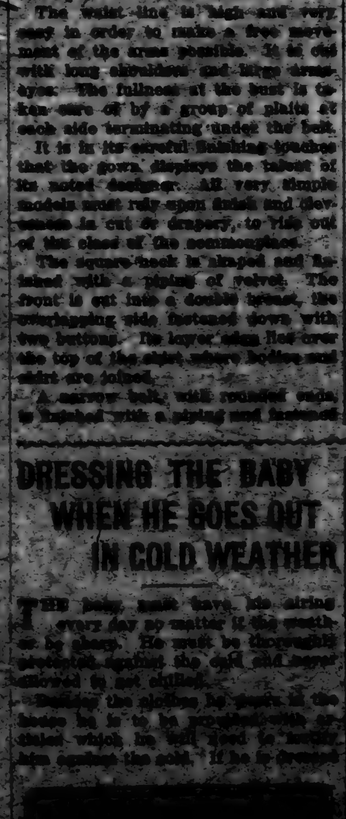
The square neck is shaped and finished with a piping of velvet. The front is cut into a double breast, the overlapping side fastened down with two buttons. The layer adds flat over the top of the plain sleeve bodice and skirt are joined.

A narrow belt, with rounded ends, is finished with a piping and fastened with a fancy button at each end. It does not encircle all of the waist, allowing a straight front appearance (which is smart and clever) in the interval between the ends.

There is a small turnover collar in the sailor shape of fine embroidered batiste. The neck is filled in with a folded chemisette of the figured net. A plaited ruffle of the same put finishes the sleeves.

A strand of large pearls and a long or one of smaller pearls finishes the pretty toilette. But pearls might be replaced with strands of any of the many fashionable glass beads that harmonize with the gown in color.

This model is well adapted to the unusual new shades in [illegible] fashionable fabrics are made. Mustard color, gold, green, poppies, mahogany and the curious blues and greens that are displayed in cloth and silk look best when made up in the simplest manner. But the design is good in the colors which we know well, such as royal blue, amethyst, golden brown and dark green. It would be pretty developed in black, and is an especially good model for velvet.



Colonial slippers and silk stockings are worn with it, and such a dress calls for a simple and well dressed coiffure. Like all simply dressed it will not grow tiresome to the wearer, and might be used daily during the reign of our easy going fashions.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Pigeon Objected to an Unceremonious Expulsion

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The squad of bluecoats had assembled at the central station for the midnight change of shifts. The stalwart policemen formed in line and started to march in a short review before roll call when amid the tramping of feet, Lieutenant Green noticed a little blue-gray pigeon marching bravely along just behind the last man in line, head erect chest out and with very much of a military air.

"Halt," cried the lieutenant. The line came to an instant stop. "How'd that pigeon get in here?" he demanded sharply.

At once two dozen helmeted heads turned about on two dozen shoulders, and as many sets of eyes searched out his birdship, who, also, had halted on command. The bird never blinked an eyelash (if birds have eyelashes).

"Get out of here," thundered Lieutenant Green when his men had failed to answer his question. "Get out! Shoo!" he repeated, as the pigeon cocked its head on one side and looked the commanding officer over. A titter went round the ranks, but was instantly subdued by a glare from the lieutenant.

"Officers Haggerty and Burn, put that pigeon out." And the lieutenant turned his back as if the incident were closed. It would have been closed too, had not the pigeon objected to this unceremonious expulsion.

Officers Haggerty and Burn strode with great dignity up to the bird, which retreated as slowly as [illegible] the door. It walked along a few steps, then looked back as much as though it believed the order had been withdrawn. Now it was at the door, and the policeman bird-drivers were about to sigh with relief when the feathered volunteer flew back over their heads and rejoined his comrades in line.

"You're a—you're a—well, a mighty impertinent bird," said the lieutenant. Then, even he broke the rules long enough to laugh.

This Girl Won a Husband in Twenty Minutes

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Twenty minutes after Miss Lura Blythe of Jeffersonville, Ind., met William E. Morang of Danville, Va., she became his bride. Magistrate Oscar Hay of Jeffersonville, just across the river from Louisville, and a famous Gretna Green, arranged this 20-minute wooing and marriage. Sometime ago a newspaper story was published to the effect that Magistrate Hay would not only perform the marriage ceremony, but would be glad to arrange matches for the bashful lovelorn.

The story came to the notice of Mr. Morang, who is a prosperous contracting carpenter, and he called on Magistrate Hay to find him a wife. Mr. Hay had not meant that part of his offer seriously, but he resolved to "make good."

A match was finally arranged with a Louisville woman, and last Sunday Morang reached Louisville from Danville. He went to the home of his prospective bride and returned to the magistrate's office with a dismal face.

"I can't marry that woman you picked out for me," he said.

"Why not?" asked Mr. Hay.

"She didn't wait for me. She married another fellow a week ago."

"Too bad," said the magistrate. "Well, as I undertook to get you a wife, I'll get you one."

"You'll have to hurry," said Morang. "I've left a lot of business in Danville and I'm going back to night."

The magistrate thought over his list of eligible young women and called up Miss Lura Blythe, daughter of Calvin Blythe, who lived near. He gave such a glowing description of Morang that Miss Blythe came right over to meet him.

At seven o'clock they were introduced. Ten minutes later they announced that they had accepted each other, and ten minutes later Magistrate Hay performed the marriage ceremony.

They have gone to Danville, Va., to make their home.

Exonerated From Theft Charge by Dog's Tricks

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Tricks which a bird dog remembered for three years and demonstrated in Justice Charles Clark's courtroom the other day freed its master of a charge of grand larceny. Wiley A. Card, formerly of 2700 Denver avenue, was charged with the theft of Roxie from the home of W. J. Glover, 414 West Forty-second street. Glover had owned the dog a little more than two years. Card said the dog belonged to him and had wandered from home three weeks before. When he passed the Glover home he said it recognized him and followed him away.

"It's mine," spoke Card from the witness stand, "and I can make her do some tricks that will prove it."

"Oh, no, you can't," Glover said. "It doesn't know any tricks."

"Stand up!"

The dog arose to its hind legs, cocked its head to one side and looked at the witness. Card took a small paper box from his pocket. He tossed it into the air. Roxie retrieved it before it touched the floor.

"Now, roll over and then go shut the door."

The dog promptly rolled over, and then pushed the courtroom door shut with its nose and a fore foot.

"That's enough," said the justice, when the crowd's demonstrations of [illegible] "That dog surely knows you. The case is dismissed. It is the opinion of the court [illegible] to decide the permanent owner [illegible] of the dog."

O'NEAL DEFIED BY FLORENCE MAYOR

LATTER IGNORES ORDER OF GOVERNOR TO RELEASE WOMAN IN FLORENCE JAIL.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings in and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Governor O'Neal will test in the courts his authority to parole prisoners confined in unsanitary city jails and will probably make a test case out of that of Mrs. Ella Parrish, a white woman, confined in the city prison at Florence. The governor was notified that the Florence jail was an unfit place in which to confine a human being and he paroled Mrs. Parrish for thirty days. The mayor of Florence refused to release the woman and Governor O'Neal ordered Dr. W. H. Oates, state prison inspector, to make an inspection of the condition of the Florence jail and to report at once.

Two physicians wrote the governor that the Florence jail was in a filthy condition. These physicians testified that Mrs. Parrish was ill and that to continue to keep here in the jail would jeopardize her health. Mrs. Parish was convicted of selling liquor and was sentenced to fine and imprisonment.

It is probable that Governor O'Neal will include in the test case his right to order the removal of shackles from city prisoners or else parole them if the shackles are not removed upon executive order. The section of the code authorizing the governor to send the state prison inspector on visits to the city prisons will be made the ground for the test case.

State Saves Almost $10,000.

Nearly $10,000 more was paid out to pensioners in January, 1913, than was paid at the beginning of this year, as a result of a decrease in the pension rolls of 569 members, whose names were stricken from the honor rolls several weeks ago by order of the state board of pension examiners. The total amount paid to pensioners in January, 1913, for the second quarter, according to a statement obtained at the auditor's office, was $306,955. The amount of the pension warrants at this quarter aggregated $297,358, showing a decrease of $9,597.

The statement prepared by the auditor's office shows that for the second quarter in 1913 the following composed the pension rolls: First class, 1,211 pensioners; second class, 4,246; third class, 11,985; total, 17,442.

For the second quarter of the present year the pensioners were as follows: First class, 1,182; second class, 4,188; third class, 11,503; total, 16,873.

Altogether there will be an annual saving to the state of nearly $40,0000 as the result of dropping 569 names from the rolls and the number already stricken from the rolls will probably be quadrupled before the pension examiners finish their present investigation.

Appoints Jury Commissioners.

The governor appointed 18 jury commissioners and their commissions were at once issued by Secretary of State Cyrus B. Brown. The appointments are as follows: Fayette county, Victor Reeves, Fayette; Autauga, P. H. Stewart, Prattville; Baldwin, George W. Burns, Bay Minette; Calhoun, John B. Legarde, Anniston; Jackson, E. D. Hollis, Scottsboro; Marengo, W. C. Harries, Demopolis; Morgan, James A. Nelson, Decatur; Pickens, W. F. Kirkpatrick, Ethelsville; Pike, M. Homer Brantley; Banks; Sumter, A. P. Scarboro, Livingston; Talladega, W. M. Costner, Talladega; Wilcox, William J. Sessions, Camden; Etowah, B. W. Duke, Gadsden.

Negro Convict Escapes.

Diving into a thick fog, Bethany Mitchell, a negro convict, escaped from Flat Top Mine. He was serving 25 years from Montgomery for murder. This was his second getaway.

County Superintendents' Meeting.

County superintendents of education of Alabama met in Montgomery Jan. 5 and 6, and discussed the further extension of the state educational system and a more direct supervision of rural schools, according to a call made by W. F. Feagin, state superintendent.

Among the more important topics discussed were consolidation of schools, local taxation, compulsory education, one-mill tax, standard and superior schools, county and high schools, rural school houses, and industrial work.

Mining Companies Heavily Assessed.

By levying ten million dollars of its assessments against the leasehold coal interests in Bibb county, the state tax commission has turned the tables on the coal operators affected. The operators are placed on the defensive and their only alternative now is to appeal to the circuit court from the assessments.

This is the first time that lease hold interests in lands have been assessed in Alabama, and it brings up a new and novel legal question which undoubtedly must go to the supreme court. When the commission contemplated levying the assessments, a hearing was sought at Centreville to determine the value of leasehold interests. Refusal of Henry L. Badham, a prominent coal operator of Birmingham, to answer the questions propounded to him by the commission stopped the proceedings. The commission for some time thereafter, contemplated submitting the matter to the circuit court judge to ascertain whether Mr. Badham could be cited for contempt.

In addition to levying the assessments on the leasehold interests in the coal lands, the tax commission has assessed the lands themselves at $7,750,000. These are the lands owned by the Alabama Mineral Land company, and the assessment represents the tax years 1909 to 1913, inclusive.

The assessments against the leasehold interests of the operators are as follows: Cahaba Southern Coal Mining company, 1908-13, inclusive, $293,280; Little Cahaba Coal Mining company, 1908-13, $1,800,00; Blocton Cahaba Coal company, 1908-13, $1,200,000; Roden Coal company, 1908-13, $1,500,000; Bessemer Coal, Iron and Land company, 1908-13, $1,800,000; Red Feather Coal company, 1908-13, $1,500,000; Galloway Coal company, 1908-13, $1,200,000; Choctaw Coal and Mining company, 1912-13, $400,000.

Feed Bills for Prisoners High.

Enactment of a law by the legislature making counties pay for the feeding of prisoners in jails charged with misdemeanors is the solution of the serious problem that faces the state in providing sufficient funds for feeding the inmates of the jails in Alabama. This is the belief expressed by State Examiner J. T. Gorman in a report filed with the governor covering fully the question of providing food for the prisoners. He shows that the cost of feeding the prisoners is now $200,000 a year, with an annual appropriation of only $130,000 from the legislature to take care of the expense. The examiner gives an analysis of the subject since 1901.

The report shows that the annual cost of feeding prisoners has increased from $86,810.10 in 1901, to $129,981.85 in 1913, due to alterations in the statute which provides a sliding scale for feed bills. During the thirteen years ending with 1913, the feeding of prisoners in the Jefferson county jail cost $280,304.95, Mobile county $130,504.40, and Montgomery county $96,264.30.

"Nearly 75 per cent. of the amount for feeding prisoners is paid for prisoners charged with misdemeanors, often of a frivolous and malicious character, for which the state receives no benefit whatever," says the report.

State Artillery Will Be Re-Organized.

Alabama will soon have four batteries of field artillery in its National Guard and the artillery branch of the state militia will be re-organized upon a more efficient basis, according to Adjutant General J. B. Scully, who conferred with Major L. S. Dorrance and Lieutenant E. P. King, officers of the artillery.

It is planned to put another battery of artillery in the field at Birmingham, the new body to be known as Battery D. This battery is now being organized under the direction of Major Dorrance and Lieutenant King. With the organization of this battery, there will be four companies of artillery in the state, one being in Montgomery, one in Mobile, and two in Birmingham.

Falco Bank Reopens.

Alex. E. Walker, superintendent of the state banking department, returned from Falco, in Covington county, where he completed arrangements for the reopening of the Bank of Falco, which recently liquidated. Mr. Walker declares that enough money has been raised by the directors and stockholders of the bank to meet all obligations and that the institution has resumed operations under favorable conditions.

State Pays Interest.

Despite intermittent cuts of the state's "busted strong box," Alabama is maintaining its credit abroad. Checks covering the semi-annual interest on the state's bonded indebtedness were mailed from the state treasurer's office. The interest, amounting to $178,725, is due. State Treasurer John Purdy is guarding the state's credit above everything, and he says he never expects to let the interest on the bonded debt default if he can help it. That he thinks, should have precedence.

IRREGULAR HOLIDAY TRADE

Business Failures Far in Advance of the Same Period Last Year.

New York. — Bradstreet's review of trade says:

"Few really new features presented themselves the past week, usually a period of holiday fullness, end-of-year inventories and restricted industrial activities.

"Summarized reports indicate irregular holiday trade results, a generally profitable year reported by banks, with dividends in most cases maintained; re-entry of the railroads into the steel rail market, lower prices for pig iron, and rather than the usual number of shut downs over the holidays by leading industries, with however, promise of many quick resumptions early in January.

"Rather more than the usual list of business failures have been reported, and what has been termed the holiday crop of such troubles is numerous and large.

"Business failures for the week were 366, which compares with 287 in 1912.

"Wheat, including flour, exports for the week aggregate 5,801,412 bushels, against 4,596,618 last year."

New York.—Dun's weekly review of trade says:

"At the opening of the New Year it is gratifying to note that 1913 was the most successful period from an agricultural standpoint this country ever has experienced. Notwithstanding adverse climatic conditions, the total yield of wheat surpassed all former records, and while the crop fell considerably below the banner production of the preceding year, higher prices more than compensated for any loss in output. Consequently, the value of the nation's farm products reached unparalleled totals, while export trade of the United States in those staples touched figures never before attained.

"Foreign commerce statistics are particularly significant in connection with the monetary situation, the large balance of trade in favor of this country indicating that gold imports may be inaugurated early in the year 1914.

"Failures this week are 381, against 313 last year. Failures in Canada number 34, against 27 last year."

LOWER EXPRESS RATES.

Reductions All Over the Country Become Effective in February.

Washington. — Lower express rates throughout the country will become effective in February by the terms of the recent interstate commerce commerce commision order. Not only will the rates be reduced materially, but the companies will comply with regulations for improved methods of service.

Experts estimate the average reductions in charges will approximate 17 per cent. One official of a large express company informed the commission that the holiday express business for 1913 was 25 per cent. less than it was in 1912. He attributed the loss to the parcel post.

Bad Sewerage Causes Pellagra.

Atlanta — That pellagra infection probably results from bad sewerage was a theory advanced in the report of the Thompson-McFadden pellagra commission before the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The report stated that no definite relation was observed between the occurrences of pellagra and the use of any particular food.

Charlotte, N. C.—Fire in a department store here did damage estimated at $100,000.

Berlin. — Ballet dancers have gone on strike because opera managers want them to dance with bare feet and feet.

Chicago. — A crowd of nearly 200 unemployed men entered restaurants, ordered food, became violently ill and refused to pay. Police arrested and declared them insane and set them free.

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH LIVER

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

GAVE LESSON IN REVERENCE

Small Boy's Stern Rebuke to Bishop Whom He Suspected of Harboring Thoughts of Barter.

Bishop Thornton, when in Ballarat, was walking one fine Sunday morning with his favorite dog, a very intelligent retriever. The dog was performing all sorts of tricks; jumping over his master's stick, retrieving it from the water, and so on.

The bishop was aware of the wide-eyed interest of a small boy, who, with his nurse, was walking on the shore of the lake. The bishop recognized in him the son of a neighbor with whom he was on the best of terms, although the neighbor was a leading light of Nonconformity in the city.

To amuse this boy the bishop put the dog through the whole category of his tricks, and then said: "Now, isn't that a nice dog, and wouldn't you like to have one like him?" To which the small boy replied sternly, "Sir, I think you forgot what day this is."—London Daily Citizen.

SUFFRAGISTS GO TO BIRMINGHAM

NATIONAL OFFICERS OF ORGANIZATION WILL HOLD SOUTHERN MEETING IN MAGIC CITY.

LEADERS WILL ATTEND

Invitation Extended by Suffragists of Birmingham Is Accepted Formally.

Birmingham. — This city will entertain in February the official board of the National Equal Suffrage Association, of which Dr. Anna Shaw is president, Jane Addams vice-president, and other notable women of the United States are officers.

Formal acceptance of the invitation extended by the Birmingham Equal Suffrage Association for the board to hold its Southern session in the Magic City has been made. The exact date will be decided later.

This, probably, the most important announcement ever made in the history of Alabama, was received with enthusiasm at the meeting of the Birmingham Equal Suffrage Association in Cable Hall. It was submitted by Mrs. Solon Jacobs, who was notified by Dr. Anna Shaw and Mary Ware Dennett, corresponding secretary, that the February session would have Birmingham as its setting.

In addition to Dr. Shaw and Jane Addams, the board consists of Mrs. Desha Breckenridge, second vice-president; Mary Ware Dennett, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Susan Fitzgerald, recording secretary; Catherine Dexter McCormick, treasurer; Harriet Burton Laidlaw, first auditor, and Louise De Koven Bowen, second auditor.

PRAISE FOR ALABAMA.

U. S. Agricultural Department Discusses Experiment Station.

Washington. — The agricultural department at Washington believes that the Alabama experimental agricultural station, as a result of generous state aid, has entered upon the most important era of expansion in its history, according to a statement based upon a final report of the various experiments conducted in Alabama by the station at Auburn.

"The wisdom of this policy will be reflected without doubt in the progress of agriculture within the state," farther declares the department.

"The Alabama station was active during the past year in organizing under the continued state appropriation of $27,000 annually for local experiments and special investigations. The large number of assistants added to the staff for this purpose enabled several departments of the station to conduct experiments on farms throughout the state. F. A. Wolf, added to the staff as plant pathologist, took up the study of diseases of leguminous crops and of cotton among other lines of work. Otherwise, the experimental work of the station was chiefly a continuation of the activities in progress during the preceding year."

STATE-WIDE CAMPAIGN

Officials of Alabama Farmers' Union Plan Campaign.

Birmingham. — At a meeting of the state officials, executive committee and business agents of the Alabama Farmers' Co-Operative and Educational Union at the state headquarters here plans were outlined for a state-wide campaign to be inaugurated about the middle of January in continuance for six weeks. Meetings will be held in every county in the state and speakers will address the farmers in interest of co-operation and education among the farmers.

Secretary Kennedy, of the Farmers' union, states that the conference was attended with considerable enthusiasm and that the new year will be started out to make 1914 the most prosperous in the history of Alabama insofar as the farmers are concerned. The Alabama Farmers' Union now has 1,300 locals in the state with a total membership of between 45,000 and 50,000.

FEDERAL AID FOR ROADS

Bankhead Believes That the Coming Session Will See Bill Pass.

Birmingham. — "Congress is almost certain to pass the bill providing for federal aid for good roads," said United States Senator John H. Bankhead, who is author of a bill now pending before the senate. "It is my opinion that the good roads bill will pass some time during the present session. It is probable that the first bill will provide an appropriation of $25,000,000 to be distributed throughout the state, according to the number of miles of post roads.

"Unquestionably the sentiment in congress is overwhelmingly in favor of federal aid in road improvement. Of course it is necessary to make a beginning. It is evident that the first federal aid bill will provide that the government shall appropriate so much per mile for the maintenance of post roads over which the mails are now carried."

NEW GADSDEN INDUSTRY.

Gadsden. — At a conference between Gadsden and Birmingham capitalists, the organization of a company to build a $75,000 soil pipe plant in Gadsden probably will be completed. At that time one of several sites will be selected, and further details worked out. John Birdwell will be general manager.

LARGER EXPORTS THAN EVER BEFORE

1913 EXCEEDED BEST EFFORTS OF THE PRECEDING YEARS.

FOREIGN COMMERCE GROWS

1913 Imports Show Decrease, Due to Big Reductions in the Cost of Certain Articles.

Washington.—The foreign commerce of the United States in the calendar year 1913 approximated one and three-quarter billion dollars of imports and two and a half billion of exports. The imports of the eleven months ended with November were $1,609,000,000; should the December imports equal those of November the total for the full year would be $1,756,000,000. The exports of the eleven months ended with November were $2,251,000,000; should the December exports equal those of November the total would be $2,497,000,000. This estimate would make the excess of exports over imports approximately $740,000,000.

The figures of exports and of excess of exports over imports will exceed those of any earlier year. The largest export in any preceding calendar year was that of 1912, which showed a total of $2,489,917,993; and as the eleven months ended with November are $102,000,000 in excess of the corresponding period of the preceding year the estimate of approximately two and a half billion for 1913 seems to be justified. The excess of exports over imports in the eleven months ended with November was $642,000,000, and for the single months of November $97,000,000, thus apparently justifying the estimate of $740,000,000 excess of exports for the full year.

In imports the total for 1913 will be less than that of 1912, but larger than that of any year preceding 1912. This decline in imports in 1913 is due in part to reduction in prices of certain articles imported. While the quantity of sugar imported in the ten months ended with October exceeded that of the corresponding period of 1912 by 368,000,000 pounds, the value of this larger quantity imported during the 1913 period was $22,000,000 less than that of the corresponding period of 1912.

PLAN TO DROP CORPORATIONS

Men of Affairs Decided to Line Up With Spirit of Times.

New York.—The withdrawal of J. P. Morgan & Co. from more than a score of great corporations and the statement shortly afterwards by George F. Baker, an almost equally dominant figure in American finance, that he soon would take similar action, gave Wall street generally a thrill that almost brought trading on the stock exchange to a halt.

While it probably is true that many prominent bankers had information foreshadowing this momentous move toward ending interlocking directorates, the public and brokers had no advance knowledge of what was taking place in the inner councils of the greatest of all American houses of finance. Wherever telephone and ticker flashed the news about the street, groups of men gathered to discuss what was the all-absorbing topic.

Mr. Morgan, departing from his firm's traditional policy of silence, made a public statement announcing the withdrawal of five members of J. P. Morgan & Co. from the directorships in twenty-seven corporations and the intention to withdraw from more.

Exports to South Africa.

Washington. — Success that has marked the efforts of American manufacturers to establish markets for their exports in the union of South Africa, long considered to be exclusive province for foreign traders, refutes any assertion that competition is driving Americans from the field of trade, according to a statement made public by the department of commerce.

Lower Express Next Month.

Washington.—Lower express rates throughout the country will become effective one month from now by the terms of the recent interstate commerce commission order. Not only will the rates be reduced materially, but the companies will comply with regulations for improved methods of service. Experts estimate the average reduction in charges will approximate 6-13 per cent. One official of a large express company said that the savings for 1914 may be $15,000,000 less than it will be in 1913.

CREAT CHANGES PAST YEAR

POLITICAL, ECONOMIC AND FINANCIAL LEGISLATION DURING 1913 IMPORTANT.

New Era in Relations of Government and Big Corporations—Foreign Relations Eventful.

Washington.—Twelve months of 1913 wrought changes in the American government—political, economic and financial—probably more far-reaching than any other year of the last quarter century—this year was apparent in a backward glance over memorable events of the past year in all branches of governmental activity.

A Democratic administration in national affairs came to power in this twelve months with a Democratic president and a Democratic congress at his back for the first time since Grover Cleveland occupied the white house.

The first constitutional amendments since 1870 were perfected, providing two radical changes in the fundamentals of government—an income tax and the direct election of United States senators.

BANKS ACCEPTING SYSTEM

In One Week 767 Banks Apply for Admission.

Washington.—Seven hundred and sixty-seven banking institutions, scattered over forty-five states and having an aggregate capital, exclusive of surplus, of approximately $380,000,000, have informed the federal authorities of their intention to enter the new currency system. This was announced by the treasury department a week after the currency reform law was enacted.

The department's statement said:

"Six hundred and ninety-five applications have been received from national banks with an aggregate capital of about $250,000,000, so that up to this time national banks representing approximately one-fourth of the total national banking capital of the country already have signified their intention to enter the system.

"Of the national banks 69 have a capital of $1,000,000 or more; 142 have a capital of from $250,000 to $1,000,000; 276 have a capital of from $100,000 to $250,000 and 216 have a capital of less than $100,000."

$250,000 Ransom Will Be Paid.

Chihuahua.—Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in gold has been agreed upon by General Villa, rebel military chief, as the ransom he will accept for the release of Luis Terrazas, son of the wealthy Mexican land owner. Terrazas has been imprisoned here for five weeks on the charge that he had supported the federal administration. The money is to be paid by Luis Terrazas, Sr., who has been negotiating from El Paso for his son's release. The prisoner is to be brought to the border under safe conduct.

Little Bertha was invited out to dinner with her father and mother. Before she went it was firmly impressed upon her that she must not speak unless spoken to. All went smoothly for a while, but when some time elapsed and no notice was taken of her she began to get uneasy.

Finally the hostess, seeing something was wrong, asked her what she would like next.

"I should like to have you begin to ask me questions," was the polite reply.—Lippincott's.

"stopper" plow, the "pacific" mule, the dig in the short row, the corn pone, and sow-belly, and sorghum. There are still lazy, shiftless and improvident people who live no better than they did, but at that time the most industrious and most judicious could do no better. Now it is inexcusable, but then it was a necessity.

In the Williams family there were twelve children and were all reared to be grown—two dying at the age of nineteen years. They were never too tired to go on Sunday morning four miles to church and Sunday school. They found a spiritual rest which brought them more strength than was expended in the trip from week to week. The family has produced three preachers, and, I am told, that Toy is not the most brilliant, though he is the one now contributing to these columns from far off China, and the one to whom our thoughts naturally turn—and I trust our prayers also.

Toy was the second in years, but the first to experience that unquenchable thirst after intellectual culture, which was destined to dominate his life, and to change the current of the family history. Hope is contageous, always, and when it lays hold upon the noblest things it is capable of lifting, not only a family, but a people, from the low levels of mediocrity to the highest plains of intellectual development and spiritual excellence. Improved civilization of China and Japan is the response which heathern poverty of spirit makes to the inspiring call of such examples as Toy's. He was a missionary in his home and among his playmates long before he felt the divine inspiration to go abroad.

The call to serve others was a call to preparation for that service. After plowing hard all day, he would study until late at night, sitting without fire, in the "shed room," so as not to disturb others, and to be undisturbed himself. Blessed home. No guards are set to keep the boys from scenes of dissipation and haunts of vice. No restraints of parental authority is needed to hold in check the exuberant spirits of youth, because the surging currents of the young life have been directed to those channels which conduct it to sane pleasures and to wholesome pursuits. The greatest curse you can visit upon your child is to teach him that he is doomed to a life of servitude, that poverty is insurmountable, and that ignorance is his heritage. To the Williams family poverty was not a curse but a blessing, because it was radiant with visions of better things, which were to come, not by outside assistance, but by self-improvement, and self-development. The shekina which filled the tabernacle of old, as an emblem of the Lord's presence, was not more beautiful than the visions which enchanted and made radiant the little "shed-room" where Toy plodded through the books when he could not be spared from farm work to attend school. At length he came to Clanton to school, and prepared himself for a third grade certificate. Then he taught and at the same time aided the younger children in their education. Then he went to Howard college on borrowed money, which was secured by his father's note with "old beck," and other property as collateral. After graduation, he taught school, paid debts, borrowed again, and went to the Theological Institute of Louisville, Kentucky, where he graduated. Into "What a blessed thing it is that such as the Presbyterian would have been in those days. It will prove a God-send many to many a poor fellow.

The practical is often spoken of as diametrically opposed to the sentimental, but really the most practical, as well as the most potent, force known to social dynamics, is a lofty and unselfish sentiment. It vitalizes every other force, and gives the very highest energy and efficiency to human character. The man whom the world calls practical is usually narrow and selfish. VOL 4. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY JANUARY 15, 1914 NO. 41

Probate Judge

HON. O. W. UNDERWOOD AT CLANTON

Hon. Oscar W. Underwood, candidate for the U. S. Senate, reached Clanton on Wednesday night, Jan. 7, and addressed the citizens here in support of his candidacy.

The speaking was held at the Court House and a large and representative audience was present, including a number of ladies, all eager to hear one of the nation's greatestmen.

Mr. Underwood was introduced by Senator Thos. A. Curry, who said that Clanton should feel honored in having so distinguised a citizen to come here and make a speech.

The Congressman, although very tired, spoke for about an hour and a half, and made a strong and logical argument in support of his candidacy, and his remarks were loudly applauded.

Mr. Underwood dwelt on the work that had been accomplished in Congress since President Wilson's inauguration. He told of the benefits to be dirived from the recently enacted tariff bill of which he is the author, and also spoke of the currency bill and its advantage to the people. He arraigned Capt. Hobson for his absenteeism when important legislation was pending, and charged the Captain with being insincere to the democratic party, saying, that he had voted with the high priests of the republican party on a number of measures. He also spoke of Hobson's prohibition proclivities, and asserted that while prohibition had no place in this campaign he had voted for more temperance measures in Congress than Capt. Hobson had

Mr. Underwood took up the Brownsville, Texas, case, and said Hobson was the only democrat in Congress who voted to reinstate the negro soldiers who shot up the town.

The speaker closed his speech by saying that if he was elected to the Senate, he would be as faithful to the people of Alabama and of the nation as he bas been in past and would render to them his best service.

This is the first time the people of Chilton have had an opportunity to hear Mr. Underwood and he made a splendid impression on the large audience that had assembled to do him honor.

A WORD FROM MR. KILLGORE

Editor Press:

A few words to the people and oblige.

We hill-billies have been taught by the politicians of Chilton county that if we elected a democratic president, we would have six cent cotton and free soup-houses We thought it was true because the "boss" said so, but we have elected a democratic president and are getting more than twice six cents for our cotton, and havn't been having any soup houses yet, but are having the best time we have had at all, and we have about decided to vote the Wilson ticket, or the democratic and conservative ticket, instead of voting to elect a politician to office, who would deceive the very elect if possible, in order to get an office. Now gentlemen, is it not time for us hillbillies to open our eyes and look for ourselves; we have been misled. If the ones that have been leading us are honest, they will acknowledge their ignorance, and join in with the democratic and conservative party, and advise the rest of us to do likewise; and if they are not honest, we ought to repudiate them and cast our lot with the party that has done more for the country than any other party has ever done the democratic party. It put out fifty million dollars to move the last cotton crop, something heretofore unheard of, and when Wall Street threatened to lock up the money and bring about a financial panic, as they did under the last democratic administration, this administration told them to lock it up if they wanted to, and they would put into circulation enough money to do the business of the country. Now it does seem to me that anyone could see that this hue and cry of the leaders of the republicans, that if the democrats get in power we would have six cent cotton and free soup houses, is simply to mislead the ignorant voter. I think that the people of Chilton have decided to join in with the party that has saved our country from one of the worst financial panics that we have ever had, and with the party that stands for white supremacy and the rule of the people. If this misses the waste basket I will give the false prophets another barrel later.

Respectfully,
The same old Moses.

MR. W. F. FALLON

ANNOUNCES FOR SHERIFF.

In this issue of the Press will be found the announcement of Mr. W. F. Fallon for the office of Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the democratic primary. This office is one of the most important in the county and requires the services of a man who is fearless in the discharge of his official duties and will see that the laws are properly enforced. Mr. Fallon's long experience in connection with the Sheriff's should stand him in good stead to fill this responsible position. He was a deputy sheriff in Shelby county for nine years and since he has been in the employ of Sheriff Jones he has done much to break up crime in this county. He has been a loyal democrat in season and out of season and has spent his time and money to win democracy's battles.

If the voters nominate and elect Mr. Fallon there is not the least doubt but that he will make a most capable and efficient official.

ENTERTAINED AT DINNER

On last Friday evening a number of the sterner set gathered at the hospitable home of Mr and Mrs. Jno. W. Stanfield. It was an elegant stag-dinner, given by Mr. Stanfield to a few of his friends. The diuner was served by little Miss Alice, who is never more beautiful, nor in her better graces than when performing such functions. The bounty of good things, and the cheerful hospitality of the home, soon turned the minds from business to jolliness and merry-making. After dinner the guests retired to the parlor, in which was found a costly Victrola, and here they were further entertained by the pleasing aroma from a box of rich Havanas, speeches by Presidents Taft and Wilson, music from Cretori's wonderful band In the midst of such enjoyment, time was fleet. Hours sped with the brevity of minutes, and minutes with the brevity of seconds. All had a most delightful evening. Among those present were Messrs L. H. S. Chappelle, E. A. Matthews, W. T. Callen, L. H. Reynolds, W. H. Sartor, V. J. Gragg, H. T. Pipes, E. M. Pinckard, J. F. VanDerveer, C. Fans Jones and J. J. Pickney.

Some man from Chilton county created a sensation at Wetumpka some days ago. He left his team unhitched, and they ran away in order to make trial of the State highway we hear so much about. They collided with Mr. Monroe Holley's automobile which was returning from Montgomery, and seriously injured several members of the Holley family. The end of the wagon tongue penetrated the abdomen of Kyle Holley, a young man who was driving the car, badly lacerating the liver and other vital organs, One of the mules was stranded on top of the machine, and was cut to pieces by fragments of the wind-shield.

SOLDIERS' HOME

There is to be a suitable observance of General Robert E. Lee's birthday at the Alabama Soldier's Home on the 19th of this month. Dr. Robert Lee Huddleston, of Speigner, Ala, will deliver an address and Mrs. Thomas A. Curry, of Clanton, will read and recite. There will be music and singing and other entertainment suitable. Camp 1711 is to elect officers for the ensuing year and observe the rememberance of their dead comrades in the Home cemetery.

Visitors from Clanton, Deatsville, Cooper, Thorsby, Jemison, Marbury and other towns are expected to be present.

Prof. Mullins commenced his school on Monday with an attendance of thirty pupils.

CAMP 322, WOODMEN OF THE WORLD.

At the annual meeting of local Camp No. 322, Woodmen of the World last Monday evening, officers for the ensuing year were installed and Dr. J. E. Wood initiated into the wonders of woodcraft.

The sovereigns began to assemble early and by eight o'clock one hundred and three husky Woodmen were in Camp. After lounging around for a time, each one having been given the opportunity of shaking hands with his fellow Woodman, the Camp went into the business of the hour.

While all this was going on, Mr. G. S. Davis with all the available help in town was preparing a magnificent banquet for these hungry men of the woods.

In the midst of the exercises of the hour proceedings were halted and sixty of the most stalwart men Chilton county claims quartered out in order that they might do justice to Davis' [illegible] beheld was spread before them. Everything from the best cured meats to the most tempting vegetables was on the table. All that man could desire was there for him, and, it is useless to say that those present enjoyed themselves. (We ate like savages.)

After the men lucky enough to be first, repaired to the Camp, the remaining forty-three marched down and were treated equally as well.

On assembling the second time officers were duly installed as follows: J. W. P. Murphy, C. C.; B. J. Sessions, A. L.; Eric Hart, banker; J. L. Gore, escort; T. W. Kemp, watchman; E. L. Bryant, sentry; Dr. V. J. Gragg, Dr. P. I. Hopkins, physicians; W. H. Sartor, J. R. Mullins and H. T. Pipes, managers.

After the installation exercises informal talks were given and enthusiasm manifested. Indications are that the ensuing year will be the most prosperous in the history of Woodcraft in Clanton, Alabama.

OYSTER SUPPER ON FRIDAY NIGHT.

Chief Philip Barrett, of Clanton tribe, was present and entertained Mountain Creek lodge by delivering an address.

A FATAL RUNAWAY.

Mr. Isaac J. Vinson, a prosperous and well thought of farmer, who resided about two miles west of Cooper, met with an awful death in a stalk cutting machine on Monday last. Mr. Vinson left home soon after dinner to go to his field to chop some cotton stalks. He had cut about a dozen rows when his mules became frightened and ran away. The team passed Mr. Vinson's home, and, running down the road struck a high embankment, killing him almost instantly. His lower limbs were badly lacerated, and his body was literally wound up in the machine so much so that it took almost thirty minutes to extricate his body from the wreckage.

A married daughter saw the runaway but she is now so prostrated with grief that she is unable to tell anything about the awful accident. The deceased was one of the leading men of that section and his untimely end has cast a gloom over the entire community. He was about 45 years old and leaves a widow and three children.

The announcement of Hon. Thos. A. Curry as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor is received with enthusiasm in Chilton. Senator Curry is recognized as one of the ablest lawyers in central Alabama, and is a parliamentarian of unquestioned ability. He is a democrat, warp and filling, and Alabama has no where a more patriotic, high minded and loyal son. He stands where he has always stood—for the highest development of every resource and interest of his State. His home people, those who know him best, will stand by him to a man, regardless of faction or faith, and the support he will receive in the other counties makes his nomination sure.

Prof. Strock in Favor of County High School.

Editor Press.

I want to express my appreciation of chances for a State High School in the county.

We have about seventy schools in the county, and with this number of schools to draw from it should open up with a good attendance. A few days ago I mentioned the matter to some boys and girls in school. They seemed to be interested in the fact that the High School was almost in sight. I believe that the pupils in every school in the county would be likely interested.

Women Everywhere

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Women from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from all sections of this great country, no city so large, no village so small but that some woman has written words of thanks for health restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No woman who is suffering from the ills peculiar to her sex should rest until she has given this famous remedy a trial. Is it not reasonable to believe that what it did for these women it will do for any sick woman?

Wonderful Case of Mrs. Stephenson, on the Pacific Coast.

INDEPENDENCE, OREGON.—"I was sick with what four doctors called Nervous Prostration, was treated by them for several years, would be better for a while then back in the old way again. I had palpitation of the heart very bad, fainting spells, and was so nervous that a spoon dropping to the floor would nearly kill me, could not lift the lightest weight without making me sick; in fact was about as sick and miserable as a person could be. I saw your medicines advertised and thought I would try them, and am so thankful I did for they helped me at once. I took about a dozen bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and also used the Sanative Wash. Since then I have used them whenever I felt sick. Your remedies are the only doctor I employ. You are at liberty to publish this letter."—Mrs. W. STEPHENSON, Independence, Oregon.

A Grateful Atlantic Coast Woman.

HODGDON, ME.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Hodgdon, Maine.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

TO INSPECT FORTS

BOARD APPOINTED TO PASS ON BUILDING OF DEFENSES OF THE PANAMA CANAL.

NO FAULTS ARE INTIMATED

Work of Great Magnitude and Importance, However, Has Been in the Hands of Two Young Engineer Corps Lieutenants.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington. — The fortifications which guard the approaches to the Panama canal both at the Atlantic and the Pacific ends of the waterway, are among the greatest, if they are not the greatest in the world. While it is perfectly true that they may never be called into action for the defense of the canal, they are considered by military and naval authorities as being absolutely necessary as a means of preparation for a day which, if it shall come, will be one of deadly import to the people of the United States.

A seemingly unimportant order of the secretary of war is the cause of present great interest in army circles. Mr. Garrison has designated a board of ranking officers of the United States army to report on the defenses of the Panama canal. A board of this kind has been in existence for some time, but it has been strengthened and its personnel somewhat changed by the recent official action.

The construction of the sea and land defenses of the Panama canal is in charge of two young lieutenants of the engineer corps, George R. Goethals and Albert H. Acher. Army men say that it is probably the first time in the history of the construction of fortifications of such commanding importance that officers of such tender years have been given sole charge of the work.

When the board which Secretary Garrison has designated makes its final inspection and report it will be called upon to say either that the great defenses upon which so much depends were committed wisely to the supervision of youth, or that it had been better if the original plan of putting a senior officer in charge had been carried out.

Personnel of the Board.

The members of the board just designated by the secretary of war to look after the defenses and to see that things are well done consists of these officers: Major Gen. Leonard Wood, Major Gen. William W. Wotherspoon, Brig. Gen. Erasmus M. Weaver, Brig. Gen. William Crozier, Col. George W. Goethals, Col. Edward Burr, Lieut. Col. William W. Haan, Major William Chamberlain of the army, and Capt. Harry S. Knapp of the United States navy. These officers represent, from the war department's view, the best thought of the different branches of the service on the subjects which will come under the consideration of the members.

It is useless to make an attempt to disguise the fact that service men even before the day of determination, have been somewhat critical of the appointment of two such young officers as Lieutenants Goethals and Acher to a work of such importance as that of constructing the sea and land defenses of the canal. If the forts on land and sea meet with the approval of the officers who have been appointed to pass judgment on them the records of two youngsters of the service are made.

When it was determined, or perhaps even before the day of determination, that the Panama canal was to be fortified a board of general officers was appointed to select sites for fortifications. The board did its work and then Major E. E. Winslow of the engineer corps, one of the acknowledged fortification experts of the service, was intrusted with the work of designing the great defenses.

Youths Superseded Winslow.

It was expected, so it is said by the army, that Major Winslow, having made the plans and having "the conception of their evolution" well in mind, would be assigned to the task of construction. The major did go to the isthmus, probably with the understanding that he was to take up the fort building work on the islands and the peninsulas which command the approaches to the two ends of the canal. The major, however, did not stay on the isthmus, but came back to work in the states and is now at Norfolk, Va.

Just what occurred in the Zone while Major Winslow was there does not appear, but he left for home, and leaving was followed by the announcement that First Lieut. George H. Goethals, son of Col. George W. Goethals, chief engineer of canal construction, and Albert H. Acher, son-in-law of Col. H. N. Hodges, assistant chief engineer of canal construction, would be put in charge of the building of the great defenses upon the upstanding of which may depend the safety of the biggest engineering job the world has known.

Uncle Sam May Buy Mail Cars!

Members of the house committee on postoffices and post roads have voted an amendment into the postoffice appropriation bill authorizing the purchase of several steel railway mail cars as an experiment in "Uncle Sam ownership." Heretofore the government has been renting cars for the purpose of carrying mail. It is understood that members of the committee think that by eventually owning all the railway mail cars the government can save a big sum of money.

While this does not seem a very big matter, it nevertheless is exceedingly big in the minds of some members of congress. Men who are opposed to government ownership propositions think that they find in the recommendation of the postoffice committee the starting point of government ownership and operation of the railroads. No one can tell yet of course whether there is any basis for this fear of the conservative ones of the different parties, but it is a fact that Washington expects one of the bitterest contests of the winter will come over this seemingly minor provision of an appropriation bill which is intended to allow Uncle Sam to buy a few mail cars for the use of the postoffice service.

The average of opposition to government ownership is just as great in the Democratic party, as it is represented in congress, as it is in the ranks of the Republicans. The Democrats are putting through what they consider progressive legislation, but many of them are casting their votes with the feelings of men who are being driven to do things they do not want to do.

Caused a Warm Debate.

When the postoffice and post roads committee was considering the proposition to buy the cars outright there was a debate in the committee room which for warmth equaled the temperature of any recent debate in the open house. The majority in favor of the proposition was a bare one. It is expected that the minority committeemen will voice their objection to the bill from the floor, and it is possible they may get enough support from their own and from the Republican ranks to negative the committee's recommendation.

It already virtually has been decided that congress shall take up this winter the matter of government construction of a railroad in Alaska. Already opposition to the plan has developed and the conservative Democrats are trying to rally the forces of opposition. When the committee with a large Democratic majority splits as evenly as the postoffice committee did on such a small matter as the purchase of a few railroad cars by the government some indication may be had of the strong opposition which is likely to develop to the Alaskan plan.

Roused by Whitacre's Charges.

Members of congress have been pretty well stirred up over the remarks made by Representative J. J. Whitacre of Ohio, in a speech which he made in Canton, O., not long ago. Mr. Whitacre was reported as having said that "the man who wants to be 'intellectually honest' has not business in congress."

What Mr. Whitacre meant unquestionably was that congressmen frequently are compelled, because of party pressure, or because of pressure from their constituents, to vote on measures against their convictions, and it may be that he meant some of them actually are compelled by the same kind of pressure to vote against their consciences. Mr. Whitacre is said to have declared that he would not run for congress again because he could not make the service square with intellectual honesty.

Whether or not Mr. Whitacre made the statement in exactly the words reported makes little difference in the application of his reported words to the condition in congress. One of the broad criticisms of the actions of individuals in congress when the time comes to vote, has been that a member seems to think that he represents first his district and second the country at large.

District Versus Country.

In standing by the needs of his constituents against the seeming needs of his country, is a member intellectually dishonest? That is, is he intellectually dishonest if his own convictions lead him to vote for the good of the country, while his desire to serve his immediate constituents, and perhaps his desire to be re-elected, make him cast his vote for the interests of the specific locality rather than for the interests of all his countrymen outside of a small circumscribed district?

It can be said that more and more congressmen are coming to vote for the entire country rather than for their constituents. This was shown to be true when the last tariff bill was put through. Men from lumber districts voted to put lumber on the free list and some men from sheep districts voted for free wool. Now it might be said that these men voted seemingly against the good of their immediate constituents because they thought their so voting would be good for the entire country.

What Other Members Say.

Representative Charles H. Burke of South Dakota is quoted as saying on this matter of intellectual honesty: "My fourteen years' experience in the house has impressed me that the contrary of Mr. Whitacre's statement is true. As a rule, members of congress are high-minded men, actuated in their public actions by what they believe is for the good of all. There is no reason why a man should not assert his individuality in congress just as he would exert it outside of congress."

Representative Richard Bartholdt of Missouri, who soon is to quit congress after twenty-two years' of service although it is said he could be re-elected easily if he so chose, said on this matter of intellectual honesty: "Whether a man is dishonest or not is simply a proposition of individuality. He can be honest in congress if he is so inclined just as easily as he can be honest outside of congress. He gains in another respect, to do which is his private gain."

SPELLING STUCK THE JURY

Point of Information They Wanted Involved No Great Legal Knowledge, if Judge Had It.

Here is one that was told at a tea given by Miss Geraldine Farrar, the singer, when one of the party referred to the judiciary and the peculiar cases that frequently come before the courts:

"Some time ago there was a homicide case in a western court in which there was considerable doubt as to the guilt of the accused. The trial judge seemed to share the popular belief.

"'Gentlemen of the jury,' said he, in concluding his charge, 'if the evidence, in your minds, shows that pneumonia was the cause of the man's death, you cannot convict the prisoner.'

"Whereat the jury retired and in about ten minutes the constable returned and presented himself before the judge.

"'Your honor,' he remarked, 'the gentlemen of the jury want some information.'

"'On what point of evidence?' asked the judge.

"'None, judge,' was the rejoinder of the constable. 'They want to know how to spell "pneumonia."'"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

SKIN CLEARED.
By Simple Change in Food.

It has been said by a physician that most diseases are the result of indigestion.

There's undoubtedly much truth in the statement, even to the cause of many unsightly eruptions, which many suppose can be removed by applying some remedy on the outside.

By changing her food a Kan. girl was relieved of an eczema which was a great annoyance to her. She writes:

"For five months I was suffering with an eruption on my face and hands which our doctor called eczema and which caused me a great deal of inconvenience. The suffering was almost unbearable.

"The medicine I took only gave me temporary relief. One day I happened to read somewhere that eczema was caused by indigestion. Then I read that many persons had been relieved of indigestion by eating Grape-Nuts.

"I decided to try it. I liked the taste of the food and was particularly pleased to notice that my digestion was improving and that the eruption was disappearing as if by magic. I had at last found, in this great food, something that reached my trouble.

"When I find a victim of this affliction I remember my own former suffering and advise a trial of Grape-Nuts as a good 'testing' of medicines."

Terrible Dilemma.

Our friend Tom married recently, says a contributor to the Boston Transcript. His bride, being from the Pacific coast, where thunderstorms are rare and moderate, became terrified when a genuine eastern "rip-roarer" broke loose, and she sought safety in a closet.

"What's the matter?" inquired her husband.

"O Tom," she answered, half crying, half laughing, "I'm afraid to come out because of the lightning, and I'm afraid to stay in here because there's a mouse."

All in the Family.

"Then you don't think Banks is fond of his wife?"

"Not so fond as he is of her husband."

Doan's Kidney Pills help weak kidneys to drive out the uric acid which is the cause of backache, rheumatism and lumbago.

A VERMONT CASE

James M. Tracy, S. Pleasant St., Middlebury, Vt., says: "For twenty years I had kidney complaint. I suffered from rheumatic pains across my back and my bladder was badly inflamed. I had dizzy and fainting spells and my whole system was affected. I was so helpless I could hardly walk and doctor's treatment failed. Finally I took Doan's Kidney Pills and in a month they cured me."

"And Again, My Brethren!"

A certain small girl, wearily listening to a long sermon by a minister who had the odd habit of drawing in his breath with an odd whistle, whispered to her mother that she wanted to go home. The mother, expecting the discourse to end, momentarily, refused permission. The third time this happened the mother said, "I think he will stop now in a minute." To this the child answered in a clear, high voice, "No, mother, he isn't going to stop. I thought so now for three times, but he has gone and blowed himself up again."

HUERTA'S SOLDIERS HELD BY UNCLE SAM

MEN, WOMEN, CHILDREN, DOGS, CHICKENS AND CATTLE PACKED TOGETHER.

REFUGEES ARE IN DISTRESS

There Are Six Generals, 2,800 Private Soldiers and 1,500 Civilian Refugees.

Presidio, Texas.—Twenty-eight hundred Mexican federal soldiers, six generals, 200,000 rounds of ammunition, two cannon, four large field pieces and 1,500 civilian refugees are in the custody of the United States army border patrol as the result of the federal evacuation of Ojinaga, Mexico, and the occupation of the Mexican village by General Francisco Villa's rebel forces.

The distress of the refugees is intense. They have scant food and no shelter. Men, women, children, dogs, chickens and cattle are packed together in a space covering several acres. About them are scattered all the goods and baggage brought in flight from Ojinaga.

Urgent requests for the immediate removal of soldiers and refugees to some other place were sent by Major McNamee to the war department.

Other results of the rebel successes that placed General Villa's army in undisputed control of a vast section of northern Mexico are:

Federal Generals Mercado, Castro, Orpinal, Romero, Aduno and Landa are in custody of the United States troops awaiting disposition by the war department.

General Pascual Orozco and General Ynes Salazar, federal volunteer commanders, escaped along the border to some point remote from Presidio. Salazar was wounded. They were accompanied by General Caravoo and General Rojas and 300 cavalrymen. Salazar and Orozco are being watched for in the United States for indictments charging them with violating the neutrality laws.

EUGENE H. GRACE IS DEAD

Final Chapter Written in One of Greatest Georgia Tragedies.

Newnan, Ga.—Eugene Grace is dead and the final chapter has been written to the famous tragedy. The end came at his Newnan home where he has been living for months.

Around him were gathered his mother, brother, sister and stepfather and a number of relatives.

While the angel of death was hovering over Eugene Grace there came from the North the report that the woman he accuses was cherishing the hope that her husband would recover and ask her back into his sunny Southern home.

Grace was wounded March 5, 1912. Awaking about noon with a bullet in his spine, he crawled from bed to telephone police headquarters. Policemen found him unconscious in a locked bedroom of his East Eleventh street home, Atlanta, Ga. He accused his wife and she was arrested at the Terminal station on her return from her husband's home in Newnan.

Mrs. Grace declared the shooting was accidental. She faced Grace in the hospital, where he accused her before detectives, saying she shot him while he was asleep. She was jailed, but shortly after gave bond and made a trip to Philadelphia. Her trial occurred several weeks later and she was acquitted. The wounded man attended the trial on a stretcher, constantly reiterating his accusal. Upon acquittal Mrs. Grace returned to Philadelphia, where she now lives.

Wilson Departs From Southland.

Pass Christian, Miss.—After nearly three weeks of rest and recreation at a little cottage near the gulf coast here, President Wilson bade farewell to the Southland. He told Mayor Sassier and a crowd of citizens who gathered at the station to bid him Godspeed, that he had enjoyed his vacation very much and had benefited greatly by the change of climate, and had obtained exactly the rest he had desired. The president and his family got aboard his car early in the evening and had retired long before the train was due to depart.

12 Worst Boys in United States.

Chicago.—The twelve worst boys in the United States were brought together in Chicago. They will leave to establish the Last Chance Boys' Club, on a nine-acre ranch 27 miles from Reno, Nevada, where an effort will be made to make valuable citizens of them. The club is supported by Jack London, Upton Sinclair, Robert Hunter and Jack Robbins. The boys range in age from 13 to 15 years. They were selected from among nine thousand bad boys in twelve states and each is rated at more than 87 per cent. bad.

Father and Son Slain by Masked Men

Salt Lake City.—Two masked men walked into the grocery store of John G. Morrison, shot Morrison down in his tracks and then shot and instantly killed Arling Morrison, a son, who, running to the cash register of the store, had obtained a pistol and fired at the murderers. John Morrison died on the operating table at the police hospital. The shot from the boy's pistol is thought to have taken effect, as one of the murderers when running from the store was heard to gasp "He hit me."

Cato Sells, the commissioner of Indian affairs at Washington, has just outlined his program for bettering the conditions of the Indians and recovering the millions of dollars the red men have lost to the land sharps. He plans criminal prosecution of those who have robbed the red man and will compile facts for presentation to congress leading to drastic legislation to safeguard the health and wealth of the Indians. This picture shows Mr. Sells at his desk in Washington.

U. S. ARMY IS UNPREPARED

UNITED STATES SHY OF FIELD GUNS AND ALSO OF AMMUNITION.

General Wood Paints Doleful Picture of Army to Congressional Committees.

Washington.—Explaining that his judgment was not influenced by the Mexican situation, Major General Wood, chief of staff of the army, has advised committees of congress that they should appropriate $3,000,000 for field guns and ammunition.

"If you sent our troops into war as they are now, without guns or ammunition, it would be absolute slaughter," the general told the house military committee. "If called into the field suddenly, we should have to go with a small allowance of ammunition, and we should have neither guns nor ammunition enough for our field artillery forces."

General Wood, in a written statement, said:

"We neither have guns nor ammunition sufficient to give any general commanding an army in the field any assurance of success if attacked by an army of equal size which is supplied with its proper quota of field artillery.

"It is my belief that no modern warbetween first class powers will last for one year, and unless private manufacturers are encouraged to manufacture ammunition for our guns, after war is declared, they will not be in a condition to do so until after the war is finished.

"The war department believes after extended study that, in cases of war with a first class power, an army of 500,000 men will be needed to give this country any chance of success against invasion, and that this force will be needed at once."

The general suggested that the United States regular mobile army should be organized into three infantry and two cavalry divisions with an aggregate war strength of about 75,000, requiring 54 batteries, or 216 guns.

Assert Thaw Is Not Dangerous.

Concord, N. H.—The release on bail of Harry K. Thaw would not menace public safety, two of his custodians declared at a public hearing before the commission appointed by the federal court to pass upon Thaw's mental condition and its relation to his liberation under bonds. Holman A. Drew, sheriff of Coos county, and Clark D. Stevens of the local police force, who have had Thaw in charge since September, favored his admission to bail. Thaw and his mother were present with counsel.

No Cure for Cancer Yet.

In his annual report Dr. E. F. Bashford, general superintendent of research in the laboratories of the imperial cancer reasearch fund, told the members of the society that during the past year there had been 12 claims to the discovery of a cure for cancer. All of these had been investigated and no justification for any one of these claims had been obtained. Dr. Bashford also said women were more liable to cancer than men. In England and Wales in 1910 the death rate from cancer was 856 per 1,000,000 for men and 1,070 for women.

As the London Times says editorially in commenting upon this report: "The only reasonable expectation of curing cancer still rests upon its complete removal by the surgeon at the earliest possible time after it is discovered."—Medical Record.

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy. First Chinese School Book.

There are also fragments of the Chi Chiu-Chang vocabulary composed by a eunich of the palace in about the year 40, A. D. All the authentic texts of this ancient school book, widely used in the year 2 to teach Chinese children to read and write, had long since disappeared. The paper manuscripts are the oldest examples of such literature in existence. M. Chavannes has succeeded in reconstructing from these heterogeneous and more or less fragmentary and disconnected materials a fairly probable picture of the daily life of the Chinese garrisons that held these frontier posts against the Huns and kept open the trade routes to Farghana and Yarkand. The human as well as scientific interest of such a picture is manifest.

Errors of His Ways.

"A good New Year resolution for a middle-aged married man?" said George Ade at a dinner in Chicago. "Well, the best resolution a middle-aged married man could make, according to my view, would be for him to swear off telling his wife and children about the girls he used to kiss in his young days.

"I'd say to the middle-aged married man of this type:

"'Suppose, friend, your wife fell into a reminiscent, jovial mood some evening after supper and started to tell about the boys who used to kiss her by the wood stove in the dim parlor, wouldn't the dove of peace flap her wings and light out p. d. q. just?'"

MAKES AIM ALMOST CERTAIN

Invention Said to Guarantee Every Shot a Bullseye, Even in the Dark.

Charles Pechard, a police official of Paris, has invented an attachment that enables one to shoot a revolver more accurately in the dark than in broad daylight, the New York Independent states.

This attachment consists of a metallic tube with a lens at one end and a tiny electric lamp at the other. By means of mirrors the light is directed out through the lens as a slender cone, and is sufficiently strong at a distance of some four rods for all practical purposes. In the middle of the illuminated field there is a small dark spot which coincides with the line of the bullet's flight. This enables the inexperienced shooter to hit a selected part of the burglar's anatomy with more certainty than he could display in ordinary target practice.

The electric current is supplied by a small dry battery or a storage battery, which the officer can carry in his pocket or which the defender of the home can place under his pillow. The light tube can be attached to an ordinary pistol, and it may be used as a flash with peaceful intent or merely as a show of force.

Calumet the Secret of Economy

The high cost of living nowadays, and the way prices are steadily climbing skywards, is making economy in the kitchen even more important than it was in the good old days of our thrifty ancestors. But how to achieve economy? There's the rub!

In many lines, it depends almost entirely on the housewife's knowledge of foods and on her watchfulness—but fortunately, in one line, baking, economy can be made almost automatic by the use of the famous Calumet Baking Powder.

Economy in baking, as every good cook knows, depends not so much on economy in buying the materials as on the success of her bakings. Failures mean waste—bigger losses by far than the savings she makes in buying. And the fact that Calumet absolutely prevents failures and makes every baking successful has made it the favorite of every cook that seeks to be economical. In other words, Calumet is the secret of economy in baking.

It is the purest, too—attested by hundreds of leading physicians—and as for its general quality, it is enough to say that Calumet has received the highest awards at two World's Pure Food Expositions—one in Chicago, Ill., and the other in Paris, France, in March, 1912. Adv.

SNOW REALLY A BLESSING

It has been said before. Let it be said again. The snow that you swept from your walks, that sifted down your collars, that got into your hair, your eyes, your tempers, is worth a million dollars to the agriculturists of Colorado. To the dry farmer who plows it into his soil it will bring rewards in a next year's bank account. Lying in the mountains it will flow down the ditches to the irrigationists next season. On ranch, in orchard and truck garden it means moisture and money. To the city it means health that always comes from seasonable weather. Wade through it with a smile on your lips, shovel it with song in your heart, roll it into balls and throw at your neighbor with a laugh and a cheery word. It spells temporary inconvenience and future prosperity—and a white Christmas for the public tree that brought all Denver—all Colorado—into that new, better, greater, get-together bond of friendship and work.—Denver Times.

Indians First "Cubists" (?)

"Lone Star," art instructor in the United States Indian service, claims that "cubist" art originated with the American Indian some 200 years ago. Among his collection of Indian art, says American Art News, specimens in the common figure of the eagle shaped square and totally unlike an eagle, yet immediately impressing the observer that it is one, which, declares "Lone Star," is the height of the "Cubist" art.

Good Bowels Are An Aid to Growth

Growing Children Need a Mild Laxative to Foster Regular Bowel Movement.

As a child grows older it requires more and more personal attention from the mother, and as the functions of the bowels are of the utmost importance to health, great attention should be paid to them.

Diet is of great importance, and the mother should watch the effect of certain foods. A food will constipate one and not another, and so we have a healthy food like eggs causing biliousness to thousands, and a wholesome fruit like bananas constipating many. It is also to be considered that the child is growing, and great changes are taking place in the young man or young woman. The system has not yet settled itself to its later routine.

A very valuable remedy at this stage, and one which every growing boy and girl should be given often or occasionally, according to the individual circumstances, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a laxative and tonic combined, so mild that it is given to little babies, and yet equally effective in the most robust constitution. At the first sign of a tendency to constipation give a small dose of Syrup Pepsin at night on retiring, and prompt action will follow in the morning. It not only acts on the stomach and bowels but its tonic properties build up and strengthen the system generally, which is an opinion shared by Mr. John Dey of Bloomfield, N. J. He has a large family and at ages where the growth and development must be watched. Little Marie has thrived especially well on Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Mr. Dey considers it the right laxative for young and old and has found none better for young children.

The use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will teach you to avoid cathartics, salts and pills, as they are too harsh for the majority and their effect is only temporary. Syrup Pepsin brings permanent results, and it can be conveniently obtained of any nearby druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

Dummies Arrested.

Dummies used by a Pathe director in an auto wreck at South River, N. J., had the distinction of being shot at and arrested by Chief of Police Oppenberger of that place recently, according to a New Brunswick newspaper. The dummies, when not in use, were placed in the store room of the Washington hotel. Some jokers told the chief that some men were stealing cigars from the store room, and when he arrived and saw the dim figures in the darkness he called upon them repeatedly to surrender. Receiving no answer he blazed away at them several times before he discovered the joke.

GAS, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" settles sour, gassy stomachs in five minutes—Time It!

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any dealer and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.—Adv.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

FOR STATE SENATOR.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the Senate of Alabama from the the Fifteenth district, composed of the counties of Chilton, Shelby and Autauga, subject to the action of the Democratic primary.

W. W. Wallace

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the democratic primary to be held on April 6, 1914. W. F. FALLON.

Only 16 more days left in which to pay poll tax.

The disastrous fire at Thorsby a few days ago should awaken our citizens to the great need of water works.

Hon. Oscar W. Underwood, after a ten days speaking engagement in Alabama, has returned to Washington to resume his duties in furthering legislation in congress.

Now that the State Executive Committee has named April 6 as the day for the primary, it is high time candidates were coming out for the different county offices.

The police probe which was in progress in Birmingham for several days came to an end on Tuesday, the city commission ordering the removal of Chief of Police Bodeker.

Governor O'Neal on Wednesday appointed Associate Justice John C. Anderson as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, to succeed Chief Justice Dowdell, resigned. Judge W. L. Pitts of Uniontown was appointed to succeed Judge Anderson.

The entry of Hon. Thomas A. Curry into the race for Lieutenant Governor is gratifying news to his many friends in Chilton. Senator Curry is one of the leading lawyers in this section of Alabama; an ideal exponent of parliamentary law, he will make an able preiding officer of the Senate.

It makes no differencs whether you are for Underwood or Hobson, you cannot have any voice in the government of the State's affairs unless you pay your poll tax. Get busy.

The association will have headquarters at the Gay-Teague Hotel and the Business Men's League. The meetings will be held in three sections which are composed of live stock enthusiasts, general farming experts and agricultural commissioners of the Southern states. General meetings will also be held.

Among the prominent speakers to be heard during the meeting are Dr. C. A. Cary of Auburn, president of the association; B. W. Kilgore of Raleigh, N. C., secretary of the organization; Dr. Warren of Cornell university; Dr. Hopkins, late of the University of Illinois, but now director of agriculture of the Southern Settlement and Development organization of Baltimore; Dr. M. Dorset, of the department of agriculture; Prof. Dan T. Gray, of Raleigh, N. C.; Dr. George White, state veterinarian of Tennessee.

Anderson May Be Chief Justice.

Indications point to the elevation of Judge John C. Anderson to the position of chief justice of the Alabama supreme court. The office has heretofore gone to the senior judge of the court, and since Judge Anderson is the ranking officer, it is predicted that the governor will elevate him to the chief justiceship.

It is stated that the remaining five associate justices of the supreme court have expressed a choice for Judge Anderson, and it is probable that the governor will give him the appointment.

As a successor of Judge Anderson, a number of prominent attorneys throughout the state have been suggested, many of whom occupy judicial positions. Foremost of those mentioned is Judge John Pelham, associate justice of the court of appeals, who is believed to stand an excellent chance for the appointment.

However, many other lawyers have been suggested for appointment on the supdeme court bench.

Boyd Heads Engineers.

R. P. Boyd, assistant state highway engineer, was elected president of the Alabama Association of Railway Engineers, which met in annual session at the capital. The annual meeting of the association was attended by 35 persons interested in highway construction work.

The address of welcome was delivered by W. P. Moore, president of the association and engineer of Lauderdale county, Mississippi.

Savely Appointed Agent.

H. E. Savely of Washington, general field agent of the United States department of agriculture, has been made supervisor of farm demonstration work in Alabama, to serve until a successor of B. L. Moss, state Democratic agent, is selected.

Brown for Court of Appeals.

Col. J. B. Brown, an attorney of Cullman, announced that he would be a candidate for justice of the appellate court. Mr. Brown will oppose Judge Percy Thomas.

Oates Scores Florence Jail.

Declaring that the city of Florence has one room as city prison and that men and women are confined together, Dr. William H. Oates, state prison inspector, reported to the governor that the conditions had no equal since he became head of the department of inspection. He was sent to Florence by the governor after Mayor N. P. Morrison refused to release Mrs. Ella Parish, who is serving 200 days' imprisonment for violating the prohibition laws.

New Depot for Winfield.

Frisco officials announced improvements and additions to be made in stations along the line, in the course of the hearing before the railroad commission. The commission was assured plans had been perfected and arrangements made for construction of a new station at Winfield. The station will cost $3,000 and will be modern in every respect. This amount will be exclusive of equipment. The latest style of station furniture and fittings will be added, as soon as the building is completed.

Reports on State's Finances.

Examiner of Public Accounts J. T. Gorman in a statement giving a financial review of the state since 1861, recommends that all tax assessments be made on a basis of 100 per cent.

This, he says, is the best method of solving all questions of revenue and as a sure means of providing sufficient funds with which to meet all the obligations of the state.

Examiner Gorman's financial review is the most comprehensive statement of its kind that has been issued during the present administration and gives a complete analysis of the conditions which have confronted the state during the past 53 years.

At the time of the secession of the state in 1861, Alabama had a bonded indebtedness of $5,000,000, which originated, according to the examiner, in the state's connection with the old state bank.

During the nine years following the close of the war, the state's indebtedness was increased $25,000,000, which in 1876 was compromised for $9,705,678.

An interesting item of Examiner Gorman's statement shows that the rate of state taxation between 1874 and 1912 has varied from four mills to seven and one-half mills, and that the tax assessment in 1913 was "practically $600,000,000 on a 60 per cent. basis, which would mean $840,000,000 valuation on a 100 per cent. basis."

The examiner then asks: "Does this represent the real valuation of the real and personal property in Alabama? Are its 32,500,000 acres of valuable fertile lands, its thousands of mules, horses and cattle, its railroads, banks and other corporations, its manufacturing establishments, it prosperous towns and cities, its inexhaustible mineral resources, and its population of 2,250,000 energetic, enterprising and intelligent people worth less than $1,500,000,000?"

Continuing, he says: "It seems that the best solution of the problem of taxation and providing sufficient revenue to meet the expenses of the state is to place the assessment on a 100 per cent. basis. If this were done, not only would sufficient revenue be raised, but the tax rate could be reduced one-half and the tax-payers would pay no more taxes than they do now."

Examiner Gorman declares that it would be a magnificent advertisement for Alabama to have $1,500,000,000 valuation on property and a tax rate of 30 or 35 cents on the $100. "Alabama's development and advancement have been phenomenal," he states, "and it is rapidly increasing in wealth and population."

He maintains that the state should invite capital, encourage immigration and the development of all business enterprises. He recommends a "good first class business legislature that will give these matters the consideration that will adjust the receipts and disbursements so there will be no deficits."

Examiner Gorman calls attention to the large appropriations made by the legislature of 1907—appropriations which were largely in excess of the receipts. "The total receipts of 1907, 1908, 1909 and 1910 were $18,712,746.20, and the disbursements $20,233,874.53, an excess of $1,521,108.33 over-receipts, an average of $380,277.08 annually," he says.

Committee Adopts Majority Rule.

Amidst the ringing cheers of a thousand representative Alabama citizens from every part of the state "majority rule" was upheld by the State Democratic Executive Committee by a vote of 23 to 19, the committee selected the majority method of choosing the Democratic nominees after a spirited and spectacular fight between the "majority rule" forces and the "plurality plan" adherents. Two primaries will be held, if necessary, to determine the choice of the party, the first being on April 6 and the second on May 11.

Resolutions providing for the exclusion of all non-Democrats from participation in the primaries were adopted at the beginning of the session. These resolutions were drawn up and introduced by Kelly Dixon of Talladega and passed unanimously. The resolution of Mr. Dixon provides that only white Democratic electors, qualified under the state law, shall take part in the primary. No person who opposed the Democratic electors and Democratic nominees in the general election held November 5, 1912, will be permitted to vote in the primaries, according to the resolution.

Alabama Regiments Standardized.

As soon as a new company at Bay Minette, just authorized by Adjt.-Gen. J. B. Scully, has been mustered in, Alabama's three infantry regiments will have the standard of strength required under the new war department rules. Under the rules each regiment must have twelve companies. The Second and the Fourth regiments attained the standard during December. The first regiment will have twelve companies when the Bay Minette company has been made a reality.

Ejected From Train; Sues.

Declaring he was ejected from a passenger train after he had paid passage from East St. Louis to Montgomery, J. E. Laney entered suit against the Louisville & Nashville railroad for $2,999.99 damages. The plaintiff avers he bought passage to Montgomery and that after leaving Nashville he decided to leave the Pullman car which he occupied. The conductor, he claims, refused to deliver him his ticket and ejected him from the train on the grounds that he had paid no passage.

RATE HEARING IS TO BE HELD FEB. 2

L. & N. RAILROAD ASKS TO HAVE CLASSIFICATION 39 EFFECTIVE.

WOULD AFFECT WHOLE STATE

The Alabama Classification is Known as 35 and Has Withstood Two Attempts to Change It.

Birmingham. — Hearing on the petition of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, acting for all lines in Alabama, for permission to increase freight rates, will be held before the railroad commission February 2, according to announcement made by J. T. Slatter, manager of the freight bureau of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

The petition requests the commission to set aside the existing Alabama classification and adopt Southern Classification No. 39. This classification is in general use on interstate traffic, having gone into effect November 1, 1912.

The Alabama classification is known as number 35. It has been in operation since the state railroad commission was formed and has withstood two attempts to change it. Mr. Slatter said the adoption of Classification 39 would have a direct bearing upon the whole population of Alabama.

COAL PRODUCTION OF STATE.

Estimated 1913 Output Will Go Beyond 17,500,000 Tons.

Birmingham.—While the bulk of Alabama's largest coal production for 1913, which it is estimated, will go beyond 17,500,000 tons, will be made by the large corporations' output, the smaller companies all over the State will score very satisfying increases. Notices of these increases are being received daily from the small companies by Chief State Mine Inspector.

He is particularly proud that the year just completed will display a gradual and steady climbing upward of the little concerns who have one or two openings, only a very few of these showing decreases from their record for 1912. The output cards mailed by the chief mine inspector began to be returned on New Year's Day and are very encouraging in their statistics thus far.

Shortage of cars is held responsible by Chief Nesbitt for Alabama's output in 1912 not going to 18,000,000 tons, but a lull in the market during the last six months of 1913 was the greatest contributing factor for last year's not going higher in its coal figures.

"It is a well known fact that at the beginning of 1913, for the first six months, the orders were so heavy that every mine was running full time," said Chief Nesbitt.

"The railroad companies, the steam and furnace trade and other sources were stocking up and so along in August everybody had stored away sufficient coal to last them for a while.

"Then there came a lull in orders for the mines and the output for the last six months of 1913 was considerably lower than for the first half. I should say that about 75 per cent of the obstacle to a larger output for this year was quietness in demand and about 25 per cent due to car shortage. But in 1912, the greatest trouble was lack of cars.

"The last year will show a very marked increase in production of coke for Alabama. This product will make a splendid showing for 1912."

NEW RAILROAD FOR DECATUR.

Rumored That Line Now Terminating at Lax Will Be Extended.

Decatur.—It is currently reported that the line of railroad, owned and operated at this time for the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway from Fayetteville, Tenn., to Lax, Ala., may be extended on to Decatur. This road was built several years ago by the D. C. and N. O. railway and at one time was graded to the Tennessee river opposite Decatur, but was only built as far south as Lax, which is about 18 miles north of Decatur.

The rumor says that this road wants to come to Decatur to connect with the Louisville and Nashville and the southern railroads, and the Tennessee river.

MEXICAN REFUGEES SENT TO FORT BLISS

300 OFFICERS AND MEN, AND 1500 CIVILIANS ARE ON AMERICAN SIDE.

UNDERTAKING IS DIFFICULT

Order Follows Lengthy Consultation Between Garrison and Wood—Hold Refugees Prisoners.

Washington.—All the Mexican federal soldiers now in custody of the United States border patrol forces at Presidio, Tex., will be transferred to Fort Bliss and interned there indefinitely. Secretary Garrison ordered the transfer with permission to the refugee women and children to accompany the soldiers if they desire.

About 3000 Mexican officers and men fled across the Rio Grande when the victorious constitutionalists entered Ojinaga, and with them some 1500 civilian refugees. The civilians are not prisoners and will be allowed to go where they wish, though those desiring to remain on American territory will have to satisfy the immigration officers.

With Presidio 60 miles from the nearest railroad, it will be a difficult undertaking to get the army of prisoners to its haven. Brigadier General Bliss will march his visitors northward to Marfa and there put them aboard trains for Fort Bliss, near El Paso. The thousand or more horses brought over probably will be used on the journey of five or six days, as there will have to be wagons for the sick and wounded, women and children and the baggage. Secretary Garrison determined to hold the refugees, after an hour's consultation with Counsellor Moore of the state department, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff, and Brigadier General Crowder, judge advocate general of the army. His action is in continuation of the policy adopted months ago in disposing of federals who crossed into Arizona from Nogales, Sonora and into Brownsville, Tex., from Matamoras, Tamali Pass. Some of the constitutionalists soldiers who were driven across the line at other points, were disarmed and allowed to "filter back" into Mexico, when the coast was clear. For the present, however, there will be no more "filtering back," Secretary Garrison announced, either of federals or constitutionalists.

The secretary decided that women and children of Mexican soldiers in Texas should be allowed to remain with them in their detention camp and their immediate wants in the matter of food and shelter should be provided for by the army.

SAYS STRIKE REPORT IS UNFAIR.

President of Michigan Mining Company Takes Issue With Commission.

Boston.—President Quincy A. Shaw, of the Calumet and Hecla Mining company, in a statement issued, takes issue with the report of the government commission, made public, on the strike in Michiga in which the Calumet and other mining companies are involved. He imputes the motives of the investigators in making public the report at this time and intimates that it was colored in favor of the strikers. Mr. Shaw said in part:

"After Secretary Wilson's speech in Seattle it was to be expected that his subordinates would make a report which would be highly colored in favor of the strikers. The publication of the report is calculated to assist the sotrike leaders in arousing false sympathy through misrepresentations. So far as it contains information given by the companies the report could have been published months ago, if there was any genuine desire to have the public know the conditions under which the men worked.

"Extracts from the report which appear in the papers, if accurately quoted, contain many misstatements."

Admits Poisoning Three Wives.

Frankfort-on-Main.—The plea of "not guilty" was entered by Carl Hopf, druggist and fencing master, when brought up for trial for killing his two children, his father and first wife by administering poison, and with attempting to commit suicide, and with attempting to commit similar crimes on his second and third wives, and another person. The accused admitted that he had given a poisonous drug to his three successive wives, ostensibly as a means of improving their looks. To his third wife he had also given fever germs.

At the police station he admitted the theft. Sauty is 23 years old, and was employed as a clerk in the office of the express company. The clew to his flight from Fort Smith came from a newly purchased motorcycle, which he abandoned on the Arkansas river bank.

An Old Man Wearing Army Button Shines Shoes

WASHINGTON.—Have you seen him? And did you have to swallow a lump? Maybe you have missed him so far, for he doesn't stay put. His business requires circulation. And, besides, you can't stay still in November when you have no overcoat. You've just naturally got to keep going.

Yesterday he was down by the soldiers' monument—an army button on his coat and a shoe brush in his hand—waiting and waiting—until Providence came by in the shape of a man with one of those loud, cheery voices that God gives to many men, but which only Dickens could describe.

"Why, bless my soul! Where did you get that old kit? Give me a shine."

He put a foot on the small shoe-shine box. Remember when the kiddies used to shine 'em up on the streets? Gee, it's a long time back! And, the other man creaked his joints into a crouch and proceeded to put on a polish.

To a woman who had happened along it did not seem probable that a customer wearing as good clothes as a tailor can make would really enjoy having his shoes smeared over with blacking that you can bet your life wasn't Day & Martin's, or that he wanted them scratched up with a cheap brush by a wavering hand. Still, you can't always rely on the sex supposings of a spinster soul whose only knowledge of man has been of the mail—note the spelling, please—mail correspondence variety. Anyhow, whatever his reason, the man put one foot and then the other on the box and told the other man about how he used to be a bootblack—before the shoe-shine kiddies vanished with the coming of the asphalt. And did it pay? And wouldn't it be better to get something more profitable and sheltered from the weather—a watchman's place, for instance? Any man who had fought for a flag ought to be fit to guard a store.

The woman had to leave them there, so that she can never know how the job turned out, but——

If you don't come across an old man with a gone-by shoe box on his back, waiting around for a chance to shine 'em up, you may know that he's got a job as a watchman.

Congressman Finds His Boyhood's Wish Fulfilled

REPRESENTATIVE CLAUDE WEAVER of Oklahoma finds in his coming to congress the fulfillment of a wish expressed ever since he was nine years old. At that age he began his dairy with the statement that he was hours on his hands, decided to go out in the suburbs and rehearse his oration. He selected a secluded spot on the road along which ran a long, high brick wall, with a gate at the end. Weaver did not know it, but this was the state lunatic asylum.

Up and down the road he paced, talking most vehemently, gesticulating wildly to an imaginary determined to be one of the nation's representatives. And ever since then he has worked with this object in view.

Weaver settled in Oklahoma when there were few white people living there. But in one of his trips in Texas, to deliver a political speech, he had an adventure which seemed at the time much more serious than it does now. He reached the town to which he was billed and, as he had a few audience, shaking his head and pounding one hand upon the other. People who passed shook their heads sadly.

Presently, as he neared the great iron gate, four uniformed men rushed out, grabbed him by the arms and legs and carried him, kicking and fighting, inside the grounds. Weaver, choking with rage, demanded an explanation of such an outrage.

"Aw, g'wan!" chortled one of the brawny guards, setting Weaver on his feet with a jerk. "What you handing us—we knows you is one of them bugs outen ward C."

"Lunatic!" yelled Weaver, who now saw into what spot he had landed. "Lunatic? Why, I am a politician and expect to go to congress!"

"Well," drawled the guard, with a grin, "I don't know but what you've got to just the same kind of place now!"

Senator Went to Capitol Only Half Dressed

THEY are telling this story on John R. Thornton, senator from Louisiana: Thornton arose absent-mindedly, dressed himself fully, he thought, and went into the dining room of his hotel for breakfast. The head waiter grinned at him a bit, but the senator, who was in a hurry, failed to notice it.

He just caught a street car bound for the capitol and plumped himself between Postmaster General Burleson and Edward Keating, representative from Colorado.

"See you're dressed for hot weather," commented the postmaster.

"Yes," he said; "we of the south learn to do that."

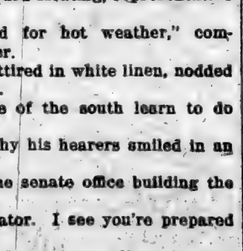
And he wondered why his hearers smiled in an embarrassed manner.

When he reached the senate office building the elevator man said:

"Good morning, senator. I see you're prepared for the heat."

This rather puzzled Senator Thornton, for he always wears linen in summer. The explanation of it all came when his son Gordon, who is also his secretary, saw him.

"Say, father," he yelled as Senator Thornton entered his office. "What on earth did you do with your collar?"



Thornton grabbed at his neck wildly. He had on neither collar nor tie.

He hustled his son back on the hotel for the necessary articles of raiment and then sat down and wrote apologies to both the postmaster and Mr. Keating, telling them that he hadn't intentionally gone downtown in the street car with them half dressed; it was only an oversight.

"I intend to talk to that waiter in the hotel," he moaned, sadly. "Why didn't he tell me I was only half dressed?"

Representative Slemp Finds an Agent of Cupid

REPRESENTATIVE BASCOM SLEMP of Virginia was until recently a bachelor. A few years ago, however, when he was "heart whole and fancy free," he was speaking to a large assembly at a political gathering. The audience was full of handsome women and pretty girls who were, of course, much interested in the tariff when it is explained by a young bachelor who lived in official Washington.

Slemp got along famously, carrying with him the sympathy of the crowd. But at last a fellow in a back seat rose to make a statement.

"I like Slemp," he roared. "Slemp's all right. The only thing I have agin him is that he is not married. Now, I propose to this honorable gathering that we refuse to vote for him unless he promises to git married."

Slemp was equal to the occasion.

"I acknowledge my desolate state," he exclaimed, "yet it is not my fault, but that of the fair ones who will not have me. If there is any one among the many lovely ladies in this audience who will accept my heart and hand, I am only too willing to be led to the altar."

The man jumped to his feet again excitedly.

"No, you don't," he exclaimed. "You'll have to go to Europe to get your bride—all the girls around here are married."

ANTI-TRUST LAWS DRAFTED

Sweeping Reforms Proposed in Bills Drawn Up.

Washington.—A general outline of the tentative draft of anti-trust legislation prepared by majority members of the house committee on the judiciary for action by the full committee, subject to a conference with President, Wilson, has become known here.

While members of the committee talked with the president some weeks ago the proposed bills so far have not the administration stamp, and they will be discussed at a conference between the president and the committee immediately following the president's return.

The bills, drafted after conference between Chairman Clayton, Representative Carlin of Virginia, chairman of the trust sub-committee, and Representatives Floyd of Arkansas, McCoy of New Jersey and others, cover these three main points:

1. Interlocking directorates.
2. Trade relations and prices.
3. Injunction proceedings and damage suits by individuals.

4 United States Seamen Drown.

Norfolk, Va. — The capsizing in Hampton Roads of a motor cutter from the battleship Wyoming, flagship of the Atlantic fleet, resulted in the loss of the lives of four seamen of the Wyoming's crew. The accident occurred near the very spot where a launch from the battleship Minnesota went down in 1907 with the loss of eleven lives, mostly young midshipmen returning to the Minnesota in a storm after midnight following a social affair at the Jamestown Exposition grounds.

Three Dead and 25 Hurt.

Macon, Ga.—Three lives were lost and more than twenty-five persons injured, six of whom are seriously hurt, in a wreck of passenger train No. 1, on the Georgia Southern and Florida railroad, 90 miles south of Macon. The wreck was on Gum Creek trestle. After the locomotive and baggage cars passed over a broken rail, the day coach appeared to have been lifted and then dropped down on the bridge, and ... POWERS REACH AGREEMENT

UNITED STATES MUST ASSUME CERTAIN OBLIGATIONS IN MEXICO.

Free Hand for the United States So Long as Lives and Property for Foreigners Are Guarded.

Washington.—Frequent conferences between ambassadors and ministers here are tending to unite them on a line of conduct regarding Mexico, which, while conforming to the plans of the United States, involves an understanding as to obligations the American government will be expected to assume as the result of non-interference by foreign powers.

This common understanding has not taken the form of direct pressure, but the state department is kept informed through the medium of individual representatives of the expectations of the European powers. Generally these relate to the protection of financial interests which citizens and subjects of the powers have in Mexico. No intention to bring in the political side of the question is indicated.

More than one diplomatic representative here has informed the department that his own government was interested in preventing financial loss to its citizens, and beyond that did not care what the United States did in Mexico so long as it was informed in time to take precautions for the protection of the lives of its citizens.

75 LABORERS MEET DEATH

Flatboat on Which They Were Being Transported Was Wrecked.

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—Dashed to death on the rocks in the Fraser river, British Columbia, or swept to their doom by the swift current, was the fate of 75 laborers employed by the Grand Trunk Pacific railroad, according to Angele Pugliese, one of 25 who managed to escape when the flatboat in which they were being transported across the river was wrecked on a rock.

Pugliese reached Winnipeg and says the 25 who escaped were all injured. The tragedy occurred in British Columbia, west of Fort George.

Pugliese says a change in location of the work necessitated crossing the Fraser river. The 100 laborers put away from shore in a frail craft, which became unmanageable.

Man Who Arrested Czolgosz Dead.

Kansas City.—John McCauley, who arrested Leon F. Czolgosz, after the latter had shot President McKinley at Buffalo, N. Y., died here. At the time of the assassination McCauley was a police sergeant in charge of eleven patrolmen who were to assist secret service men in guarding the president.

American Athletes Break Records.

San Francisco, Cal.—According to cables, Power of the Boston Athletic association and Templeton of the San Francisco Olympic club, members of the All-American track team, broke records in the meet at Wellington, New Zealand. Power established a New Zealand 880-yard record with 1 minute 58 seconds, a fifth better than the record made by Burke in 1906. Templeton broke the New Zealand and Australian pole vault record, leading 11 feet and 2 inches, which displaces the former mark of 11 feet.

24 Men Doomed to Pen.

Chicago.—Sentences of twenty-four of the labor union officials convicted in Indianapolis of conspiracy to transport dynamite were confirmed by the United States circuit court of appeals of the seventh district. Six of the thirty-one who appealed were granted new trials. Counsel for the twenty-four within thirty days will petition the court of appeals for a rehearing of the case. If this is denied counsel will ... [illegible]

Highway Improvement

NORTH CAROLINA GOOD ROADS

Improved Thoroughfares Tend to Prosperity of Farmers and Saving of Time Is Considerable.

(By N. BUCKNER.)

Throughout the mountain region of western North Carolina the good roads sentiment has attained proportions and gathered such impetus as to sweep aside objections to expenditures for good roads, which is usually the case in all progressive movements of great moment. The movement had its inception in Asheville, North Carolina, when the Asheville and Buncombe County Good Roads association was organized by a few public spirited men who realized the loss to this beautiful mountain country by reason of lack of good roads which made it impossible for not only the people of this section, but the tourists and visitors from going from one point to another.

Immediately after the organization of this association, it raised $5,000 by subscription and regraded and macadamized the road from Asheville to Biltmore, a distance of a little more than two miles. This one piece of work in itself demonstrated to the citizens that good roads could be built in the mountains and it stimulated all thinking citizens to further effort.

At the present time, macadam and sand clay roads have been and are being actively constructed throughout the entire "Land of the Sky" region in western North Carolina, there already being hundreds of miles of splendid hard surfaced roads winding about the mountains, across hills and valleys from one section to another. The immediate territory surrounding Asheville is covered with a veritable network of good roads which are of the greatest benefit to the farmers of the country and to the business people of the city, and of especial delight to the throngs of visitors both winter and summer to this most delightful all the year around resort.

Adjoining counties have caught the spirit and forces may be found building macadam and sand clay roads in all sections. To the south Buncombe county has just completed macadamizing the highway to the Henderson county line, connecting at that point with a most splendidly graded road to Hendersonville, a charming and delightful summer resort, and from that point south to the Polk county line across Saluda mountain to Spartanburg, South Carolina, connecting with the national highway to Atlanta. This road is the finest and outlet for automobiles visiting in the "Land of the Sky," many hundreds of which are here during the year. The enterprising citizens of Polk and Henderson counties are rivaling and rebuilding the road up ... [illegible]

MOTHER! LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Park for Millionaires.

Plans for the transformation at an enormous cost of the 14,000-acre Palos Verdes ranch, overlooking Los Angeles harbor and the Catalina channel, into one of the most magnificent residential parks in the nation for American millionaires, are being made. Frank A. Vanderlip of the National City bank of New York and his associates recently purchased the tract for $1,750,000 for this purpose. The plans as they now stand promise to involve an expenditure of $5,000,000.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Beautify Your Hair! Make It Soft, Fluffy and Luxuriant—Try the Moist Cloth.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all. Adv.

How He Made It Out.

Mrs. Jones and Johnny had only a few minutes ago boarded the train when the conductor called for "tickets." Mrs. Jones immediately produced hers.

"How old is your boy, madam?"

Quick as a flash Johnny was down between the seats on his head and the mother replied, "Six years old." As this procedure was not understood, and as Johnny looked too large for six years, the conductor said, "I did not understand you, madam." Johnny grinned and spoke out proudly, "Don't you know that nine turned upside down is six?"

FACE FULL OF PIMPLES

Ruffin, N. C.—"My face became full of pimples and blackheads, and would itch, burn and smart. The skin was rough and red. I was really ashamed of my face. My arms and back were affected almost as badly. The pimples would fester and there would come a dry scab on top. The trouble caused my face to be disfigured badly and the itching would bother me so I could not sleep well nights, especially during warm weather.

"The trouble lasted me three long years without anything doing me any good until a friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and then I decided to try them. After the first application I could see some improvement. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment two weeks I did not look like the same person; most of the pimples had disappeared. At the end of four weeks I was completely cured." (Signed) Miss Mamie Mitchell, Jan. 9, 1913.

A FINE OPENING

Mr. J. T. Morgan, the popular grocer, proposed to his porters, Sol and Will, that the one who could show the biggest mouth should receive a handsome Christmas present. Sol was the first to go on exhibition, and when he opened up, all the by-standers were agreed that he was a formidable contestant for the prize. But when Will expanded the opening in the lower part of his face, his able competitor stood aghast. At length, in hepless wonderment, he exclaimed: "If de Lord had'nt wheld a mighty steady hand when he made dat nigger's mouth, he shore would 'er cut his head plum off."

IS CHAMPION OFFICE HOLDER

Eben K. Long of Omaha Has Been Elected 179 Times and Defeated Once Only.

Omaha.—The champion office holder of the country has resigned because of old age and deafness. Eben K. Long of Omaha has been elected to office 179 times.

"And I never yet asked any man to vote for me," he says.

Mr. Long has been a candidate 180 times, and only once was he defeated, and that was so long ago that he has almost forgotten it. Many of his offices have been in fraternal lodges; others have been city and county offices.

Judge Long, now eighty-seven years old, has been a justice of the peace in Omaha for the last twenty-one years, during which time 10,240 cases came before him for trial. Scarcely an election has been held in Omaha for half a century that the name Eben K. Long has not appeared on the Republican ticket.

Eben K. Long was born in Newburyport, Mass., in 1836. He says he expects to live to the century mark.

In 1855 Long came to Cincinnati and from there to Omaha, where he has resided even since. But long before he left Massachusetts he held office in the Masonic fraternity. In Massachusetts he rode on the first train that ever ran a completed railroad in this country. That was the old Boston & Lowell.

In Cincinnati he held office in various lodges and fraternal societies, but it was not until he came to Omaha early in the sixties that he was elected to public office. Omaha was only a collection of mud huts and Indian tepees when Judge Long was elected city auditor. When he came up for re-election he was defeated by Charles Goodrich, the only defeat he ever suffered. Afterward he was elected to the school board, of which he served seventeen years, two terms as chairman of the board. In 1891 he was elected a justice of the peace, which office he held until he resigned.

HON. CHAS. HENDERSON DELIVERS ADDRESS AT CLANTON

The Hon. Charles Henderson, candidate for Governor, addressed a large assemblage of Chilton county democrats on Monday last. The speaker made a splendid impression. He emphasized the necessity of economy in the management of the State's financial affairs, and denounced the reckless expenditure of the school funds in building expensive "Halls" for the children of the rich, and thereby depriving the children of the rural districts of their just share of the state's school funds. He denounced the expenditure of $300,000 of the state's money in the employment of lawyers to defend unsuccessfully, the railroad rate cases. He denounced the burdensome and unjust system of taxing the "small fish", (the poorer classes) in order to catch the "big trout" (the rich men and the corporations.)

He promised to administer the affairs of the state in an economical and business-like manner, and give to the people a truly democratic government—"the greatest good to the greatest number." His address was well received, and the speaker was frequently interrupted with applause. Mr. Henderson is rapidly gaining strength in Chilton.

DON'T BE AN ALABAMA FARMER

"The average Alabama farmer buys canned and dried fruits—likewise other canned and dried goods. He gets up at the alarm of a Conneticut clock, fastens his Chicago suspenders to his Detroit overalls, washes his face with Cincinnati soap, in a Pensylvania washpan, sits down to a Grand Rapids table, and eats Indiana hominy fried in St. Joseph lard, on a St. Louis stove. Then he puts a St. Louis bridle on a Tennessee mule and plows a farm covered by an Ohio mortgage. When bedtime comes he reads a Bible printed in Chicago, says a prayer written in Jarusalem, and crawls under a New Jersey blanket, only to be kept awake by an Alabama dog, which is about the only home-raised product on the place."

DEMOCRATIC EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETS

LET DOWN THE BARS; MAJORITY PLAN ADOPTED

At a meeting of the Democratic Executive committee on last Saturday, most every committeeman was present. More interest was manifested at this meeting than at any previous meeting in the history of the party in Chilton county. The strange part of it al was that the meeting, from beginning to end, was free from factions. All came there with one idea in view—to put up a solid front in the coming campaign with the progressives. Men that had never attended the meetings of the Committee before were there to see that the principles of democracy were carried out, and to give their advice and co-operation in anything that needed the attention of the Committee. Short speeches were made; enthusiasm reigned supreme. It was predicted that with the present administration in the saddle at Washington refuting the charges that have heretofore been made by the office-seeking progressives and republicans in the county, a democratic landslide will be the result. One over-enthusiastic fellow said: "By the time Woodrow Wilson gets through with the progressives and republicans in the county, there won't be enough left to go to the funeral." Every man present seemed to be confident that all that was necessary to elect a full county ticket at our next general election, was to nominate them.

A resolution inviting all white men in Chilton county to come into our primary, and vote our ticket, who will pledge themselves to support the nominees of said primary elections, was passed, and it was predicted that at least five hundred men who have heretofore voted with the progressives and republicans, or not voting at all, will take advantage of this opportunity to get back into the party that is now doing the country the greatest service that has been rendered since the Civil war.

Candidates in the coming primary were assessed the following amounts:

State Senator, $25; State Representative, $25; Sheriff, $25; Commissioners, $10.

E. M Pinckard, Sam A. Latham and Barney M. Roberts.

Barney M. Roberts was elected Secretary and Treasurer.

The next meeting of the Committee was called for Saturday, March 7th.

GEN. LEE'S ANNIVERSARY AT SOLDIER'S HOME.

The anniversary of General R. E. Lee was fittingly observed at the Soldier's Home, near Mountain Creek, on January 19th.

Camp 1711 U. C. V., assembled and, on being called to order by Captain W. J. Bethune, transacting some routine business proceeded with the business of the day. Captain Bethune resigned the chair, temporarialy, to Mrs. Jeff. Falkner, widow of Colonel Jeff. Falkner, founder of the Alabama Soldier's Home, as being the most suitable person present to preside over the exercises. Mrs. Falkner on accepting the honor said:

"In accepting this honor, permit me to say that nothing would afford me more pleasure than this of being here with you to-day in this Home, established by my deceased husband, Colonel Falkner, to be a resting place for you old heroes who followed the great General Robert E. Lee. Again, gentlemen of the Camp, I thank you for the honor of presiding."

Mrs. Clara Curry, wife of Hon. Thomas A. Curry, candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Alabama, was introduced and read a well written paper on the life and career of General Lee. Mrs. Curry's paper was historic—detailing the historic achievements of General Lee's ancestors for a hundred or more years before his birth. The talented little woman said, in part:

"Gentlemen, it is a genuine pleasure to be with you upon this occasion where friends and former followers of our beloved chieftain, Robert E. Lee are assembled for the purpose of observing his birthday.

"Indeed, gentlemen, I am truly glad to claim a number upon your program. Indeed, ladies and gentlemen, this opportunity to remind you that the love and admiration we all have in our hearts for the memory of the great Lee is entertained alike all over this Southland; yea, all over this United States, as in fact throughout the world. boy, Lee the student, Lee the soldier, Lee the leader of an army of men who risked their all for those of us enjoying life and liberty today. Yes, his valorous deeds, his christian kindness, his gentle mindfullness for the comforts and safety of those left at home while he was leading his fearless soldiers where shot and shell fired by the enemy had thinned his ranks until but eight thousand starved, foot sore, badly clothed ceased to fire at Appomattox."

Mrs. Curry then in a historical sketch spoke of General Lee's ancestry back to John de Lee of the X1Vth century, and followed the family tree on to when Richard Lee emigrated to America and settled in Virginia and was a member of the King's privy council while the Colonel Lee of that day still remained loyal to Charles I.

Mrs. Curry then referrd to the immediate parents of our own R E. Lee, and painted a word picture of them that was entertaining and historical.

Referring to General Lee Mrs. Curry sketched his domestic life from the year 1832 when he married Mary Curtis on through his military career during the war with Mexico where his honors were so chivalrous as to gain highly complimentary praise from General Winfield Scott.

Speaking of General Lee and the civil war the little woman minutely described some of the most notable events. In brief, she was entertaing and historically correct.

FROM THE ORIENT

TOKYO.—

On October 25th a party of twelve left the "Tamba Maru" for Tokyo. It is about an hour by train from Yokohama. The trains do not compare favorably with ours; the engine and cars are much smaller than ours, and the seats are along the side rather than crosswise. They have accommodations for first, second and third class passengers; we went first class. By this little train we reached Tokyo about 10 o'clock in the morning.

Having reached the station, we employed Jinrickisha men for the day. The Jinrickisha, as you know, is a little cart pulled by a man. They go at a good rate and would probably go five or six miles an hour. There are many things to see in this, the capital city of the empire of Japan. We could not see it all, but marked out our route for the day and started through the narrow streets in our little man-pulled carts.

The first stop we made was at Shiba park. This park contains a large temple. The buildings and several monuments in the park are very old. Many of the buildings are being repaired. Other buildings are being erected. The temple is very large and is built of wood. The roof is of copper. The temple is very old and is considered very sacred. Only the Mikado is allowed to enter it. Many people were there worshipping. Some were praying, others were throwing money into the temple. Others were clapping their hands. Others were bowing their heads to the ground. Others were kneeling and praying. Others were standing and praying. Others were sitting and praying. Others were lying down and praying. Others were walking around and praying. Others were doing all of these things at once. It was a very interesting sight.

We next went to the tomb of the Shoguns. The Shoguns were the rulers of Japan before the present Mikado came into power. The Shoguns were very powerful men. They were the real rulers of Japan. The Mikado was only a figure-head. He was not allowed to be even seen by the common people. But all power was delegated to a man called the Shogun. He was the real ruler of Japan. The tombs referred to above are those of some of the departed Shoguns, make during their glory.

A few years ago, 1870 perhaps, the Mikado decided he would be a figure-head no longer and came out and asserted his authority, and became the real ruler of the empire.

We next went to the top of a hill, from which we could get a fine view of the city, then to some other parks, and stopped at a hotel for dinner. These were all interesting, but I will have to leave out a great many of them.

After dinner we went to the Emperial palace, or as near as we could get. There is a large hill covering several hundred acres, or perhaps several squsre miles. Around this hill on every side is a wall about twenty-five feet high, at the foot of which is a ditch about two hundred feet wide, filled with water. At intervals on this wall are towers where watchmen stay. At one place there is an entrance to this enclosure; a cement bridge spans the ditch to the massive iron gates. A soldier stands on each side of the gate, while a policeman stands, or walks about near by, ready to arrest any intruder. Visitors may come to the end of the bridge, but are not allowed to even get on it. Mrs. Williams and two of her girl friends got just up on the edge of the cement bridge to look at the water below. I saw the policeman coming and rushed to them and got them off before he got to them. The palace is somewhere on this hill. Foreigners are not allowed to enter and it seems very few Japanese. One of our rickisha men whispered that the palace was about half a mile over from the gate. The Mikado stays here, it seems, almost a prisoner for his people. I do not envy him his position.

Tokyo is about ten miles across—a large city. There are many modern buildings; the National Naval academy is there, and also the National Military academy.

After spending the day seeing more than we could ever describe, we returned to Yokohama.

DRAPER'S SELF CULTURE CLUB ORGANIZES

On Tuesday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. E. E. Upchurch, 22 of Clanton's best known women gathered for the purpose of organizing a Club which should not only greatly enrich and benefit themselves, but be a blessing to the homes of Clanton people and to the town at large.

Mrs. L. A. Munden, one of Alabama's most widely known and best loved organizers and promotors of the Draper Self Culture Clubs, made an interesting talk on what the club meant; giving a complete outline of the work, also emphasizing the fundamental principle and purpose of the club which should be to promote higher ideals and self-culture in the homes and civic righteousness in the community.

Mrs. Munden received the hearty support of all present. The next step in the organization was the election of officers which resulted as follows:

Mrs. N. S. Johnson, President.
Mrs. E. E. Upchurch, 1st V. P.
Mrs. P. I. Hopkins, 2d V. Pres't.
Mrs. B. M. Roberts, Secretary.
Mrs. J. C. Jones, Ass't Sec'ty.
Mrs. J. R. Mullins, Treasurer.

It was voted that the name of the club should be Draper's Self Culture Club, and the time decided for the meetings was the first and third Tuesday of each month.

For the next meeting Mrs. A. M. Gowan was assigned a paper on "What Constitutes a Modern Good Mother;" Miss Emmette Mathews, the "Calf Path;" Mrs. Nix, poem, "She Was a Phanton of Delight;" Mrs. E. B. Deason, "Marriage;" Mrs. W. H. Sartor, "The College Woman;" Mrs. J. H. Middleton, song, "Speak Gently."

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. E. B. Deason.

To date a total enrollment of 29 members has been reported, and if the interest manifested in today's meeting is any indication of the future of the Club, then, there is no doubt but this will be one of the strongest links in the great chain of clubs that are being formed throughout Central Alabama.

After the business had been attened to, a delicious coffee course was served.

A DISASTROUS FIRE.

Mr. J. H. Esco sustained a severe loss by the burning of his barn and the loss of forage, grain, implements and death of four valuable mules and several cows.

The blaze was seen from Mountain Creek but the fire had done its destruction before assistance to extinguish it could reach Mr. Esco's farm, which was nearly 3 miles distant.

Exacted a Promise.

Mrs. Henry Preston White was leaving her home for town the other afternoon, and as she started down the walk a pitiful wail reached her ears. Turning, she perceived her little five-year-old son leaning far out of the second-story window.

"Mother! mother!" he cried. "Please promise me, won't you, mother? Promise me!"

Mrs. White ran back in much alarm into the house and up the stairs.

"Darling, tell mother what is the matter," she pleaded.

"Oh, mother, promise me," he sobbed.

"Anything, darling, anything."

"Promise me that you'll be good, mother, while you're in town," he said, and began to dry his tears.

SIMPLE AND EASIER TO DO

Tramp's Methods Not Altogether Unlike That Followed by Too Many Others.

Hoboes came up for discussion in a Washington club the other night, and Senator Nathan P. Bryan of Florida told this anecdote along the Weary Willie line:

Some time ago a hobo meekly tapped on the back door of a suburban home and asked for something to eat. The good housewife responded that she would feed him on the back step along with Fido, providing he was willing to earn the meal by cleaning out the gutter.

The tramp agreed, and when he had eaten his way through several sandwiches to a feeling of happiness, the housewife came out with a reliable looking hoe.

"You needn't have gone to that trouble, madam," said the hobo, sizing up the farm implement. "I never use a hoe in cleaning out a gutter."

"Never use a hoe!" said the woman with a wondering expression. "What do you use, then, a shovel?"

"No, madam," replied the hobo, starting for the back gate, "my method is to pray for rain."

WONDERED WHY.
Found the Answer Was "Coffee."

Many pale, sickly persons wonder for years why they have to suffer so, and eventually discover that the drug—caffeine—in coffee is the main cause of the trouble.

"I was always very fond of coffee and drank it every day. I never had much flesh and often wondered why I was always so pale, thin and weak.

"About five years ago my health completely broke down and I was confined to my bed. My stomach was in such condition that I could hardly take sufficient nourishment to sustain life. During this time I was drinking coffee, didn't think I could do without it.

After awhile I came to the conclusion that coffee was hurting me, and decided to give it up and try Postum. When it was made right—dark and rich—I soon became very fond of it. In one week I began to feel better. I could eat more and sleep better. My dark headaches were less frequent, and within five months I looked and felt like a new being, headache spells entirely gone.

My health continued to improve and today I am well and strong, weigh 148 lbs. I attribute my present health to the life-giving qualities of Postum."

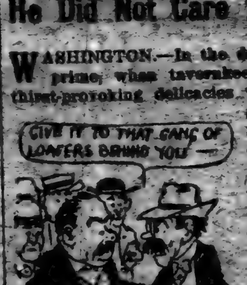
Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.



Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30-cent and 50-cent tins.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

He Did Not Care for Dessert After Free Lunch

WASHINGTON.—In the days when the free lunch in this city was in its prime, when tavernkeepers prided themselves on having an array of thirst-provoking delicacies which rivaled the menus of the finest hotels, a government clerk who had an eye on the very first nickel he ever earned used to subsist almost entirely on the provender provided by a certain free lunch counter. Said clerk would prong about a dollar's worth of cheese and wienerwurst, salad, brown bread and all the other stuff that goes to make up the food attractions of tavern bars. He would do this twice a day, once at noon and again at night, and therefore, having spent two nickels for the very good beer offered by the proprietor, he could very well figure that he had lived sumptuously that day for almost nothing.

He did this for several months. Finally the long-suffering proprietor recognized the fact that the government clerk was about the only man in the place who was getting something for nothing and keeping it up for an indefinite period. So he bethought himself of a scheme to put a stop to this practice and shame the man. He sent word out to his own best friends that if they would gather there at noon on a certain day they could see him put this unsatisfied eater of lunches in the class with a whipped child.

At the appointed hour the friends were there, and so was the clerk, pronging away with both hands.

As he left the lunch counter and headed for the door the long-suffering strategist of a proprietor tapped him on the shoulder:

"My friend," he said, while the crowd waited to see him display his coup de grace, as we would say in France, "I have noticed that you take the record as long-distance free lunch borrower? Therefore I would suggest that you wait. You have overlooked something today. If you will stay here a moment the chef will present you with a fine strawberry shortcake."

The proprietor had the sarcasm heavily veiled, but it did not fool that shrewd free lunch operator. He looked Mr. Proprietor squarely in the eye, a cold, glittering penetrating look which meant that the weapons had clashed and that the fight was on. His face betrayed not one quiver of excitement or of embarrassment as he spoke in a loud tone:

"Give it to that gang of loafers behind you. I never eat dessert."

Congressman Avis' Short but Effective Speech

RESIDENTS of Huntington and Charleston, W. Va., are, and always have been, jealous of one another. It is fighting jealousy, too, and not the kind that exists between Toledo and Columbus, in Ohio; St. Louis and Kansas City, in Missouri, which runs mainly to building taller buildings and that sort of thing. The brand of jealousy in West Virginia causes the residents of one town to vow that no good can come out of the other.

They do say that the second most popular man in Charleston is the one who spent his vacation this year kicking the rails of the railroad because they run into Huntington. The most popular man is the one who directed to the "Citizens of Huntington" this telegram: "You are no good." Thus did he insult the whole city at one stroke.

The two cities are constantly fighting over conventions and other big gatherings. All any organization need do to create a deep desire to entertain it is to tip off the leading citizens of one of the two cities that the other wants the organization's convention. Once a political party was trying to decide which of the two cities should have the honor of entertaining its delegates to a state convention. Charleston and Huntington sent representatives to plead their causes.

The Huntington man spoke first. He told of the great wealth his city possessed, of its charming people, its fine railroad and hotel accommodations, and, finally, wound up his flight of oratory thus:

"Gentlemen, no city in the United States is laid out as well as Huntington!"

Then up rose Capt. S. B. Avis, now representative from the Third district of West Virginia, to speak for Charleston.

"When Charleston is as dead as Huntington," he said, it too, will be well laid out."

And with those few words he sat down.

Representative Kinkead Set the Ball Rolling

REPRESENTATIVE EUGENE KINKEAD of New Jersey bids fair to be the leading practical joker of the Sixty-third congress. When not engaged in trying to find some new method of throttling the beef trust, which is his special nightmare, Kinkead is thinking up some new method of getting a "rise" out of his colleagues.

He nearly caused a serious split between Representative Carter Glass, author of the currency bill, and Representative Bartlett of Georgia. Glass was sensitive about his currency bill, and Bartlett is a self-appointed defender of the constitution. One day Gene Kinkead whispered to Glass:

"What's this that Judge Bartlett is saying about you?"

"Haven't heard," replied the succinct chairman of the banking and currency committee.

"Why, he's telling the fellows that you don't know anything about currency."

Then he left Mr. Glass and whispered to Judge Bartlett:

"Say, Charlie, are you on the outs with Carter Glass?"

"No, indeed," said Bartlett in surprise. "Why?"

"Well, I just wondered. He's going around saying that you know absolutely nothing about constitutional law."

It took three days to straighten out the matter and, meanwhile, Kinkead had denied flatly saying anything to either congressman. However, it was the unfailing twinkle in the Kinkead eye which finally brought the war to a close.

Put Surrounding Atmosphere to a Great Test

HARRY "OREGON" BROWN, who represents about all the newspapers there are in the northwest cowboy district, was sitting in his office one night last week, when Col. Whafe His Name dropped in. The colonel, loud of voice and manner, had something to tell Mr. Brown which would be of interest to the readers of one of the Idaho papers which Mr. Brown represents here in Washington.

When he started to talk the walls quivered a bit, then gripped themselves and got tight. Never had the surrounding atmosphere been put to so great a test. The vibrations of the colonel's voice were equal to the splash of a mountain dropping into a placid sea. Doors began to close all over the building, for the men in the various offices wanted to work.

Across the hall from Mr. Brown is "Liz" Sessoms, big and tall, clattered on foot with a great show of [illegible]. The colonel started at once. After it was all over, "Liz" went into Mr. Brown's

NOTED SOUTHERN JOURNALIST DEAD

COLONEL PENDLETON FORMERLY STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN, DIES

WELL KNOWN IN THE SOUTH

Leader of Georgia Delegation to Last Democratic National Convention in Baltimore.

Macon, Ga.—Charles Rittenhouse Pendleton, for sixteen years editor and part owner of the Macon Telegraph, died after an illness of five weeks. His condition did not become critical until a week ago, when it was discovered that he had Bright's disease. He was 63 years of age.

Colonel Pendleton, as he was generally called, came to Macon from Valdosta, where he edited a paper for many years. He served one term in the legislature from Lowndes county, but ever afterwards avoided holding political office, though he was a leader in the Democratic party in Georgia.

Colonel Pendleton was sent to the Democratic National convention as a delegate from Georgia, the last one being the Baltimore convention, which he attended as chairman of the Georgia delegation, instructed for Oscar Underwood. He was a member of a number of state conventions, and four years ago was chairman of the state Democratic executive committee.

In politics Colonel Pendleton generally was classed with the conservatives, although he never failed to support the nominee of his party, heartily and enthusiastically.

Mr. Pendleton was born in Effingham county, Georgia, June 26, 1850, the fifth child of Philip C. Pendleton. His mother's maiden name was Catherine Tebeau, of the family which gave Tebeauville its name.

Immediately upon his father's death Mr. Pendleton took charge of the Valdosta Times for the family, a heavy responsibility for so young a man for there were several to support with the income from this source. He made the Valdosta Times one of the most influential papers in south and southwest Georgia and at one time enjoyed the county printing of several counties.

In 1879 he married Sallie Patterson Peoples of Valdosta, who survives him.

Among the telegrams received by the family of the illustrious editor were those from Gov. John M. Slaton, ex-Gov. Joseph M. Brown, Col. W. S. West of Valdosta, Clark Howell of Atlanta; Labor Commissioner H. M. Stanley and A. H. Ulm, the governor's private secretary.

BANDIT ROBS PULLMAN CAR

Masked Man Strips Four Passengers of Money and Jewelry.

Atlanta.—Wearing a blue handkerchief, covering his face up to his eyes, with a cap pulled down to the bridge of his nose and his coat collar turned up, a well-dressed lone bandit boarded the Nashville-Atlanta, Nashville-Chattanooga and St. Louis southbound passenger train, as it slowed down at Vinings station, eleven miles from Atlanta at night, and with a blue-steel, large caliber revolver in his left hand, held up the eleven passengers riding in the parlor car, "Nyssa," forcing four of the male passengers to give up $280 in cash. The robber made no effort to molest two women passengers on the car. Fifteen minutes later, the bandit fought a fierce gun battle with a Fulton county police officer, who happened to be on the train, aided by the Negro train porter, and escaped.

Millionaires Flocking to Jekyl Island.

Brunswick, Ga.—Some of the country's best known millionaires are now on Jekyl island, where they are either occupying their winter cottages or stopping at the mammoth clubhouse operated on the island for the benefit of the guests. Practically every cottage on the island is now occupied and additional parties are arriving daily. Prominent among the millionaires now on the island are William Rockefeller, who, with his family, is occupying his cottage, and Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, who is occupying the quarters of the late financier at the Sans Souci.

Urges Anti-Trust Bill.

Washington.—Representative Stanley of Kentucky, after a conference with President Wilson, introduced an amendment to the Sherman law, which would make illegal monopolization or restraint of trade "in any degree," striking at the "rule of reason" laid down by the Supreme court in the Standard Oil case. The amendment also would invest the circuit courts of the United States with jurisdiction to restrain and prevent violations of the act, irrespective of the attorney general.

108 PERSON ARE RESCUED

Rescue One of Most Notable Ever Accomplished on the Atlantic Coast.

Yarmouth, N. S.—Snatched from what seemed almost certain death, the 108 passengers and crew of the Royal Mail Packet Cobequid are safe in Yarmouth harbor.

Wireless appeals for assistance, which she had first made thirty-six hours before, were answered as the doomed steamer was being racked to pieces on Trinity Rock, six miles off Port Maitland. The rescue will go down in shipping annals as one of the most notable ever accomplished on the Atlantic coast.

The Cobequid had begun to break up under the cannoning of the terrific seas that had been merciless from the time the vessel struck. Quantities of cargo covered the waters as the lifeboats ranged alongside. The coastal steamers Westport and John L. Cann were first to get their small boats into the water and they were followed soon by boats of the government steamer Lansdowne and the steamer Rappahannock. As the work of rescue progressed the seas subsided and no mishap marred the triumph over the waves.

AN AGREEMENT IS REACHED

Secretary Garrison and Representatives of National Guard Agree.

Washington. — Secretary Garrison and adjutants general representing National Guard organizations of more than thirty states agreed on terms of the proposed militia pay bill, under which the federal government would provide for militiamen, who, in turn, would enlist as "federal reservalist" subject to the call of the president to duty either within the United States or abroad.

It is proposed that the militia bill shall provide an annual appropriation of $24,500,000. Of this $4,000,000 would be for encampment and maneuver purposes, $8,000,000 for home service pay and $2,500,000 for armament and equipment.

The committee that conferred with Secretary Garrison comprised Brigadier General Martin, Texas; Brigadier General Stewart, Pennsylvania; Brigadier General Sadley, New Jersey, and Brigadier General Young, Illinois. Brigadier General Crowder, judge advocate general of the army, and Brigadier General Mills, chief of the division of militia affairs, were present.

Kills Wife; Wounds Chauffeur.

Augusta, Ga.—Recently released from confinement for mental derangement, Sam J. Norris shot and killed his wife and probably mortally wounded William Dennis, 17 years old, a chauffeur, who was at the Norris home preparatory to take Mrs. Norris for a ride. After shooting the two, Norris attempted and would have shot Felix Gainer, the first person to come into the room. He was covered by a revolver in the hands of Police Surgeon Jennings, who disarmed and arrested him.

No Eugenics in South Carolina.

Columbia, S. C.—The state senate killed the so-called "eugenics bill," which was endorsed by the South Carolina Medical association, by a vote of 21 to 11. CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor—oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Adv.

Price of Realty in Rome.

In the big cities of the Old World the highest value seems to belong to a property in Rome. Here is where a value of $450 a square foot is found, and the land is not used for an income-producing building, but includes the property of the German embassy to Italy. Business property in Rome does not bring nearly this high price. In the principal centers of offices and shops values do not mount much above $200 a square foot.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By making at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.—Adv.

Things Have Improved.

A well known politician, at a dinner in Washington, said of commercial honesty:

"Commercial honesty is improving. When a man lies to you and cheats you, it no longer excuses him to say, 'Caveat emptor'—'It's business'—and shrug and smile.

"In fact," he ended, "things have now so much improved that if some multi-millionaires were to lose their fortunes the same way they gained them, they'd insist on somebody going to jail."

GREAT CHANGE IN TWENTY YEARS

Shaw Lady Looks Younger Instead of Older with Lapse of Time.

Shaw, Miss.—Mrs. V. N. Smith, of this city, makes an interesting statement of her experiences, as follows: "Twenty-nine years ago, I contracted a serious form of womanly trouble. We called in our family physician, and he treated me for it, but it seemed to do me good. It went on into other bad troubles, and I commenced taking all kinds of medicines to see if I could get relief, but to no avail.

I suffered with that trouble up until eleven years ago, when I read about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and bought a full treatment. It relieved me at once, and after taking the full treatment, I am now well and stout.

I sent my brother, whom I had not seen in twenty years, one of my photographs, and he wrote me that I looked younger than when he last saw me."

For more than 50 years, Cardui has been relieving women's sufferings, and building weak women up to health and strength. No other tonic gives the same results as Cardui. No other woman's medicine has the long record of success in treating cases of womanly troubles and disease.

Cardui will surely help you.

Try it.

WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Logansport, Ind.—"My baby was over a year old and I bloated till I was a burden to myself. I suffered from female trouble so I could not stand on my feet and I felt like millions of needles were pricking me all over. At last my doctor told me that all that would save me was an operation, but this I refused. I told my husband to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I would try it before I would submit to any operation. He did so and I improved right along. I am now doing all my work and feeling fine.

Skeptical Jamie Was Not to Be Flattered, at Least at That Particular Moment.

"In some respects," said a New York lawyer, "Harry Thaw is as naive as a child. Although his money commands the country's finest legal talent, he always insists that it is he who directs his cases. He is skeptical, too, of all who approach him."

The lawyer laughed.

"That," he continued, "is as skeptical as Jamie. Jamie, a village celebrity somewhat lacking in intellect, sat on the racecourse fence the day of the local races, munching away at a leg of mutton which he had somehow procured and of which he was very proud.

"A wealthy steel magnate, whose country house was near the village, rode by in his fifty-horse power racing car and, seeing Jamie on the fence, said:

"'Ah, Jamie, are you here already?'

"'Oh,' retorted Jamie, with a dignified and important air, looking significantly at the mutton bone, 'oh, yes; ye all know a body when he's got anything.'"

MONEY in TRAPPING

PUBLIC ROADS

GOVERNMENT HELP IS READY

Office of Public Roads of Department of Agriculture Testing Materials and Their Usefulness.

So far has the government advanced in the problems connected with road construction that efforts are now being made to teach the country that the expenditure of large sums of money on certain types of roads may result almost in a total waste. A road built of materials which would be ideal in one locality may not serve the purpose at all elsewhere and the money expended may bring scarcely any result in reducing the cost of hauling or making it easier for the farmer to get to the shipping point with his crops.

In order to aid farmers who want to build their own roads and to assist various communities that desire to improve the roads near by, the office of public roads of the department of agriculture has employed experts to test all materials and study their usefulness on roads subjected to certain traffic conditions. The office of public roads is now acting in an advisory capacity to many states and countries, giving a most practical form of national aid.

On roads where there is a very heavy traffic, it has been found that certain kind of materials are better than others, and that while one kind of binder may not serve the purpose at all, another kind is ideal and preserves the road indefinitely. Millions of dollars doubtless have been wasted in the past because of the absence of the scientific knowledge which is now being obtained. There is no longer any excuse for any community building the wrong kind of road, as the office of public roads stands ready to furnish any information that may be desired as to the course that should be pursued.

"There are two ways in which the engineer may avail himself of the information necessary to a proper selection of road material. The first and only certain one is to make an actual service test on the material under observation, and under the same conditions of traffic and climate to which the proposed road will be subjected. This method, however, is impractical except in certain rare instances, due to the lapse of time which must elapse before definite results can be obtained. The second method is, by means of short time laboratory tests, to approximate as nearly as possible the destructive agencies to which the material will be subjected on the road, supplementing the knowledge thus gained by a study of the results already obtained in practice on material of a similar nature."

The office of public roads constantly uses both methods. At Chevy Chase, near Washington, D. C., a model road has been built in sections made of different materials, while in the laboratory of the office tests are constantly being made with scientific accuracy to determine the exact value of certain materials under certain traffic conditions.

ROADS PAY FOR THEMSELVES

According to Data Collected Value of Farms Bordering on Improved Highways Is Much Increased.

The direct effect that changing bad roads into good roads has upon land value and the general economic welfare of a community is shown in several concrete illustrations gathered by the United States department of agriculture. The department has just issued a statement on the subject, based upon a mass of information gathered by the office of public roads, which is making a special study of the economic effect of road improvement in the country. According to data gathered, where good roads replace bad ones, the value of farm lands bordering on the roads increase to such an extent that the cost of road improvement is equalized, if not exceeded. The general land values, as well as farm values, show marked advances following the improvement of roads.

As the roads in no way affect the soil fertility or quality of the farm, advances are due essentially to the decrease in the cost of hauling produce to markets or shipping points. Farms are now regarded as plants for the business of farming, and any reduction in their profits through unnecessarily heavy costs for hauling on bad roads naturally reduces their capitalization into values. With reduced costs for hauling, profits are increased, with the result that the farm plant shows satisfactory earnings on a higher capital value.

The automobile also has begun to be an important factor in increasing rural values where good roads are in existence.

DIZZY, HEADACHY, SICK, "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

Aeroplane Kept as Memento.

All that is left of the historic Wright biplane with which Calbraith P. Rodgers flew from the Atlantic to the Pacific two years ago is to be presented to the Carnegie museum at Pittsburgh by the late aviator's mother. The machine was badly damaged when Rodgers fell to his death in the Pacific ocean a short time after completing his wonderful flight. Subsequently it was used by Andrew Drew until that aviator also was killed with it. The machine has been restored to its original condition. Both Rodgers' and Fowler's Wright machines have motors of but 30-horsepower, yet they flew across the continent in opposite directions at a time when the aeroplane had not been equipped with the 100-horsepower motor of today, which makes it much more stable, nor had it developed anywhere near the speed of which it has since shown itself to be capable.

Onions Are Cheaper.

Mrs. Hetty Green on her seventy-eighth birthday anniversary told a reporter that she put more faith in onions than in doctors. An onion was her recipe for colds, coughs, insomnia, nerves and many other maladies.

"An onion," she added, "is a better friend to your pocketbook than a doctor, too.

"A young lady was studying to be a nurse, and she said one day to a popular surgeon:

"'What did you operate on Mr. Soels for?'

"'For $3,000,' the surgeon answered.

"The young nurse smiled.

"'No,' she said; 'I mean what did he have?'

"'Three thousand dollars,' was the surgeon's reply."

Of a Wild Nature.

Just outside the entrance to the yard at the Naval academy is an apartment house where many young officers live, and baby carriages are a not infrequent sight in this vicinity.

Not long ago the commander of the yard had a notice posted on one side of the gate forbidding automobiles to enter, because they frightened the horses. Shortly afterwards the following unofficial notice appeared on the other side of the gate:

"Baby carriages and perambulators not allowed in this yard. They scare the bachelors."

BAD CASE OF DANDRUFF

Bissell, Ala.—"I had a very bad case of dandruff on my head. I was tormented by itching and my hair began to come out by the combfuls. I almost became frantic, fearful that I would lose all of my hair which was my pride. There were some pimples on my scalp and I scratched them until they made sores. My hair was dry and lifeless.

"I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent to my druggist for three cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. I washed my scalp with warm water strong with the Cuticura Soap and dried, afterwards applying the Cuticura Ointment, working it in the scalp slowly with my fingers. After using them for several days my hair began to stop coming out. The dandruff all disappeared and in less than four weeks a cure was accomplished permanently." (Signed) Miss Lucy May.

Best of All Gifts.

A little boy in a big metropolitan Sunday school listened eagerly while the superintendent talking of missions urged every one present to contribute to the cause.

"Give what you can, not what you want," he concluded his exhortation. "Give generously and of your best."

Little Joseph, taking the exhortation literally and being penniless, wrote on the slip passed out for depositing in the pledge box:

"Please, sir, I give myself."

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS IF BACK HURTS

Says Too Much Meat Forms Uric Acid Which Clogs the Kidneys and Irritates the Bladder.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

Not in Her Line.

One day Mr. Smith went to buy a bushel of buckwheat for sowing. The man who sold the wheat was away, but his wife undertook to make the sale. She found a peck measure and they went to the granary.

She filled the measure twice, poured the contents into the bag, and began to tie it up.

"But Mrs. Lawton," said the man, "it takes four pecks to make a bushel."

"Oh, does it?" replied the woman, untying the bag. "Well, you see, I never had any experience in measuring grain before I was married. I always taught school."

Epitaph for a Trust.

"Miss the trusts!" said Senator La Follette at a luncheon in Washington. "Yes, oh, yes, when the trusts go we'll miss them—we'll miss them like the widow.

"A widow, at her late husband's funeral, happened during the burial service, to drop her handkerchief into the open grave.

"The young lawyer gallantly offered to leap down and get the handkerchief for her.

"But the widow shook her head.

"'No, she said, 'leave it there. I have lots more with initials on.'"

ANNOUNCEMENT.

FOR STATE SENATOR.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the Senate of Alabama from the the Fifteenth district, composed of the counties of Chilton, Shelby and Autauga, subject to the action of the Democratic primary.

W. W. Wallace

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the democratic primary to be held on April 6, 1914. W. F. FALLON.

Lest you forget, don't fail to pay your poll tax before February 1st.

The judicious use of printer's ink is like sowing seed in good soil. How about trying some, Mr. Business Man.

No, Sirre, we are not a betting man, and even if we were, we wouldn't place many kopecs on the Honorable John Henry Wallace.

The elections this year are to be very important, and surely you will want to exercise your prerogative as a citizen; so why not pay the Tax Collector a visit and be ready for the fray. Only nine more days remain in which to pay poll tax.

The next Legirlature of Alabama will have many grave problems to work out which affect the interest of the whole state; the regulation of corporations, tax reform and other important measures will have to be worked out, and Chilton should send a representative who will measure up to the full standard ot his responsibility and will render the greatest good to the greatest number.

Despite the fact that Hon. Thos. A. Curry announced for Lieutenant Governor three weeks ago, some of the county papers are carrying the cut of Mr. Kilby with the words "unopposed candidate fvr Lieutenant Governor." Now, we are not a prophet, nor the son of a prophet, but we venture the prediction that when the votes are counted on April 6th Chilton's favorite son "will walk off with the bacon."

The Press wants a subscriber in every community in Chilton county; send us the news of your section, you will confer a favor on us by so doing, and, at the same time help us to give to the people of Chilton what they deserve and should have—a real good, live newspaper. It shall be our earnest endeavor to improve the paper in every way, and we hope to merit your co-operation and good will in this regard. While our readers may differ with us on some matters, we beg to assure them that the policy of the paper shall be to exert every honorable effort for the material upbuilding of our fair county and her people, and with your continued support and good will we feel sure that success will crown our efforts.

We are making arrangements to give to our readers one of the best serial stories ever written. "The Valiants of Virginia," announcement of which will be made later, and those of you who do not take The Press cannot afford to miss a single issue.

What has become of all the prognosticators and "calamity howlers?" Soon after the election of Woodrow Wilson the republicans and bull-mooseers made the direful prediction that with the democrats in power the country would go to the dogs, and we would be ruined world without end. Yes, the prediction was freely made that cotton would drop to five and six cents per pound, and the poor farmer would be compelled to mortgage his home; mills would have to shut down; bank failures would occur and business interests in general would suffer an awful depression. But, much to their disappointment such conditions do not obtain. On the other hand, the farmer is getting thirteen cents for his cotton, has the cash in bank to purchase whatever he wants and is happy and contented. No mills, as far as we are aware, have shut down, there are no bank failures or money panics, and, under a democratic administration the high cost of living is to be materially reduced, and in all lines of industrial actively this God-favored land of ours is enjoying an era of prosperity unparrelled in the history of this great republic. Prosperity is in the land and everybody is happy.

Waterworks and Sanitary Sewerage.

Some time ago an election was ordered by the Mayor and Council to vote on the issuance of bonds for waterworks construction and sanitary sewerage for the town of Clanton. The proposition at that time did not seem to meet with the approbation of some of our people and the election was accordingly postponed. No sound thinking man can question for a moment the benefits to be derived from waterworks; it is a matter which affects vitally the health and happiness of all our people. We have here one of the best towns in Alabama, whose natural advantages are not excelled by any community, and it is most unfortunate that we can't get together on this great necessity; we are standing in our own light and retarding the town's progress by our lethargy in this matter. No one will deny that surface closets are a menace to the health of any town, and that a large percentage of malaria and typhoid fever is directly attributable to this source. With the installation of sanitary sewerage this evil will be greatly reduced.

Then, too, with waterworks the danger from fires will be greatly diminished, and it has been estimated that in insurance premiums alone the citizens of Clanton would save at least $35,000 a year.

Let's quit this quibbling, put our shoulders to the wheel and pull for waterworks and the upbuilding of our town.

Notwithstanding the Mexican government is a bankrupt, old Vic. Huerta continues to hang on with bull dog tenacity.

The County Democratic Executive Committee met Saturday and wisely resouluted to "let down the bars," and invite all white men to return to the ranks of democracy who will pledge themselves to support the nominees of the primary. There are no doubt lots of good honest republicans in Chilton who will welcome this opportunity to return to their first love.

PITTS DECLINES JOB ON SUPREME BENCH

UNWILLING, IT IS STATED, TO LEAVE PRACTICE OF LAW TO ACCEPT HONOR.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Col. W. L. Pitts, of Uniontown, declined the appointment of associate justice of the supreme court, to succeed Judge John C. Anderson, who was elevated to the chief justiceship.

Colonel Pitts was appointed to the position by the Governor the past week.

Colonel Pitts assigned as one of his reasons for declining the appointment the fact that he was unable to give up his law practice at this time to accept a judicial position.

Will Appeal to Supreme Court.

Sam Spicer, the Covington County farmer, will appeal to the supreme court to give him another chance to prove that he did not kill his wife and place the crime on a negro whom he had employed. Spicer was convicted and given a life sentence, but appealed and has been in the Montgomery County jail pending the disposition of his case in the high court. At the same time Spicer's case is submitted the State will ask the supreme court to reverse the Covington County criminal court in its ruling that Spicer should be allowed bail.

East Breaks Out of Prison.

Information has been received by the State convict department that Henry East, the notorious Alabama criminal, who has three times escaped from custody in this State, has broken out of the Indiana penitentiary at Indianapolis, where he was serving an intermediate sentence of from two to 14 years for burglary.

East was arrested in Indiana after he had escaped from the convict camp at Sanford, less than a year ago. Prior to that time he had escaped twice from moving trains while he was being taken to the State prison at Speigners.

He was convicted at Florence of burglary on three charges, and was given three separate sentences aggregating 18 years. He had served little more than a year when he escaped the third time.

East was next heard from in Indiana, where he was arrested on another burglary charge. He was given an intermediate sentence of from two to 14 years.

Extension of Time Is Granted.

Judge Thomas G. Jones, of the United States district court, granted an extension of time to the railroad commission in which to prepare its record in the appealed rate cases of five railroads. The roads are the Nashville, Chattancoga and St. Louis, the Louisville and Nashville, the South and North Alabama, the Western of Alabama, and the Central of Georgia.

The commission in the motion declared there were over 30,000 typewritten pages to be prepared for the record and that it would be impossible to do so in the usual thirty days allowed for this purpose. The commission was allowed until July.

Anniston Man May Escape Gallows.

Alex Waldrop may not be hanged for the murder of his wife at Anniston in 1912. The state board of pardons, at a special meeting recommended that Waldrop's sentence be commuted to life imprisonment in the penitentiary, and the governor announced that he would make a final decision after he has had time to read briefs and records of the case.

Neither the trial judge nor the solicitor has recommended mercy and the governor must be convinced that the ends of justice will not be met by the execution of Waldrop before he will exercise his power in behalf of the condemned man.

Branch Office Tax Commission.

Announcement was made that the state tax commission will establish a branch office in Birmingham immediately for the purpose of handling all matters relating to the mineral properties of the State.

The office, it was stated, is established for the purpose of obtaining accurate information as to all mineral properties in Alabama, whether they contain portable coal, iron or other mineral deposits, and to ascertain the value of such properties.

Novel Registration Question.

A novel question in connection with the coming election has been propounded by one of the registrars of Montgomery county. The gentleman asks if it is necessary for women to register to open their books for the registration of voters, pro and con, before the second primary, as well as the first primary before the last election. The question has not been answered.

State's Assessment Increased.

Total assessments on real and personal property in Alabama are $529,479,380 for the fiscal year ending September 30, showing an increase of $23,322,701 over the preceding year and an advance of approximately $77,000,000 in the tax assessments of the state since 1910, according to the annual report of the state tax commission. The assessment brings in total taxes of $3,396,615 to the state, or an increase of $16,997 over the previous year.

Errors were discovered and increases made in bank assessments by the various assistants to the commission during the year when they checked up the different counties, amounting to $313,910.55, bringing in additional revenue of $4,392.80 to the state and the counties interested.

The recapitulation shows that the total net revenue to the state and counties from the work of the county tax commissioners and the state tax commission for the fiscal year was $636,987.12.

Four Positions In Balance.

A chief justice and three associate justices of the supreme court must be nominated in the Democratic primary April 6. Governor O'Neal's elevation of Associate Justice John C. Anderson to the office of chief justice and his appointment of W. L. Pitts, of Uniontown, to succeed Justice Anderson has made four nominations necessary.

Until Chief Justice J. R. Dowdell resigned it had not been anticipated that more than two justices would be nominated. These were the successors to Justices J. J. Mayfield and Edward DeGraffenreid, whose terms expire. The resignation of Judge Dowdell and the elevation of Justice Anderson, however, brought brought two vacancies at a clip, and, under the constitution whenever a vacancy occurs in a judicial office more than six months preceding the general election, they must be elected in the general election.

Rowan Succeeds J. J. Arnold.

The governor appointed Dr. John F. Rowan of Anniston probate judge of Calhoun county, to succeed Judge J. J. Arnold, who died about 10 days ago.

Dr. Rowan is the fourth appointment which the governor has made to the Calhoun probate judgeship within the past two years. He first appointed Judge Arnold to succeed H. F. Cook, who retired from the office on account of ill health.

Judge Arnold was defeated in the regular election by W. H. Cooper, whose death occurred shortly after he had assumed office. The governor again appointed Judge Arnold to the office, and that official died a short while ago.

The office was then tendered to W. L. McCaa, who declined the appointment. Dr. Rowan is the fourth man whom the governor has appointed probate judge of Calhoun county.

Irvin Pope's Case Delayed.

Because of the failure of records to arrive before the supreme court, the Irvin Pope case, of Calhoun county, has been postponed until the June term of the court. Pope is charged with killing J. B. McClurkin, a Calhoun farmer, and the supreme court has three times reversed the death sentence. The murder was committed in 1909.

Pope was convicted three months ago for the fourth time. His attorneys were allowed ninety days in which to prepare a bill of exceptions. For this reason the case was postponed, as the full ninety days were not up when the division in which Calhoun is placed was called.

Negro Woman Asks Medical License.

For the second time in the history of the State medical department a negro woman applied for a license to practice medicine in Alabama. Daisy Northcross is the applicant. She resides in Montgomery. She was educated at the Bennett Medical College of Chicago.

Merchant Voluntarily Bankrupt.

J. L. Webb of Jemison, Chilton county, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the federal court here giving his liabilities as $4,354.56 and assets as $2,280.08. The petitioner is a merchant.

McKay Appointed.

D. W. McKay of Union Springs was appointed as a member of the Bullock county board of pension examiners by Governor O'Neal.

Governor Revokes Parole.

A. S. Walker, a white man, paroled some time ago by Governor O'Neal, was taken back to Speigner's not only to finish his term, but to work out an additional term consisting of the time he has been at liberty. Walker's parole was revoked by the governor after the former had been convicted in recorder's court in Montgomery on a charge of embezzlement. The state convict department took charge of Walker after a runner arrest secured him in Opelika.

Negro Killed In Coal Mine.

Sentence of life imprisonment is passed upon Harry Robb, of Jefferson county, by the Jefferson criminal court and affirmed by the supreme court of the United States. Robb was convicted of killing Matt Hamilton, a negro miner, in the Edgewater mine, in Jefferson county, in 1911. Hamilton was killed by a blow from a pick in the hands of Robb.

BIG MORTGAGE IS FILED BY L. & N.

START DOUBLE TRACK WORK

Preparing to Handle Big Volume of Trade Which Is Expected After the Panama Canal Opens.

Birmingham. — The Louisville and Nashville Railroad is said to be almost ready to announce the extensions south of Birmingham. For the purpose of financing the extensions and double track work the company has filed a mortgage for $25,000,000. Of that sum $12,000,000 will be for the purchase or refinancing or paying old debts, while $13,000,000 will be used for the double track work and the extensions contemplated.

It is generally believed that the Louisville and Nashville, owners of the South and North, will extend its line into points of this State south of Birmingham that are not at this time available to the Louisville and Nashville. This work, it is believed, will include the building of a new line to Selma and thence to the main line to the coast.

The double tracking of the line south of Birmingham will be started just as soon as work on the north end of the North and South is completed. That work is almost through now, except at Blount Springs, where there is considerable construction yet to be done. The company expects to be in position to compete successfully for the vast traffic which is expected to move through this section to the gulf coast when the Panama Canal is opened.

WANTS LAW CHANGED.

Suggests Passage of Bill Guaranteeing Bonds of Municipalities.

Birmingham.—An effort to have the next Alabama legislature pass a bill which would, in one sense, guarantee the bonds of Alabama municipalities, will be made by Robert L. Totten, of Birmingham. Under the present state laws governing the issuance of municipal bonds, municipalities are hampered in their development, declares Mr. Totten. He proposes that the Georgia law on the issuance of municipal bonds be adopted by the State.

Mr. Totten is writing letters to the mayors of all municipalities in Alabama, asking the officials to assist in his fight.

TO BUILD MILLING PLANT.

Announced That $50,000 Plant Will Be Built in Birmingham.

Birmingham. — The Birmingham district is to have a new and modern milling plant which will be the only one of its kind in the entire State of Alabama. It will include the erection of a 4-story manufacturing plant and a warehouse, the latter to contain 25,000 square feet of floor space. It will be located on the Louisville & Nashville railroad tracks at the corner of Canal and Commerce streets in East Boyles.

The mill will have a daily capacity of 100 tons of alfalfa mixed feed, fifty tons of hen and chick feed and 1,500 to 2,000 bushels of corn meal. A complete line of grain, hay and mill products will be handled.

BARBOUR PRIMARY APRIL 6.

Executive Committee Fixes Date Same as for State Primary.

Eufaula.—The democratic executive committee of Barbour County, at its meeting here, fixed April 6 as the date for the county primary, and the general conditions being the same as those governing the state primary.

There are to be elected in Barbour County this year a sheriff, a state senator, two representatives and five members of the board of revenue, two at large and one from each of three districts.

LARGEST CROP EVER GROWN.

Huntsville. — The census ginning report of the number of bales of cotton ginned in Madison county up to January 1 shows 31,138 bales as compared with 23,303 up to the same date a year ago. This is the largest crop ever grown in Madison county, and the increase over last year will, it is estimated bring an additional $400,000 to the farmers of this county.

HARD TO COLLECT FEES.

Steps and Legislature Asked to Relieve Existing Situation.

TILLABLE LAND CULTIVATED.

Alabama Percentage Only 22, According to Government Report.

Washington. — Preliminary estimates by the department of agriculture show that of the 1,140,000,000 acres of tillable land in the United States only 27 per cent of it is actually under cultivation. Only 22 per cent. is tilled in Alabama.

The estimates were based upon reports of 35,000 correspondents scattered in every State to ascertain the tillable area of the country, amount of land unavailable for crops but available for pasture or fruits, and total acreage that can never be used for agriculture.

MAY HAVE COMMISSION FORM.

Rumored Citizens May Seek Election to Give It a Trial.

Eufaula.—It is rumored that an election on the commission form of government for the city of Eufaula may be sought by a number of citizens before the time comes to elect a new city administration. It is said that if sufficient signatures are secured to a petition for the election, a primary for the commissioners will be held at the same time. The names of those who are successful in the primary in the event that the election carries will be presented to the governor for appointment.

BOILER EXPLOSION KILLS TWO

Bill Sizemore and Thomas Stanford Die; Sorrells Injured.

Guin. — Two men, Bill Sizemore and Thomas Stanford, were instantly killed, and Jake Sorrells was fatally injured in the explosion of a boiler at the saw mill of Jno Roe Black, seven miles north of here.

The men were working in the mill when the explosion took place and were frightfully mangled. The cause of the explosion is not known.

Miller for Legislature.

Eufaula. — M. Z. Miller, of Clayton, is the first announced candidate for the legislature in Barbour county. Two representatives are to be elected from this county. For the State senate from the Twenty-fourth Senatorial district, composed of Barbour county, there are two candidates, Dr. Judson Davie, of Comer, and G. Ernest Jones, editor of the Clio Free Press.

Alexander City. — It has just been made public that A. P. Fuquay, of Alexander City, will be a candidate for the State senate from the Tenth Senatorial district, composed of Tallapoosa and Elmore counties, in the coming primary. SOUTH RULES IN LEGISLATIVE HALLS

PRESIDENT A SOUTHERNER

Five of Ten Members of the Cabinet Are Also of Southern Birth.

Washington. — The government of the United States is dominated by the South today as firmly as it was before the Civil War. The president is a Southerner by birth, largely by education, by marriage and by the environment of his early manhood. Five of the ten members of his cabinet are Southerners by birth or by birth and residence. The chief justice of the United States supreme court is a Southerner.

The speaker of the house of representatives and the leader of that body, Oscar W. Underwood, hail from the same section, and a majority of the Democrats of the house are from the South and from states of Southern inclination.

The president pro tempore of the senate is a Southerner. The majority of the Democrats of the senate represent states below the Mason and Dixon line. Practically all the important committees of both houses have Southerners as their chairmen.

Such a situation has not been known in Washington since the Civil War. It has become worthy of note by virtue of the way in which the South is writing its views on the statute books and incorporating them in the internal and foreign policies of the nation.

The control of the present congress by the South is shown in the statistics of that body and by the organization which resulted therefrom. There are fifty Democrats in the senate and 291 Democrats in the house.

State—	Senate.	House.
Alabama	1	10
Arkansas	2	7
Florida	2	4
Georgia	2	12
Kentucky	2	9
Louisiana	2	8
Maryland	2	6
Mississippi	2	8
Missouri	2	14
North Carolina	2	10
Oklahoma	2	6
South Carolina	2	7
Tennesseee	2	8
Texas	2	18
Virginia	2	9
Total	29	136

In other words a safe majority of both houses rests in the hands of the South.

The fact becomes of striking importance when it is remembered that President Wilson has approved the caucus method of legislation. That is to say, a majority of the Democrats of the house and a majority of the Democrats of the senate have bound, and can bind all the Democrats to support a particular piece of legislation.

Belknap, chief inspector of safety appliances, has submitted his report on the wreck which occurred on the Central of Georgia railroad near Chattanooga, in which it was charged that the air brakes on the rear part of the train were rendered inoperative by the application of the emergency valve on the engine, thus causing the rear cars to run into the forward part of the train.

IMPROVEMENT KEYNOTE OF WEEK'S DISPATCHES.

Money Much Easier—Better State of Employment.

New York. — Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Improvement is the keynote of this week's dispatches. Much of the betterment is sentimental in character, but at the same time considerable of it is actual and substantial. Foremost in the news is better state of employment incident to the resumption of operations in plants that had closed down over the holidays, particularly in the iron and steel industry, the freer buying of commercial paper, with banks seeking desirable grades and reporting supplies not equal to demand; the all around ease in money following months of restricted credits and stringency, and betterment in demand for spring and beyond.

Activity in wool continues, with prices hardening. Calls for iron and steel have enlarged.

Business failures for the week were 413.

Wheat exports aggregate 6,713,289 bushels, against 6,128,460 bushels last year.

New York. — R. G. Dun's weekly trade review says:

Changes in business conditions have been mainly in the direction of improvement and confidence is further strengthened. The first real cold snap of the winter was decidedly favorable to thoes branches of the fall trade largely dependent upon the weather, while the demand for fuel was also accelerated by the exceedingly low temperatures.

A significant feature is the revival of quotable activity in commercial paper, merchants and manufacturers finding it possible to provide for their requirement at considerably easier terms than heretofore.

Almost without exception reports from the leading sections of the country indicate that mercantile and industrial enterprises are being undertaken with increased vigor, and it is gratifying that signs of improvements are clearly apparent in iron and steel.

Failures this week numbered 494 in the United States, against 434 last year; and 49 in Canada, compared with 21 a year ago.

PITTS DECLINES JOB ON SUPREME BENCH

UNWILLING, IT IS STATED, TO LEAVE PRACTICE OF LAW TO ACCEPT HONOR.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings in and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Col. W. L. Pitts, of Uniontown, declined the appointment of associate justice of the supreme court, to succeed Judge John C. Anderson, who was elevated to the chief justiceship.

Colonel Pitts was appointed to the position by the Governor the past week.

Colonel Pitts assigned as one of his reasons for declining the appointment the fact that he was unable to give up his law practice at this time to accept a judicial position.

Will Appeal to Supreme Court.

Sam Spicer, the Covington County farmer, will appeal to the supreme court to give him another chance to prove that he did not kill his wife and place the crime on a negro whom he had employed. Spicer was convicted and given a life sentence, but appealed and has been in the Montgomery County jail pending the disposition of his case in the high court. At the same time Spicer's case is submitted the State will ask the supreme court to reverse the Covington County criminal court in its ruling that Spicer should be allowed bail.

East Breaks Out of Prison.

Information has been received by the State convict department that Henry East, the notorious Alabama criminal, who has three times escaped from custody in this State, has broken out of the Indiana penitentiary at Indianapolis, where he was serving an intermediate sentence of from two to 14 years for burglary.

East was arrested in Indiana after he had escaped from the convict camp at Sanford, less than a year ago. Prior to that time he had escaped twice from moving trains while he was being taken to the State prison at Speigners.

He was convicted at Florence of burglary on three charges, and was given three separate sentences aggregating 18 years. He had served little more than a year when he escaped the third time.

East was next heard from in Indiana, where he was arrested on another burglary charge. He was given an intermediate sentence of from two to 14 years.

Extension of Time is Granted.

Judge Thomas G. Jones, of the United States district court, granted an extension of time to the railroad commission in which to prepare its record in the appealed rate cases of five railroads. The roads are the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis, the Louisville and Nashville, the South and North Alabama, the Western of Alabama, and the Central of Georgia.

The commission in the motion declared there were over 30,000 typewritten pages to be prepared for the record and that it would be impossible to do so in the usual thirty days allowed for this purpose. The commission was allowed until July.

Anniston Man May Escape Gallows.

Alex Waldrop may not be hanged for the murder of his wife at Anniston in 1912. The state board of pardons, at a special meeting recommended that Waldrop's sentence be commuted to life imprisonment in the penitentiary, and the governor announced that he would make a final decision after he had had time to read briefs and records of the case.

Neither the trial judge nor the solicitor has recommended mercy and the governor must be convinced that the ends of justice will not be met by the execution of Waldrop before he will exercise his power in behalf of the condemned man.

Branch Office Tax Commission.

Announcement was made that the state tax commission will establish a branch office in Birmingham immediately for the purpose of handling all matters relating to the mineral properties of the State.

The office, it was stated, is established for the purpose of obtaining accurate information as to all mineral properties in Alabama, whether they contain probable coal ore or other mineral deposits, and to ascertain the value of such properties.

Novel Registration Question.

State's Assessment Increased.

Total assessments of real and personal property in Alabama are $599,479,260 for the fiscal year ending September 30, showing an increase of $32,332,701 over the preceding year and an advance of approximately $77,000,000 in the tax assessments of the state since 1910, according to the annual report of the state tax commission. The assessment brings in total taxes of $8,896,615 to the state, or an increase of $16,997 over the previous year.

Errors were discovered and increases made in bank assessments by the various assistants to the commission during the year when they checked up the different counties, amounting to $312,916.55, bringing in additional revenue of $4,392.80 to the state and the counties interested.

The recapitulation shows that the total net revenue to the state and counties from the work of the county tax commissioners and the state tax commission for the fiscal year was $636,987.12.

Four Positions in Balance.

A chief justice and three associate justices of the supreme court must be nominated in the Democratic primary April 6. Governor O'Neal's elevation of Associate Justice John C. Anderson to the office of chief justice and his appointment of W. L. Pitts, of Uniontown, to succeed Justice Anderson has made four nominations necessary.

Until Chief Justice J. R. Dowdell resigned it had not been anticipated that more than two justices would be nominated. These were the successors to Justices J. J. Mayfield and Edward DeGraffenreid, whose terms expire. The resignation of Judge Dowdell and the elevation of Justice Anderson, however, brought brought two vacancies at a clip, and, under the constitution whenever a vacancy occurs in a judicial office more than six months preceding the general election, they must be elected in the general election.

Rowan Succeeds J. J. Arnold.

The governor appointed Dr. John F. Rowan of Anniston probate judge of Calhoun county, to succeed Judge J. J. Arnold, who died about 10 days ago.

Dr. Rowan is the fourth appointment which the governor has made to the Calhoun probate judgeship within the past two years. He first appointed Judge Arnold to succeed H. F. Cook, who retired from the office on account of ill health.

Judge Arnold was defeated in the regular election by W. H. Cooper, whose death occurred shortly after he had assumed office. The governor again appointed Judge Arnold to the office, and that official died a short while ago.

The office was then tendered to W. L. McCan, who declined the appointment. Dr. Rowan is the fourth man whom the governor has appointed probate judge of Calhoun county.

Irvin Pope's Case Delayed.

Because of the failure of records to arrive before the supreme court, the Irvin Pope case, of Calhoun county, has been postponed until the June term of the court. Pope is charged with killing J. B. McClurkin, a Calhoun farmer, and the supreme court has three times reversed the death sentence. The murder was committed in 1909.

Pope was convicted three months ago for the fourth time. His attorneys were allowed ninety days in which to prepare a bill of exceptions. For this reason the case was postponed, as the full ninety days were not up when the division in which Calhoun is placed was called.

Walker, a white man, paroled some time ago by Governor O'Neal, was taken back to Speigner's not only to finish his term, but to work out an additional term consisting of the time he has been at liberty. Walker's parole was revoked by the governor after the former had been convicted in recorder's court in Montgomery on a charge of embezzlement. The state convict department took charge of Walker and a trustee agent escorted him to Speigner's.

BIG MORTGAGE IS FILED BY L. & N.

START DOUBLE TRACK WORK

Preparing to Handle Big Volume of Trade Which is Expected After the Panama Canal Opens.

Birmingham. — The Louisville and Nashville Railroad is said to be almost ready to announce the extensions south of Birmingham. For the purpose of financing the extensions and double track work the company has filed a mortgage for $35,000,000. Of that sum $12,000,000 will be for the purchase or refinancing or paying old debts, while $13,000,000 will be used for the double track work and the extensions contemplated.

It is generally believed that the Louisville and Nashville, owners of the South and North, will extend its line into points of this State south of Birmingham that are not at this time available to the Louisville and Nashville. This work, it is believed, will include the building of a new line to Selma and thence to the main line to the coast.

The double tracking of the line south of Birmingham will be started just as soon as work on the north end of the North and South is completed. That work is almost through now, except at Blount Springs, where there is considerable construction yet to be done. The company expects to be in position to compete successfully for the vast traffic which is expected to move through this section to the gulf coast when the Panama Canal is opened.

WANTS LAW CHANGED.

Under the present state laws governing the issuance of municipal bonds, municipalities are hampered in their development, declares Mr. Totten. He proposes that the Georgia law on the issuance of municipal bonds be adopted by the State.

Mr. Totten is writing letters to the mayors of all municipalities in Alabama, asking the officials to assist in his fight.

SOUTH RULES IN LEGISLATIVE HALLS

PRESIDENT A SOUTHERNER

Five of Ten Members of the Cabinet Are Also of Southern Birth.

Washington. — The government of the United States is dominated by the South today as firmly as it was before the Civil War. The president is a Southerner by birth, largely by education, by marriage and by the environment of his early manhood. Five of the ten members of his cabinet are Southerners by birth or by birth and residence. The chief justice of the United States supreme court is a Southerner.

The speaker of the house of representatives and the leader of that body, Oscar W. Underwood, hail from the same section, and a majority of the Democrats of the house are from the South and from states of Southern inclination.

The president pro tempore of the senate is a Southerner. The majority of the Democrats of the senate represent states below the Mason and Dixon line. Practically all the important committees of both houses have Southerners as their chairmen.

Such a situation has not been known in Washington since the Civil War. It has become worthy of note by virtue of the way in which the South is writing its views on the statute books and incorporating them in the internal and foreign policies of the nation.

The control of the present congress by the South is shown in the statistics of that body and by the organization which resulted therefrom. There are fifty Democrats in the senate and 291 Democrats in the house.

State—	Senate.	House.
Alabama	1	10
Arkansas	2	7
Florida	2	4
Georgia	2	12
Kentucky	2	9
Louisiana	2	8
Maryland	2	6
Mississippi	2	8
Missouri	2	14
North Carolina	2	10
Oklahoma	2	6
South Carolina	2	7
Tennesseee	2	8
Texas	2	18
Virginia	2	9
Total	29	136

In other words a safe majority of both houses rests in the hands of the South.

The fact becomes of striking importance when it is remembered that President Wilson has approved the caucus method of legislation. That is to say, a majority of the Democrats of the house and a majority of the Democrats of the senate have bound, and can bind all the Democrats to support a particular piece of legislation.

APPLE CROP DAMAGE

Cedar Rust Unusually Destructive in 1912 Season.

Leading Fungous Disease of Fruit in Certain Sections—Nuts are Very Concentrated Food—Potato an Important Food.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The cedar rust or orange rust of the apple, which has its alternate generation on the red cedar, was unusually destructive during the season of 1912, especially in the Appalachian fruit belt, and resulted in severe losses to apple growers in the autumn of that year. The main facts about this disease have been worked out by investigators and known to science for several years.

The remarkable increase of the cedar rust, apparently due to its new adjustment to the Mork Imperial and other commercial varieties of cultivated apples which has taken place within the last eight to ten years, has caused this to be the leading fungous disease of this fruit in certain apple-growing sections. Lime-sulphur solution, the standard fungicide for spring treatment of the apple, will kill the fungus, but on account of weather conditions and repeated infection periods during the time of leaf formation, it is difficult and usually impracticable to prevent the disease by spraying.

For several years the bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture, has been recommending the destruction of cedars in the vicinity of large commercial orchards which they injure, as a result of which considerable cedar destruction has been accomplished. The unusually severe outbreak of 1912 and the poor results of spraying in that season, however, emphasizes the necessity of cedar eradication more than ever before, and the last year this was taken up more actively by the growers, particularly in Virginia and West Virginia, the department and the state experiment station pathologists lending their aid and advice to the movement.

The results of this work proved remarkably satisfactory during the spring infection period of 1913. In the valley of Virginia, where heavy losses were sustained the previous year, orchard after orchard recovered completely in a single season after having the cedars cut down with a radius of one or two miles. In order to insure thorough infection and thus make the effect of eradication stand out prominently, cedars were in some cases allowed to stand in the vicinity of certain orchards. From the result obtained in the work during the past year, it appears satisfactory to cut the cedars within a radius of 12 miles, even though hillsides were covered with cedars beyond that distance.

Nuts as a Food.

The department of agriculture says that nuts are a very concentrated food, even more so than cheese, but when rationally used they are well assimilated and may form a part of a well-balanced diet. Nuts are a very valuable source of protein and fat, these two nutrients being the characteristic constituents of the more common nuts, of which the walnut and cocoanut may be taken as types. In nuts, like the chestnut, carbohydrates are a characteristic constituent. For most families it is undoubtedly wiser to use nuts as the regular diet than as a condiment or supplement to an otherwise hearty meal.

Vegetarians and others who use nuts in place of meat should not depend upon them as the main food supply, but should supplement them with more bulky foods with a low content of protein and fat. As a whole, nuts may be classed among the staple foods and not simply as food accessories. At usual prices, nuts are reasonable sources of protein and energy. Peanuts supply protein and energy very cheaply, even compared with such staple foods as bread and beans. There are a number of nut foods on the market, but it may be stated that there is little to be gained from the standpoint of food value or economy in their use in place of the ordinary nuts and home-made nut products, especially by healthy persons who are willing to masticate their food thoroughly and to use nuts in reasonable combinations. Unless something has been added, the nutritive materials in such special preparations can not be greater than the nuts from which they are made, though in the mechanical condition or in some other way the foods may be better fitted for ready assimilation. Furthermore, nut butters, and similar foods give a pleasant variety to the diet, and they are relished by many who would not care for the unprepared nuts.

Though less subject to contamination than other foods, nuts should be handled and stored under good conditions, and especially should be protected from dampness and insect enemies.

The Role of Potatoes in the National Dietary.

The potato stands next to the cereals as the most important food of northern nations, according to the department of agriculture. In Germany this is particularly true; for the per capita consumption is 2.2 bushels, while ours is estimated at 2.8 bushels. An interesting study of statistics shows that the consumption of potatoes in Germany stands in inverse ratio to the wealth and social status of the people. The well-to-do people use 1.6 bushels each per annum; the peasantry 3.3 bushels, and the laborers in western Germany 12.3 bushels, while in the eastern provinces the per capita consumption of the peasant laborers is 17 bushels each per year.

Potato Starch.

A certain quantity of potato starch is used in this country for sizing in cotton mills, for which purpose it is preferred to corn starch, says the department of agriculture. There has been in the country produced an average of 20,000,000 pounds of potato starch annually and large annual importations from Germany have been made in addition. In 1910 there were imported 10,600,200 pounds of starch and 4,424,200 pounds of potato dextrin.

The manufacture of starch from potatoes in the United States is at present confined to the utilization of culls and of potatoes unfit for storage or shipment because of partial infection with tuber rot. The margin of profit is not large, in spite of a protective tariff of one cent per pound. The factories are able to run only six weeks in the year, and the interest and other overhead charges are therefore high. It seems possible to make some economic improvements in this system by introducing new factory methods, and the quantity of potatoes used could be increased, especially in districts remote from the markets, where a more rigid sorting should be practiced before shipment and all inferior potatoes kept at home. This would not only tend to reduce freight charges, but would give the consumer in a distant market a grade of potatoes which would waste much less in preparation for the table and for which a relatively higher price could be paid than for the present unsorted shipments. There is a possibility also that a method may be worked out for drying culled and surplus potatoes on the farm and the dried product later used for starch making. The total quantity required would, nevertheless, not make a large impression on a surplus potato crop.

DRAINAGE OF POULTRY YARD

Important Subject to Be Considered in Locating Yard and House—Southern Slope Is Best.

(By E. S. MILLER.)

The drainage is a very important subject to be considered, in locating the house and yard for the poultry. The ground should be well drained by sloping to the south.

A yard on a southern slope dries off quickly after a rain, and it gets the full benefit of all the sunshine, consequently it is nearly always dry.

The direct rays of the sun are great purifiers and destroyers of disease germs, and this helps greatly in keeping disease out of the flock. When hens are compelled to run about in a muddy yard and so keep their feet wet and muddy, their feathers become wet too, and in cool weather they become chilled. Hens will not lay under such conditions.

Dampness is also a direct cause of roup and all its kindred ailments, as well as rheumatism.

In warm weather a wet yard soon becomes filthy, and is a good place for the growth of all kinds of disease germs.

If your poultry yard is already built in such a place, it will pay you to move it to a south slope. If this is not possible, then haul dirt and raise the ground in the yard high enough so that it will be dry; clear away on the south side to let the sun in, and make some kind of a windbreak on the north.

Don't Market Capons too Early.

An expert says that the sad fresh mistake in raising capons is in marketing them too early, and not having enough fat on them. After capons ling, keep them growing until they reach full size, which will take from ten to twelve months, then fat them. This can be done in two weeks by stuffing in a good, fatty soup and feeding three times a day. All dirty fowl out of commercial coops, otherwise disease will result.

PLANS FOR WARDS

ADMINISTRATION INTENDS TO SATISFY OUR OBLIGATIONS TOWARD ISLANDERS.

PORTO RICANS DESERVING

Probably Will Be Made Citizens of a Territory.—Problem Confronting the Democrats in the Philippines Is More Complex.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—In his address to congress at its opening President Wilson said: "We can satisfy the obligations of generous justice toward the people of Porto Rico by giving them the ample and familiar rights and privileges accorded our own citizens in our own territories, and our obligations toward the people of Hawaii by perfecting the provisions of self-government already granted them, but in the Philippines we must go farther."

It apparently is the intention of the Democrats, before the end of the present congress, to make American citizens out of the people of Porto Rico. It is also believed to be the intention of the present administration to attempt to put things on what the Democrats consider to be a better basis in Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippines. Every political party has expressed in its platform the determination to advance the interests of the peoples who have come under our control by conquest or by other means. The means outlined for accomplishing this end by the parties have been as different as the parties themselves, but the end sought in every case has been the same.

Not very much appears, comparatively speaking, in the public press about the Porto Ricans, their aims, their ambitions, their industries and their present condition personally and in a business way. The Porto Ricans are progressing and one has only to read the government reports, especially those on educational matters, to prove the point. The government has promised that it will do more for the Porto Ricans before long. It probably will do the thing which seems best to inspire the islanders with confidence in this country, giving them the full rights of citizens of a territory of the United States.

Progress in Porto Rico.

In 1898 when the United States took Porto Rico over from Spain there was only one building in the land which had been especially built for school purposes. The total enrollment in the public schools was less than 30,000 children. Something under 20 per cent of the entire population was able to read and write. Today there are nearly 400 public school buildings in the island and there is a school enrollment of 162,000. The general percentage of illiteracy has been reduced more than 14 per cent and in a few years it is promised that it virtually will disappear.

For a long time the Porto Ricans were regarded as being an indolent people. Finally the "laziness" was discovered to be due to disease caused by the hook worm. Within a short time 40,000 Porto Ricans have been cured of this disease by American physicians and they have passed from lethargy to energy.

The problem which confronts the Democratic administration in the Philippines is much more complex than the one found in Porto Rico. In the Philippines there are many different types of people, different in customs, in religion and in stages of civilization. It is held by the people whom we know as Filipinos proper that they are capable of self-government and can answer all the perplexing questions of local home rule which may present themselves.

More Liberty for Filipinos.

The present American administration seems to feel that the Filipinos are not quite ready for self-government, and it can be said that appearances indicate the Democrats will push into the future the first suggested date as the one on which the Little Brown Brother could be turned loose to care for himself. However, it is the intention seemingly of the Democrats to grant more and more liberties to the wards across the sea until the day shall come when they can be given absolute freedom.

Recently some of the leading Filipinos have said that they would prefer, when they do get their freedom, to have the United States announce a protectorate over the islands. This would be a formal notification, of course, to the powers of the world that the United States would defend the Filipinos' liberty at all hazards.

Over for Dill Experts.

Recently in these dispatches attention was called to the possibility that the Democratic majority in congress would pass a bill to create a "bureau of dill experts," the duty of which would be to scrutinize bills of which before their introduction to see that they would do what they were intended to do and would contain no so-called "jokers." The public probably understands pretty well what a "joker" is. It is something slipped into a bill and which purports to do a certain thing, and which in reality will prevent that thing from being done.

Now Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, chairman of the senate committee on [illegible] has announced that the senate committee of the United States would not adopt [illegible] measures. The senator says that much time unquestionably can be saved, and many errors avoided by the creation of an expert bureau with nothing to do but to pass on the flaws in bills.

The espousing of the cause of this legislation by the senator from Oklahoma gives the authority of definite legislation intention to the report which was published in this correspondence not long ago that the Democrats might take means to prevent in the future the introduction into congress of bills containing jokers. There probably will be no open antagonism to such a measure unless it be based ostensibly on the ground of expense. Sometimes when members of congress want to nip prospective legislation and do not care to give their real reasons, they plead economy of service. A bureau of experts would cost some money, but in the minds of the advocates of such a bureau the money saved would many times replace that spent for salaries for the bureau's experts.

Activities of Suffragists.

In the presidential campaign of the summer and fall of 1912, Mrs. Medill McCormick of Chicago, who is the daughter of the late Mark Hanna, showed that she was a resourceful leader and an organizer who knew how to make strong the foundations of a campaign. Mrs. McCormick has just come to Washington to make the leadership of the suffragist committee on congressional action.

It can be said that from what is known of them in the past that Mrs. McCormick and her companion in Washington are good strategists. They have made simultaneous announcements that they intend to get the congressional action necessary to secure a suffrage amendment to the constitution, and that, second, and even more important from their point of view, they intend to undertake vigorous campaigns in every congressional district in the United States next fall to defeat candidates who do not declare themselves in favor of the woman suffrage movement.

It may be that few southern members of congress will be influenced to vote for the necessary amendment by the prospects of a woman campaign against them in their districts, but there are a good many northern members, anti-suffragists at heart, who may think they see visions of defeat unless they show kindness toward the cause "which is bound to come into its own."

The suffragists have just completed their campaign or organization. There are generals, field officers, troop and company commanders, and privates in plenty in the ranks to engage in the campaign. It is a militant organization, but nothing of the English woman's type of militancy enters into the plans.

Rules Committee Against Them.

The rules committee of the house, which has under consideration the matter of appointing a committee on suffrage, is antagonistic in spirit to the plan, and it probably will be in act unless the women who are in charge of the campaign for this form of recognition of their cause can move the members out of the frame of mind in which their "willing souls would sit." Chairman Henry of the rules committee had his sensibilities much ruffled recently by a sharp encounter which he had with one or two of the aggressively inclined suffragists. This encounter was prior to the time that the women had formulated a definite plan of "gentle attack." It is said that Mr. Henry has been mollified somewhat and that with his colleagues of the committee he will give patient attention to the further pleas which are to be made to him and that he soon may find himself willing to compromise if not to yield all that is asked.

As soon as the nominations for representatives in congress are made by the different parties next spring or summer, the proper local organizations of suffragists will appoint tactful but acute committees to call upon the nominees and to ask them how they stand on the question of suffrage. It is taken for granted by the women that all candidates of the Progressive party for congress will be in favor of woman suffrage, for the party is committed to the cause.

Not All Progressives.

It must be remembered, however, that the woman suffrage movement is not a movement solely of the Progressive party. There are thousands of women who believe in suffrage who are inclined politically to Democracy or Republicanism. It is probable that the Democratic candidates will be approached by women of the Democratic faith, and that the same rule of approach will apply in the case of Republicans. A candidate of the Democratic party may find that he is in danger of losing votes to a Republican antagonist if the latter declares for woman suffrage while the former declares against it. The women may not be able to vote, but their influence, as men know, always has been the case with womanly influence, probably can make itself felt.

It can be taken for granted that before the suffragists in Washington are through with their winter's work they will have money enough to carry on the kind of a congressional campaign which they have outlined as most likely to be effective. All the suffragists of the country of course will be expected to contribute, but it is the [illegible]

GLASS IS DENIED SEAT IN SENATE

COMMITTEE VOTES NINE TO ONE AGAINST SEATING GOVERNOR'S APPOINTEE.

LEE OF MARYLAND WINS

Only One Senator, Bradley of Kentucky, Voted to Accept Glass' Credentials.

Washington.—By a vote of 7 to 2 the Senate committee on privileges and elections decided to report in favor of the seating of Blair Lee, elected Senator from Maryland, and by a vote of 9 to 1 against the seating of Frank P. Glass, appointed Senator from Alabama.

If the Senate accepts the report of the committee on privileges and elections, Blair Lee will take his seat, displacing Senator Jackson, within a short time.

Glass was appointed to fill a vacancy caused by the death of the late Senator Joseph Johnston. The action of the committee indicated that Senators not elected by primaries, in accordance with the new amendment to the constitution, or not appointed by the Governor in pursuance of specific authority conferred by the legislature, will not be given their seats in the Senate.

Only one Senator, Bradley of Kentucky (republican), voted in favor of accepting the Glass credentials.

5 NATIONS ACCEPT INVITATION

Will Take Part in Great Naval Procession.

Washington.—Five of the nations invited to take part in the great naval procession that will start at Hampton Roads and steam by way of the Panama Canal to the Golden Gate have notified the state department of their acceptance. They are the Argentine Republic, France, Germany, Great Britain and Portugal. Japan also has decided to participate, according to press reports, and it is believed all of the maritime nations of the world will be represented in the line.

Plans of the navy department call for the appearance in line of about 100 warships, 68 of them under foreign flags. The great powers are invited to send four ships each and the smaller nations to contribute two each.

The date for assembling this international fleet has not been fixed, but under the terms of the act of Congress it must be early in 1915, and as the voyage will consume at least a month, the start must be made by the middle of January if the fleet is to reach San Francisco for the opening of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, February 20.

REFUSED STANDING COMMITTEE

Action of House Rules Committee Disappoints Suffrage Leaders.

Washington.—The decision of the majority leaders of the House rules committee against the creation of a standing committee of the House on woman's suffrage, landed like a bombshell in the ranks of national suffrage leaders gathered here.

Both the congressional committee of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage have been pressing the matter.

The Congressional Union, at a hurriedly called meeting, adopted unanimously a resolution declaring the meeting "regarded with indignation" the action of the democratic members of the rules committee in refusing to create a committee to consider the justice and expediency of extending self-governing institutions to women.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, luster and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp. Early Suffragette.

Militant minded women were known in England before the suffragettes, one of whom lies in Henry VII.'s chapel—Margaret, countess of Richmond, its builder's mother, with her brass effigy by Torrigiano. She hated the Turk, and she made, as Camden reports, a sporting offer to the chivalrous of her day: "On the condition that princes of Christendom would combine themselves and march against the common enemy, the Turk, she would most willingly attend them and be their laundress in camp." That position of laundress to the crusaders would have been an easy one, for it was the fashion to make vows to change no underclothing until the holy sepulcher was regained.

HEART WOUNDS NOT FATAL

Modern Surgeon Operates, and the Results Have Been Satisfactory Almost Beyond Belief.

There seems to be no limit to the wonderful things modern surgery can accomplish. Recently Dr. Francis Stewart of Philadelphia reported five cases in which he had been obliged to sew up the heart after stab wounds. All the patients recovered. One of them lived for five years and then succumber to pulmonary tuberculosis.

The difficulties of this operation call for wonderful technique and skill. Clots are liable to form and when swept into the circulation the patient dies as if shot through the brain. Constant motion of the organ calls for a quick eye and rapid, steady work. It is interesting to note that at the present time one-half of all such cases coming into the hospitals are saved.

A Parisian surgeon restored heart action in a case of actual death. The patient was killed by an automobile. Believing that something could be done the surgeon ordered the patient to be put upon the operating table half an hour after death had been pronounced. The chest cavity was opened in 50 seconds. A pint of blood was found in the heart sac from a wound in the heart muscle two and a half inches long. This blood was removed, the heart was sewn up, and massage was begun. In a few minutes the pulse was felt at the wrist. The heart continued to beat more than half an hour and then stopped. It was found at autopsy that injuries to other organs had been too great for recovery, which would have been certain had the heart alone been involved.

ENDED SUPREME COURT LEAK

Legal Body Forced to Take Precautions for the Safeguarding of Its Decisions.

"Yes, it is true that supreme court decisions leaked in the old days," remarked an old-time Wall street broker. "I remember a certain important suit about 20 years ago. It was the great case of those days, as big in its way as the Standard Oil and Tobacco suits of recent date. A week before the decision came down the son of one of the judges came into my office, and I told him that of the nine judges, one would decide 'so and so,' one would refrain from any opinion, and the remaining seven would make a decision 'so and so.'

"He smiled and went away. Shortly after the decision was rendered, and the matter had turned out as I had foretold, this young man came back to the office. He said his father was greatly worried over the leak in the court, and asked me if I could help them trace the source of my information. I told him what I knew. That one of the official supreme court stenographers had been selling advance copies of the decisions to a very prominent broker of that time. What this broker paid for his information I, of course, do not know; but it was established that I was correct as to where the weak spot was in the court.

"Since then every decision of the supreme court has been written in long hand (one copy), thus making it absolutely impossible for an outsider to get the news in advance. This explains, in part, why it now takes so long for the court to announce its decisions."

Replacing Delusions.

If the popular imagination is to become heated to a point where it discerns an attempt at abduction in every "dizzy feeling" or momentary illness suffered by a young woman in a public place, it will be unsafe for a man to offer the slightest civility to any person of the other sex whom he does not happen to know. To assist a woman into a car will subject him to suspicion, and to go to her aid if she faints in the street will render him liable to arrest as a white-slaver.

Anatole France says somewhere that one result of getting rid of old delusions is that they are often replaced with others of worse aspect. This present phase of popular credulity on the subject would deserve to be regarded merely as silly if it were not for the tendency of an exaggeration of the fancied dangers of the evil to confuse the public mind about its real dangers.

When Parsons Might Not Hunt.

An English clergyman may shoot birds without outraging popular sentiment, why not, then, ride after a fox? To find the answer we must probably go back to those old days when hard riding meant hard drinking, and when spiritual life was at a low ebb. The "hunting parson" came to be a type of cleric who habitually neglected his duties. It is a happy circumstance that in these days foxhunting need no longer be a reproach because the greater reproach has been removed. A parson who does his work faithfully and well need not be grudged a few hours' gallop in his leisure moments. Indeed, he can do it all the better for the exercise, and with respect for his spiritual teaching by gaining a reputation for manliness and pluck.

GOOD COONTRY ROADS PAY FOR THEMSELVES

The direct effect of changing bad roads has, upon land value and the general economic welfare of a community is shown in several concrete illustrations gathered by the United States Department of Agriculture. The department has just issued a statement on the subject, based upon a mass of information gathered by the Office of Public Roads, which is making a special study of the economic effect of road improvement in the country. According to data gathered, where good replace bad ones, the values of farm lands bordering on the roads increase to such an extent that the cost of road improvement is equalized, if not exceeded, The general land values, as well as farm values, show marked advancement, following the improvement of roads.

In Lee county, Va., a farmer owned 100 acres between Ben Hur and Jonesville, which he offered to sell for $1,800. In 1908 this road was improved, and, although the farmer fought the improvement, he has since refused $3,000 for his farm. Along this same road a tract of 188 acres was supposed to have been sold for $6,000. The purchaser refused the contract, however, and the owner tnreatened to sue him. After the road improvement, and without any improvement upon the land, the same farm was sold to the original purchaser for $9,000.

In Jackson county, Ala., the people voted a bond issue of $250,000 for road improvement and improved 24 per cent of the roads. The census of 1900 gives the value of all farm lands in Jackson county at $4.90 per acre. The selling value at that time was from $6 to $15 per acre. The census of 1910 places the value of all farm lands in Jackson county at $9.79 per acre, and the selling price is now from $15 to $25 per acre. Actual figures of increased value following road improvement are shown.

As the roads in no way effect soil fertility or quality of the farm, advances are due essentially to the decrease in the cost of hauling produce to market or shipping point. Farms are now regarded as plants for the business of farming, and any reduction in their profits through unnecessarily heavy costs for hauling on bad roads naturally reduces their capitalization into values. With reduced costs for hauling, profits are increased; with the result that the farm plant shows satisfactory earnings on a higher capital value.

The automobile also has begun to be an important factor in increasing rural values where good roads are introduced.

Immigration is particularly marked where road conditions are favorable; in fact, the figures of the department seem to indicate that good roads indirectly increase the demand for rural property, and the price of farm land, like that of any commodity, is ruled by the relations between demand and supply.—National Monthly.

MAPLESVILLE NEWS

It has been some time since we have seen anything from our town in print, so we are going to let your hear from us.

Messrs. Ed Smitherman and Frank Fallon of Clanton were here last Saturday on official business.

Mr. Carter B. Logan of Centreville, who has a law office here, was in town today.

Master Russell Tull left a few days ago for school in Baltimore, Md.

Gardening seems to be the order of the day now and we have had some fine weather for it.

Dr. [illegible] has installed one of the most up-to-date offices to be found this side of a city. The water supply is furnished by the Twin Tree Lumber Co.

The friends of Miss Mamie Woods will be glad to know that she is home again, greatly improved in health.

Dr. V. B. Potts has purchased the Vines place, and his father, Mr. T. D. Potts, of Centreville will move there for the purpose of improving and overseeing the farm.

The people of Maplesville observed a week of prayer last week at the various churches, which was attended with much interest and enjoyed by all who were present, and we feel that it was a spiritual uplift to the town and community.

The Ladies Missionary Union of the Baptist church are doing some excellent work since their organization.

Rev. Mr. Brasher fills his regular appointment at the Baptist church each first Sunday; the Rev. Mr. Hartzog at M. E. church on the second Sunday and the Rev. Mr. Stevenson of Centreville preaches to his mission here on Thursday and night before second Sunday in each month. There is no Presbyterian church here and their services are held in the M. E. church. Perhaps no town has better ministers than we have now, all are intelligent and hustling men.

Yours truly,
J. W. Mitchell.

WHAT THINKING MEN THINK

Many of the world's leading thinkers and doers have expressed thoughts of great value to the industrial and commercial world which have a direct bearing on the situation in Alabama.

"Ample, safe and rapid transportation facilities are even more necessary than cheap transportation."—Theodore Roosevelt.

"The benefactions derived . . . . from railroads is inestimable, and vastly exceeding any intentional philanthropy on record."—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

"Just as your servant can only properly discharge his duties when he is suitably fed, suitably clothed, and suitably housed, so the railroad can only properly discharge its duties when it receives proper treament from the public."—Hon. Chas. A. Prouty, of Interstate Commerce Commission.

"A government may hope to meet its obligations through its power to tax, but American railroads can only meet their obligations out of their own earning capacity."—London Economist.

"The prosperity of a railroad depends upon the prosperity of the territory it serves."

"Our railroad system is without parallel in the world, because we are living as a Nation, and in Europe they live as communities. That accounts in part for the wonderful efficiency of the American railroad."—Hon. Franklin K. Lane, of President Wilson's Cabinet.

"Our railway management has many faults and abuses in detail; but, taking its work as a whole, it has brought down rates to a cheapness which is unequalled elsewhere; and has developed the business of the country on a scale which would have been impossible under any system of rates based on cost of service."—Arthur T. Hadley, President Yale University.

"The American railway pays the highest wages in the world out of the lowest rates in the world, after having set down to capital account the lowest capitalization per mile of any of the great countries of the world."

"The railway, as a corporation, has no voice in the selection of those who frame and administer the laws for its regulation. Its physical property, extending in part through sparsely settled sections and through wilderneses perhaps, is the most defenseless property that exists. In the very nature of its existence, therefore, it can find safety only when, in the darkness of the night watches, in times of stress and peril, and in the enactment of laws for its regulation, the invisible sentinel of public opinion stands guard over its rights and property."

Each and every one of these thoughts came from the mind of one or more eminent men who have extended a great influence for development and upbuilding.

We present them here for your consideration in the hope that they will guide you in forming a correct estimate of the L. & N.

POLITICAL CONDITIONS IN CHINA

China is one of the oldest countries in the world; There is authentic history to show that they had a fairly civilized country 2200 B. C. That was before Abraham was called out from Ur of the Chaldees. During these four thousand centuries or more China has been ruled by an emperor, up till about two years ago. While he was a despotic ruler, he was not always a tyrant, and the cities and villages have always had a large amount of freedom in their local government.

Christianity was brought into China a little over a hundred years ago, and little by little has been making progress and gradually impressing its ideals upon some of the people of the great empire.

With Christianity has come the great idea of Western learning and Western government. This got such a hold on some of the leaders that they decided they wanted a constitutional governmant, somewhat like that of England. This was promised by the emperor, but before the time arrived for it to be granted, a republic was wanted by a large number of people; soon a revolution broke out and drove the emperor from the throne, and set up a republic, with government something like our own.

It has been nearly two years now since China was declared a republic. The fighting had not ceased two years ago, but the revolutionists were gaining ground. Perhaps a great many of the readers of the Press kept up with those happenings from the papers at that time, consequently it is not necessary to dwell upon them in this artiele. Dr. Sun Yat Sen was the first president, but after a few months he gave way to Yuan Shi Kai. He was the provisional president. In October, of this year, the regular Parliament, or Congress, was called together, and Yuan Shi Kai was elected president of the Republic of China.

Even though it was noised abroad to the world that a republic was established in China, it has not been easy sailing at all. Large numbers of the people knew absolutely nothing about it, and others who knew were not always wise. Last Summer there was a rebellion of the Southern States, or Provinces. The leaders did not like the president, nor his way of doing things, so they thought they would pull off and start another government. But Yuan Shi Kai got hold of some money about that time and sent soldiers into the South and got the upper hand of the rebels and drove them out. He began to execute all the leaders he could find who had taken part in the revolution. The chief of police of Canton was killed outright. He was a very progressive man, and was cleaning up the town. He had closed the opium-smoking dens and immoral dives, and was making Canton one of the cleanest cities in the world, (I mean morally).

The causes of this rebellion and reaction seemed to be the lack of wisdom on the part of the officials, and the strong, conservative hand of Yuan Shi Kai. A large number of the officials of this province were Christians and very progressive men, but, in their desire for progress, they went faster than China was ready to go, and thus incurred the hatred of the bellum. Hence reaction set in against progress. At present the government is pretty well in the hands of the president and the governor of the Province, and things are quiet for the most part. There has always been robbers in China, and during and since the revolution they have been pretty bad. The government had troubles of its own and could not give attention to robber bands, and so they struck terror wherever they went. These robber bands still exist back in the mountain passes, and come out whenever they find a chance to rob and plunder. But since the government is getting more quiet they have a harder time of it. The cities and towns have a good police force and are keeping the robbers off, to a large extent. During the revolution the robbers came to our place and robbed one of our missionaries, but there is practically no danger now. We have soldiers on guard all the time and they keep the robbers scared off. They really serve as police, rather than regular soldiers. The time that the robbers came, the soldiers had been removed and none replaced for that night. So in life and property, one is practically as safe here as in America.

It is not at all certain what will be the final outcome of it all. It may be that the president will be able to hold things together and get the government on a firm basis, but still some people have not much confidence in his government.

China has about one fourth of the population of the world. If you were to line up all the people of the world and go down the line, every fourth man will be a Chinaman. Since there are so many people here, and what they do will greatly effect the rest of the world, I would advise every school boy, and all others to read everything they can find in the papers and magazines about things in China Occasionally I shall be glad to spend some of my few spare moments in writing about conditions here.

MUCH BOOZE CONFISCATED

Deputy Sheriff R. S. Carson arrested Manuel DuBose last Saturday out at the rock quarry in the northern part of the county, charged with violating the prohibition law. DuBose had ordered a barrel of booze from Birmingham, which was brought to Shelby in an automobile. Upon arrival at Shelby, DuBose's trusted agents, Rice Taylor, a white man, and Conce Wood, a negro, were in waiting to receive the "fire water" and proceeded across the country in a wagon to the quarry. They had little time to dispense their goods, however, as they ran afoul of Deputy Carson, who thought fifty gallons was a little too much for dry territory, and placed the trio under arrest and proceeded with them to Clanton. They remained in jail only a short while, as DuBose put up a cash bond of $1500.00 for the three; their preliminary trial is set for Monday, February 2, before Judge E. B. Deason.

DuBose has been operating in that section of the county for several months, and has figured in the Courts before for violations of the prohibition law, and is now under a sentence of sixty days hard labor) the sentence was suspended pending good behavior. When arrested, a large 44 calibre Colts revolver was found on his person.

SERIOUS SHOOTING AFFRAY

While coming up from Montgomery Saturday last on the north bound accommodation, Miles Arant a telegraph operator, and Jack Fuquay engaged in a quarrel, the result being that Fuquay was seriously shot. The shooting took place between Coosada and Deatsville while the train was going at a rate of about thirty-five miles an hour. The two were on the front platform of the car, and it is said Fuquay began beating Arant over the head with a pistol, when the latter drew a 38 calibre revolver, firing five shots at Fuquay, two of which toon effect in the neck. Fuquay fell to the ground, and was later picked uo and carried to his home at Deatsville, where he is said to be in a critical condition. Arant proceeded to Coopers and returned on the south bound train to surrender to the sheriff of Elmore county. Both parties reside at Deatsville, and bad feeling has existed between them for some time.

DEATH OF MR. PATRICK SMITH.

Mr. Patrick Smith, after a lingering illness, died at his home in Clanton, Friday night last. "Uncle Patty, as he was familiarly known, was, perhaps Clanton's oldest citizen, being 89 years of age at the time of his death, and was highly respected by all who knew him. He had been a resident of Clanton some twenty odd years, removing here from Coosa county, and was a gallant Confederate soldier. He is survived by a widow, four sons and a daughter, Mrs. Nannie Crichton, who was for many years editor of the Banner. His remains were interred in Clanton cemetery Saturday afternoon, the Masonic fraternity, of which he had long been a member, performing the last rites. Peace to his ashes.

ALABAMA GOOD ROADS ASSOCIATION

Birmingham, Ala., January 26th, (Special.)—The Executive Committee of the Alabama Good Roads Association met in Birmingham on January 22nd, 1914.

This committee is composed of over 40 prominent nd leading good roads advocates in the State. The meeting was an enthusiastic and earnest one and a number of plans in the interest of the Association and cause of good roads were mapped out. A movement was put on foot to secure at least 10,000 due paying members at $1.00 per year during the year 1914. The Finance Committee was instructed to put solicitors in the field to push this work and to organize county good roads associations. Resolutions urging the people to observe Good Roads Days, August 14th, 15th and 16th were passed. These resolutions called upon the Governor, Emmet O'Neal, to issue a proclamation calling upon the people and the road officials in every county in the State to observe the same.

President John Craft and Secretary of the Association, Rountree, were instructed to write to the Governor, also candidates for the Senate and State Legislature and ask their views in regard to financing the State's share in accepting Federal aid, also regarding appropriating money to maintain the public roads of the State, as possible to help fill the next Legislature of Alabama with good roads advocates and those that will take no backward steps in good roads legislation. The Association decided to amalgamate and affiliate with the United States Good Roads Association, of which Senator John H. Bankhead is president, and J. A. Rountree, secretary. President Craft was instructed to appoint 6 delegates to attend the meeting, which will be held in Boise, Ohio. The date of [illegible] to be named later. Everything points to a very successful year in the history and

SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT.

The new year is before us, charged with its new responsibilities and freighted with glorious opportunities, that strongly appeal to us for greater efforts than we have ever made. May all who are interested in school improvement work, cheerfully respond to the call for greater usefulness and more effective service.

In 1904 the Alabama Federation of Woman's Clubs, desiring to be of practical use to the cause of education in Alabama, approached the Hon. I. W. Hill, State Superintendent at that time and offered their services. There was no state funds to finance the improvement of organizing school improvement work in the state. Thus, women, as all good women desiring no recompence save "the joy of serving," gave their hands and hearts to the work out of which has grown the present State Improvement Association work, that, in which every county in Alabama is deeply interested to-day

What are the present conditions? Is your school house more attractive? Is the house a good one and painted inside and out? Of course it is seated with good suitable patented desks and has good slated cloth or Hyloplate blackboard. There are maps, charts, dictionaries, a globe and a good teachers desk. No doubt there are nice school room mottoes and pictures on the wall. The room is supplied with dustless crayon and erasers, and all the windows have shades and sash curtains. The library that you only had to pay $10 to get $90 worth of the best of books, how about that? That old common drinking cup, is no more in use but each student has his individual cup. That means no more spreading diseases in that way. The play grounds are in good shape and games have been provided so that the physical side of life can be developed. Your School Improvement Association meets every two weeks and discusses the plans of work and what you must do next without a doubt. That program you had last Friday night was excellent, it was surprising to see how the young people took an interest.

If you don't feel that you can do any more than put a few pictures on the wall, organize your improvement work and do that. When that is done you will then see that you can do something else, and little by little you will have a new school house and you will hardly know how it came.

"As the committee is so is the school," will be a good motto. You only need a president, a vice president, a secretary and a business and membership committee. Keep a good record of every thing done and the money spent so that you may be able to report at the end of the year. It is well to have a membership fee of five to ten cents dues per month.

You will find that your community has its own individual needs. These every association will have to work out to its own satisfaction. I will speak of the needs of the country schools and how the association can help them next week.

Let me make a personal appeal to every teacher and parent to make an earnest effort to organize an association in your community. I shall be glad to cooperate with you in any way in your work as sending literature or assisting in person when I can.

Yours, in the work;
JOHN A. HUNTER,
County President School Improvement work.

One Goat and Thousands of Cats in the Pound

WASHINGTON.—Statistics as to stray domestic animals and their disposition by the District pound have come to light in the semi-annual report of that institution to the health department. For the greater part of the time of the collectors of the pound is taken up with dogs and cats. In the half year just closed there were impounded 2,423 cats and 2,176 dogs, while of other animals there were only six cows, two horses, and one goat. It is provided by law that geese also must be taken into custody when found at large, but in the last half-year none was found. Other animals required to be taken when straying are bulls, mules, calves, sheep and hogs.

For the latter three classes of animals, pound fees of one dollar are charged for redemption. For geese the charge is 50 cents, and for all other animals except cats, two dollars. Fees collected for the half year just completed amounted to $692.

Cats are collected only on request of those having them in charge, and are taken to be painlessly killed. They are not even confined for a short period, but put immediately in the gas chamber, where they are asphyxiated. Officials in charge of the activities of the pound are beginning the use of traps for catching cats, but these, too, are placed on private property, and only on request. The traps are so constructed as to confine the cats in a ventilated box, and before they are placed the party making the request must sign an agreement carefully to watch the trap, to notify the pound as soon as possible after the animal is caught, and in case of delay to feed the confined feline.

Dogs, also, after being kept 48 hours in order that owners may have an opportunity to redeem them, are killed by the administration of charcoal gas. Death is painless, experts say, and is accomplished in about half a minute. In the case of cats, death takes place after about a minute.

Some dogs enter the pound as enforced boarders, being quarantined for suspected rabies. Eighteen dogs retained for examination were returned to their owners during the last half year. Of all the other animals collected during the period, 280 were redeemed by their owners, 86 were sold, and 4,209 were turned over to the street cleaning department for disposal.

Stood Himself on Track and Did Ajax Act

A CAR was whizzing toward the green hills of Virginia, not so far away. The big suburban was crowded with men, women and bundles, and everybody was happy except one passenger who weighed, say, 220 pounds—and every pound a jag. He was a noisy man, and he wanted to fight. He was so set for a scrimmage that the motorman finally accommodated him by putting him off the car. Before the hero could get back to his car and start it Mr. Milwaukee was on the track daring him to run him down. The scheme worked, and the 220 pounds worth of jag reeled aboard again.

The motorman with the valuable assistance of the conductor, put the jagman off the car eight distinct and dramatic times. And for eight distinct and dramatic times Mr. Milwaukee stood himself on the track and did the Ajax act, and—

Then a small, anemic man who had also been overzealous in his attempt to make Milwaukee famous, and who was the roisterer's companion, took a sudden virtuous zigzag notion to help out the motorman in his good work by sitting on his friend after he had been bounced from the car. You have heard about that rhythmic fly on the wheel of an automobile.

Well, sir, the two created such a rumpus that it attracted the attention of a passenger who had been reading his newspaper at the lower end of the car. He was as heavy a man as Milwaukee, and, what weighed more, he was as sober as that judge we do our comparing by. One look out of the window was all he needed to send him to the rescue.

"Hold on—that's my brother; I'll settle him."

And he did. You bet he did! The words were not out of his mouth before he had jumped into the scene of action, flung brother Milwaukee flat on his back and was sitting astride of him—like a temperance Gambrinus straddling an intoxicated cask.

"I've got him where he can't get up; start your car, old man."

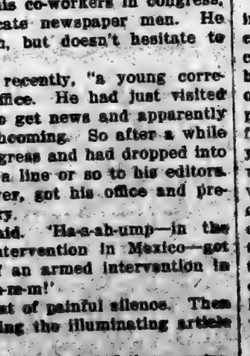
The motorman accepted the invitation and the car, with its crowd of men, women and various bundles, went whizzing toward the green hills of Virginia that were almost as far away as when they started.

Doesn't Believe in Taking Things Too Seriously

THERE is one man in congress who doesn't believe in taking things too seriously. He is Representative Buck Howard of Georgia, a young man with a brilliant sense of humor. Unlike some of his co-workers in congress, he doesn't try to placate newspaper men. He makes friends of them, but doesn't hesitate to tell tales about them.

"One day," said he recently, "a young correspondent was in my office. He had just visited the state department to get news and apparently no news had been forthcoming. So after a while he had come up to congress and had dropped into my place to telephone a line or so to his editors. He took off the receiver, got his office and prepared to dictate a story.

"'Take this,' he said. 'Ha-a-ah-ump—in the event of an armed intervention in Mexico—got that? In the event of an armed intervention in Mexico—ha-a-a-ah—u-m-m-m!'



"There was a moment of painful silence. Then the man who was taking the illuminating article evidently began to protest against the delay.

"'In the event of an armed intervention in Mexico,' concluded the reporter, desperately, 'it is highly probable that troops will be sent into that country!'"

Representative Howard always wonders what the editor said when he read those lines.

It Is No Longer a Joke to This Congressman

"HEY, Reilly, gimme a ticket for San Francisco! Here's the dollar." So many members of the house of representatives have recently thrust this bit of wit upon the member from Connecticut that it is no longer a joke to him. It all came about through a bill that Mr. Reilly introduced in the house "by request." The request was made by a man in his district named James L. Cowles.

Long before the parcel post was put into existence Mr. Cowles was advocating it, and so complete had the working of that system become, in his mind at least, that the amount of money required to carry a parcel from Chicago to St. Paul would carry it from New York to San Francisco.

So firm was Mr. Cowles' belief in the feasibility of his scheme that he extended it to apply to the railroads. He advocated a flat rate for freight and passenger transportation, and his flat rate was placed at $1. This would take a passenger from Washington to Alexandria, across the Potomac river, or from Washington to San Francisco.

"By request," Mr. Reilly introduced a bill to the house to put Mr. Cowles' but his scheme into operation. That is as far as it has gone. And that is the reason so many members are thrusting $1 bills in Mr. Reilly's direction and asking him for tickets to San Francisco.

WOOD FOR ISTHMUS

GOOD REASON TO BELIEVE HE WILL BE MADE GOVERNOR OF CANAL ZONE.

IS WELL FITTED FOR PLACE

Qualified by His Military, Sanitary and Civil Experience—Colonel Goethals May Have Position for Brief Time.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—In this city recently, especially in and about army headquarters, one of the chief questions of interest has been, "Is Major General Leonard Wood to be made governor of the Panama Canal Zone?"

When the country was first informed through Washington dispatches that this question was being asked with apparently some soundness of base, the secretary of war said that General Wood was to be sent to command the eastern division of the army with Governor's Island, New York harbor, as his headquarters.

For some reason or other the country seems to have accepted this word of Mr. Garrison as intended to mean that General Wood was not to be made the governor of the Canal Zone. It seems certain, however, that while Mr. Garrison spoke the exact truth, the fact that he evaded answering the direct question makes it seem likely that the present chief of staff, after going to Governor's Island for a short rule, will pack the furniture of his quarters and "take up the march" via the steamship for the Isthmus of Panama. Colonel Goethals, the canal's chief engineer, may be made governor for a few months.

Would Solve Problems.

If General Wood is given the Panama appointment to succeed Goethals, the act will solve many of the problems which have been vexing the administration. In the course of a few months there will be troops enough, cavalry, infantry and artillery on the Canal Zone to constitute a proper command for a major general. Moreover, Leonard Wood has had more experience in military-civil governmental matters than any other man in the United States army. It is generally conceded in Washington that he would be a good governor of the zone.

The differences of opinion which exist in Washington as to the proper form of government of the Canal Zone have been frequently explained. The present law provides for a one man rule while a proposed amendment to the law provides for a rule of three men. One of the stronger arguments for Commissioner Metcalfe's plan of a three-man commission is that no one man probably could be found possessing the necessary qualifications to make final answers to military, sanitary and civil administration questions.

General Wood not only is a military man of admitted merit, but he is a graduate physician and surgeon, in sympathy and touch with modern sanitary methods, and further, he has had long experience as an executive in tropical climates and among tropical people. General Wood was military governor of Cuba from December 12, 1899, until the transfer of that country's government to the Cuban Republic, May 20, 1902. From 1903 to 1906 he was governor of the Moro province in the Philippine Islands, and for two years thereafter he commanded the troops of the Philippine division.

Goethals Doesn't Want Place Long.

It is generally understood in Washington that Colonel Goethals, the chief of engineers of Panama canal construction, has no great desire to be the zone's governor for any length of time. There is nothing in the place which can add anything to his fame. He has worked for seven years on the isthmus and probably with his engineer chiefs of division he will be given the thanks of the American congress for the great work done on the isthmus. It is likely, however, that Colonel Goethals may be made the governor of the zone for a month or two to give him the distinction of having been the "first ruler of the work."

It will take an executive order to abolish the Panama Canal commission and this order may be delayed long enough to enable the present commissioners to be present in an official capacity when the first great ships of commerce pass through the canal next June. They will also be present as the "builders of the canal" at the celebration next January.

Trust vs Anti-Trust Laws.

Most of the Democrats here seem to believe that the party has a better chance to be made permanently popular by anti-trust legislation than by the tariff and currency laws. The Democrats will put through their anti-trust measures this winter and if the resulting law works as they seem to think it will work, they will hold that their judgment of its popularity was well based.

It has been shown definitely that there has been a considerable change in the minds of the members of the dominant party in the matter of anti-trust legislation. This year they have learned from the temper of the people here that every big business concern in the country was to be dragged into the limelight before the investigating committees and probably roasted over the coals. The spirit of conservatism has been sprinkled on the situation and now the attempt is to get at trust abuses slowly in such fashion as to avoid disturbing business. The leaders in the house have decided to proceed with anti-trust legislation, taking up only one or two reforms at a time and spreading the consideration of the entire subject over a long period of time.

The leaders in the house have passed the word that there must be expedition in getting the appropriation bills through. Every legislator seemingly wants an early adjournment. It is not believed that trust legislation or the minor things to be given consideration will hold the attention of congress for many months. The two houses already are getting into the old-time methods of procedure before the "one thing and only one thing at a time" was given the force of an executive order.

Shooting at Cost of Living.

In the ranks of the majority party in house and senate there is hope that when the program of anti-trust legislation is completed the price of living will come down. The majority expects that the tariff will have made itself felt in the course of a few months, and that some additional help in reducing high costs may be expected even from the new currency law. The main hope, however, is pinned now to the new anti-trust acts. Probably no one will deny the assertion that individual Democrats in official life are praying that high prices will come down, for they believe that nothing they can do in a legislative way would so strengthen their chances of re-election as a hitting upon something which will make things cheaper.

The leaders of the three parties in congress still maintain that the high cost of living is the big problem of the day, and each party virtually is ready to admit that ascendency in the country will be held for a long time by the political organization which can present a plan which appears to be adequate to the cutting of costs so they will stay cut. The Democrats believe that prices will tumble while they are in power and that the result will be their continuance in authority.

Progress of Suffragists.

Virtually simultaneously with the report that the house of representatives almost certainly will authorize the appointment of the committee on suffrage which the women have been demanding, comes the news that the suffragists of Washington are having trouble among themselves. There are now two separate working organizations of suffragists in this city, and while they are trying to keep their differences as much as possible from public view they exist, and while of course they are to be deplored, government officials are cognizant of them and make them the subject of comment.

The trouble in the ranks of the suffragists is not as big as a mountain nor is its heat that of a volcano. There seems to be assurance that the thing will right itself quickly. Two young women who are at the head of what is called the "congressional union" of the suffragists came to Washington over a year ago with the authority of the National Association of Woman Suffragists to take charge of the campaign for a constitutional amendment fixing definitely the right of women to vote.

Recently the National association came to the conclusion that these young women were not entirely subordinate to the wishes of the parent organization. So it was that another chairman was appointed for the Washington work and this led to the trouble. The two young women objected to the change, and so the congressional union was formed, which will do work nominally under the control of the National association, but in reality independent of it.

Dodging Worries the Leaders.

Washington officials are beginning to wonder if President Wilson's diplomatic dodging of the suffrage proposition when the women met him in the White House, and the subsequent sidestepping done by other Democrats of prominence, are not worrying the party leaders, who always remember that women vote in a good many states in this country. Southern Democrats in congress have little or nothing to fear from the results of the aggressive campaign which the women promise to wage in all the congressional districts of the country. The southerners in congress, however, have much to worry about in national matters. They know that offices come from a Democratic administration and they know also that California and the rest of the suffrage states can make or unmake candidates for the presidency. There is seemingly a growing kindliness of disposition in the house of representatives toward the women suffrage movement, and opponents of suffrage must face the fact.

Just at the present the judiciary committee of the house is considering a bill which would pave the way for the submission to the people of a constitutional amendment giving suffrage to women. In the senate a measure to the same effect is awaiting its third reading. The senate recently has been more kindly disposed than the house to the suffrage movement. Curiously enough, the senators today respond more quickly to changes in public sentiment than do the representatives, although in the past the house has shown itself most quickly and keenly sensitive to changes in the country's opinions. This does not mean that the senate necessarily will give sanction to the amendment proposition immediately, but there are three upper house men today to one of a few years ago, who, whether sympathetic or not, will be willing to vote as expediency seems to dictate.

I remember myself how cold 'twas in eighteen hundred and suthin'. Recollect pertickerly that live coals froze solid right in the fireplace and the flames of the candles would freeze and us children would break 'em off and eat 'em for strawberries. ANOTHER DOCTOR'S EXPERIENCE WITH EX-ZEMA-FO.

Dr. B. F. Hawley, 3646 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, writes: "Some months ago my attention was called to EX-ZEMA-FO, claimed to be a specific for eczema. The remedy was highly lauded by an eminent jurist, who obtained complete relief from its use. I am somewhat loath to employ or recommend secret or proprietary medicine or lotions not knowing their compound; but on investigating I was convinced of its harmlessness and employed it in some dozen or more cases with perfect satisfaction. A strange thing occurred during my observations, viz: A member of my own family was suddenly afflicted with general eczema. I used EX-ZEMA-FO freely with the satisfaction of procuring both prompt and lasting relief. My sense of medical ethics would prevent me in tendering you this testimonial, but my feeling of gratefulness in having obtained both the product and necessary information from you, may perhaps justify my sending you this communication. You are entitled to this." So confident are we that EX-ZEMA-FO will relieve any case of eczema or other skin trouble that we agree to refund the purchase price if results are not satisfactory. 50 cents and $1.00 at dealers, or sent direct on receipt of price by the Nervoid Chemical Co., 1619 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Montpelier, Vt. — "We have great faith in your remedies. I was very irregular and was tired and sleepy all the time, would have cold chills, and my hands and feet would bloat. An Honest Dependable Medicine

It must be admitted by every fair-minded, intelligent person, that a medicine could not live and grow in popularity for nearly forty years, and to-day hold a record for thousands upon thousands of actual cures, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, without possessing great virtue and actual worth. Such medicines must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Useful Relative.

"Yes, my mother-in-law can make herself very useful at times."

"Glad you are fair enough to admit it."

"Of course I'll admit it. Why, just the other morning she was so provoked at me because I didn't get up and chop the ice off the front steps that she went out herself with a broom and ice pick. She is a stout lady, and when she slipped on the top step and bumped herself all the way to the sidewalk she fell so hard that she cracked the ice on every step. Then her language regarding my shortcomings was so warm that it melted all the fragments and left the steps as clean and smooth as they ever are in July."

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK MORE ENCOURAGING

Money for Commercial Uses in Much Broader Request; Rates Lower. Less Talk of Idleness.

New York. — Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Sentiment, financial, industrial and commercial, manifestly is better than one week or one month ago.

The presidential message apparently has helped to clear the economic atmosphere and business men seem more disposed to go ahead.

The fact is that further actual, as opposed to sentimental, improvement has come to pass within the week and in its general aspects the betterment in lines of life seems cumulative.

Bank discounts in most of the predominantly commercial countries of the world are lower, thus releasing funds for commercial enterprises, the marked success of New York State $51,000,000 bond issue evidencing a plentitude of money for investment account and the return of confidence in high grade issues.

This activity is accompanied by higher prices for stocks. It is in all encouraging. Money for commercial uses is in broader request and rates are lower.

On the industrial side there is more work available, demand for iron and steel continuing to reflect improvement and operations are increasing.

There is less talk of idleness.

Business failures for the week were 434, which compares with 366 in 1913.

Wheat exports for the week total 3,881,823 bushels, against 6,882,129 bushels last week.

New York. — R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

While there is tangible evidence of continued expansion in general business the betterment is not entirely uniform. Advices from leading centers are rather mixed, yet favorable reports outnumber those of an opposite character and sentiment is more confident.

In the important iron and steel industry the belief is strengthening that the turning point has about been reached, although it is not expected that the recovery from previous depression will be rapid. Labor, however, is more fully employed; mill operations have increased, and even if there has been no advance in prices, further concessions are not so frequent. The former policy of the railroads in holding back contracts is somewhat less pronounced and orders and specifications are coming forward with greater freedom than heretofore.

Washington. — The ninth cotton ginning report of the census bureau for the season announced that 13,589,171 bales of the growth of 1913 had been ginned prior to January 16, to which date during the past seven years the ginning averaged 95.5 per cent. of the entire crop. Last year to January 16 there had been ginned 13,068,930 bales, or 97.6 per cent. of the entire crop; in 1911 to that date, 14,515,799 bales, or 93.3 per cent., and in 1908 to that date 12,666,203 bales, or 96.8 per cent.

STOPPED TRAFFIC FOR PUSSY

Business on New York Thoroughfare Interrupted While Mother Cat Crosses the Street.

It was a busy day in Fulton street. Lines of trucks were bucking each other east and west, when out from a produce store came a cat, and dangling from her mouth was a kitten, with which she essayed to cross the street. Each time she started she had to turn back because of a truck, and her efforts soon attracted a crowd of idlers.

Down from the corner came a policeman. He soon saw what was the matter, and while there was nothing in the traffic regulations to cover the point, it took the bluecoat only a moment to decide what to do.

Going into the street he raised his hands in the way that truckmen have learned means "Stop." They stopped. The cat, seeing her opportunity, took a firmer hold on the nape of her prodigy, and then, holding it high to keep its curved tail out of the mud, she slowly and deliberately picked her way across and disappeared in a cellar.

STOP EATING MEAT IF KIDNEYS OR BACK HURT

Take a Glass of Salts to Clean Kidneys If Bladder Bothers You—Meat Forms Uric Acid.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Adv.

Afraid of Lawyers.

An old colored man, charged with stealing chickens, was arraigned in court and was incriminating himself when the judge said: "You ought to have a lawyer. Where is your lawyer?"

"Ah ain't got no lawyer, Judge," said the old man.

"Oh, no, suh; no, suh! Please don't do dat!" the darky begged.

"Why not?" asked the judge. "It won't cost you anything. Why don't you want a lawyer?"

"Well, Judge, Ah'll tell you, suh," said the old man, waving his tattered old hat confidentially. "Hit's jes dis way—Ah wan' tuh enjoy dem chickens, maself!"

CERTAINLY DID THE WORK

Effective Form of Isolation, Though It Did Not Get Approval of Dog's Owner.

Here's one of Walter Kelly's dog stories. Walter doesn't vouch for it, but it comes from a friend of his, so it's probably all right, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It seems that Kelly left town on a business trip some time ago, and left his blue-ribbon dogs in the care of a man who was supposed to know all about dogs. In about a week this man wrote that one of the dogs had developed symptoms that indicated mange, and asked for instructions. Kelly wired as follows:

"Isolate dog at once. Take no chances of mange spreading."

Sufficient instructions, and within the ten-word limit. When the owner got back home he asked the guardian if the dog had really developed mange. The man looked surprised and answered:

"Why, no—I isolated him right away like you said. But don't worry; it didn't hurt him none. I done it with chloroform an' he never knowed what happened."

SHE GAVE UP ALL HER WORK

On Account of Her Weakness, But Cardui, the Woman's Tonic, Brought Back Strength.

Summit, Va.—Mrs. Leonora Walker, of this place, has the following to say regarding her experience with Cardui, the woman's tonic: "Before I began to take Cardui, I suffered with womanly troubles, and, also, with what I thought was stomach trouble. I was so weak, I had to give up all my housework; and could not do any of the cooking.

I commenced taking Cardui, the woman's tonic, and after the third day I began to feel better. Have now used five bottles, and am well, and can do all of my housework and cooking by myself. In fact, I feel like a new woman.

I shall be only too glad to do anything I can, to help praise the Cardui Home Treatment, for it is so good for suffering women. I shall never be without it."

For over half a century, Cardui has been helping to build weak, nervous, tired-out women, back to strength and health. It goes to the seat of the trouble and builds up womanly strength where it is most needed.

Cardui may be the very medicine your system has long been needing. Get a bottle from your druggist today. It cannot harm you, and should surely do for you what it has done for so many thousands of others.

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, the heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is which contains no dangerous narcotics or alcohol.

It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anæmic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing.

Deserved His Tip.

A gentleman who frequently visited Ireland generally stopped and dined at the same hotel in Cork.

On his arrival one day he perceived a written notice on the looking glass in the luncheon-room, which ran as follows:

"Strangers are particularly requested not to give any money to the waiters as attendance is charged for in the bill."

The waiter who had attended on him at dinner, seeing him reading this notice, said:

"Oh, mister, sure that don't concern you in any way. Your honor was never made a stranger of in this hotel."

SAGE TEA DARKENS GRAY HAIR TO ANY SHADE. TRY IT!

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.—Adv.

DEATH OF COL. J. M. KENNARD.

The soldier Colonel J. M. Kennard disd at the Alabama Soldier's Home at 2 o'clock Tuesday morning.

WORK ALREADY IS COMPLETED IN MORGAN, MACON AND COVINGTON COUNTIES.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

W. F. Feagin, State superintendent of education, has started an educational survey of the State of Alabama and the work has already been completed in the counties of Morgan, Macon and Covington. This is one of the most important projects undertaken by Mr. Feagin and when the work is finished Mr. Feagin will possess complete and detailed information in connection with the school work in Alabama.

One hundred questions have been mailed out to the county superintendents. These questions relate to buildings, grounds, equipment, material and other important topics.

A. N. G. Examination By Mail.

Line Officers of the three regiments of infantry of the Alabama National Guard will be examined early in April, according to an announcement made by Adjutant General J. B. Scully. All officers will be required to answer questions which will be mailed out of the office of General Scully April 1. The officers will have fifteen days in which to return their papers to headquarters.

This will be the first examination of officers that has ever been conducted through the mails in Alabama. Captain W. P. Screws of the United States Army will have charge of the examination and will grade the papers. Those officers who fail to stand the examinations will be disciplined.

Gardner Succeeds Anderson.

Lucien D. Gardner of Troy, chancellor of the southeastern division, was appointed by the governor to the position of associate judge of the supreme court, to succeed Judge John C. Anderson, who was elevated to the chief justiceship.

Judge Gardner has been chancellor since 1907, to which position he was first appointed by former Governor B. B. Comer. He was elected to the position for a term of six years in 1910. Chancellor Gardner's appointment on the supreme court bench was recommended by every member of the bar in the 17 counties represented in his district. Several delegations called on the governor in his behalf, and his indorsements were not only confined to his district, but came from all parts of the State. His closest opponent for the office was Judge Cecil Brown of the city court of Talladega, who was also strongly recommended for the place. During the past two days the fight for the associate justiceship had resolved itself into a contest between North and South Alabama, Judge Brown being supported by the Northern and Chancellor Gardner by the Southern sections.

Espy Succeeds Gardner.

The governor appointed T. M. Espy of Dothan chancellor of the southeastern division to succeed Chancellor Lucien D. Gardner of Troy, whom he elevated to the office of supreme court justice. Mr. Espy is considered one of the ablest lawyers in Alabama. He has practiced law for the past 28 years and has won wide recognition as an attorney. He was a member of the constitutional convention of 1901 and represented his county in the legislature of 1903.

Equalize Fares on Pullmans.

A step in the direction of the equalization of Pullman fares on trains in Alabama has been taken by the Alabama railroad commission. Associate Railroad Commissioner Frank N. Julian has directed the secretary of the commission to correspond with the Pullman company at once and ascertain why the company does not change fares in proportion to the haul.

Special Warning to Wardens.

County game wardens all over the State have been urged to keep a special watch from now on until the end of the game season in Alabama for violators of the game laws. In special orders issued to the game wardens State Game Commissioner John H. Wallace, Jr., called attention to the fact that this season of the year is the "hunter's harvest" and that violations are more likely to occur now than at any other time during the year. Special warning is directed against pot hunters.

Says Election Findings Unsound.

H. M. Blue, chairman of the Montgomery county board of registrars, authorized the statement that the board will ignore the opinion of Attorney General Bricken, declaring that young men reaching their majority between the primary and the general election will be allowed to vote in the primary, but that men acquiring their two year's residence in Alabama identically are not permitted to vote in the primary. Mr. Blue said: "The opinion makes fish of one and fowl of the other."

Special Election to Fill Vacancy.

That the governor of Alabama will call a special election to fill the senatorial term made vacant by the death of Senator Joseph F. Johnston, and that the Democrats of Alabama will be given an opportunity to select a nominee to run in the special election, was made practically conclusive by statements of the governor and Chairman Tyler Goodwyn of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

The governor recently declared that he contemplated calling a special election to fill the senatorial vacancy, inasmuch as the Senate committee on privileges and elections had decided that this was the proper legal course to pursue.

Following the governor's announcement, Chairman Tyler Goodwyn gave out the information that he was unalterably opposed to this election being held before May, since an earlier election would probably make it incumbent upon the executive committee to make the nomination.

In the opinion of Chairman Goodwyn, the election should not be held until after the April primary. This would give the committee ample opportunity to provide the machinery for a nomination on the date set for the first primary. Should the election be held prior to the April primary, the committee would be compelled to make the nomination, since there would scarcely be time for a primary nomination by the Democratic voters of the State.

Coal Companies File Appeal.

Governor O'Neal and the State tax commission have been advised that the nine coal companies against whom lease-hold assessments in Bibb county aggregating approximately $10,000,000 were levied recently by the State, have appealed to the circuit court of Bibb county. The cases will be heard at Centerville in February. It is expected that one of them will suffice as a test of the State's power to levy leasehold assessments on mineral lands in addition to the assessment on the property itself. The question promises to go to the supreme court for final settlement.

Governor O'Neal will hold a conference soon with the State tax commission, the attorney general and Solicitor Fritz Thompson of Bibb county, to outline the State's plan of action in the cases when they come up for hearing. Under the law the solicitor appears as special counsel for the State in such cases.

Auto Licenses Delinquent.

Automobile owners and dealers and owners of any kind of motor vehicles must take out the 1914 license at once or they will be arrested and prosecuted in the courts.

It was announced at the state motor vehicle department that the time for urging people to take out licenses and being lenient with them has passed and that from now on all violators must be held responsible to the courts. Fifteen hundred of the 5500 automobile owners in Alabama have failed, so far, to take out licenses for the new year, and all of these in the future, who cannot show a white tag on their cars, will be arrested and fined besides being forced to take out the license if they expect to continue to operate their cars.

Instructions for Election Managers.

Printed instructions setting out the laws governing the primary elections to be held by the Democratic party were sent out to the election managers by R. Tyler Goodwyn, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee. The chairman calls attention to the penalties for illegal voting and urges the county officials to co-operate with the Ctate committee in carrying out the provisions of the election laws.

It is understood that the rules governing the exclusion of non-Democratic voters will be enforced to the limit as far as the State committee is concerned.

Calhoun State Aid.

Calhoun county has the honor of being the first county in the State to receive State aid for highway improvements in 1914. A contract for State aid road work in Calhoun county, involving an expenditure of $6,542, has just been awarded by Assistant State Highway Engineer R. P. Boyd.

Jury Commissioners Named.

Will R. Clements of Jemison was appointed jury commissioner of Chilton county by Governor O'Neal; Walter McWilliams of Athens was made a member of the jury commission of Limestone county.

Jails in Good Condition.

Jails in Tuscaloosa and Pickens counties are in good condition, according to the report of Dr. W. H. Oates, State prison inspector, filed with Governor O'Neal recently. A new jail is being erected in Pickens county and will be received by that county about March 1.

George Appointed.

Governor O'Neal announced the appointment of M. A. George, Jr., of Florala, as a member of the jury commission of Covington county.

Montevallo To Employ Convicts.

Convict labor will be employed at the mine of the Montevallo Coal company at Aldrich, in Shelby county, after the first of February next. Contracts have been signed by the state convict department and the mining company, whereby 175 convicts will be placed in the mine at the rate of $55.83 a month for first class convicts, or Class A, and $42.37 a month for second class convicts, or Class B. The third class convicts will bring $31.00 and the fourth class $12.76 a month each.

MORE IRON SOLD THAN PRODUCED

EXPECTED THAT OUTPUT IN ALABAMA WILL GO ABOVE 160,000 FOR JANUARY.

PRICES SOMEWHAT BETTER

Steel Prospects Are Said to Be Most Excellent, Especially so in Wire.

Birmingham. — Southern pig iron manufacturers have sold more iron this month than they will produce by a good deal and it was predicted that the present week will see additional sales consummated that will care for the output through the better portion of the first quarter of the new year. It is believed that before the end of the second month of 1914 there will have been orders booked that will actually care for the make during the first half of the year. Some inquiries have been received as to iron for delivery during the last half of the year, and prices have strengthened some, $11 per ton, No. 2, being asked for and being maintained.

The statement is made that some business was declined the past week because the purchaser wanted a ridiculously law quotation.

The make so far has not been disturbed, and it is estimated that the month's output will go above 160,000 in Alabama. There has been no iron put on the yards so far, but no claim is made that there has been and removal of the product from the accumulation. However, the 150,000 to 200,000 tons, foundry and basic irons, taht may be found on yards in this State alarms the manufacturers, but little. The railroads are furnishing every facility for moving iron promptly and instead of complaints being heard, there is praise for the manner in which the business is being held.

While there were not so many sales consummated during the week just over as the previous week, the total was quite satisfactory. Some estimates as to the sales made so far this month place the amount at more than 200,000 tons, while others say that this estimate will not reach the mark.

The steel trade is a little better. The prospects are that there will be need for considerable steel in all shapes, rail, rod, wire, nails and fabricated steel in general.

ROUNDHOUSE FOR EUFAULA

Central of Georgia Will Make Improvements on Lines.

Eufaula. — The experiment which the Central of Georgia railroad has been making with Eufaula as a point to handle repair work on its engines and cars on this division between Montgomery and Macon, has borne fruit, which will mean a roundhouse and an increased railroad pay roll for the city.

Superintendent Harlan, of Macon, Ga., and other officials of the Central, conferred with Mayor Mercer, stating that the company has made an appropriation for the construction of a roundhouse of sufficient size to handle the work of the division both efficiently and quickly. The work on the building will commence soon. It will be 60x70 feet and cover three tracks. A larger force will be needed to do the work, also.

THIRTY-SIX APPLICANTS PASS

Successful Mine Applicants Announced.

Birmingham. — Thirty-six out of the 48 applicants, who took the examination for State mine foremen certificates were successful, according to announcement made by the State board of mine examiners. William Drury, of Cardiff, who passed in the first class, made the highest grade of all applicants. Mr. Drury's mark was 91. William C. Chase, of Dolomite, was second with a grade of 88. U. West led the successful applicants in the second class with a grade of 84 and J. Y. Malone, of Coleanor led the fire boss' class with a grade of 87.

Washington. — Sam Claybaugh, editor of the Tuscaloosa News, will be the new postmaster at Tuscaloosa if President Wilson follows the recommendation of Congressman Abercrombie. Mr. Abercrombie made the recommendation concerning Mr. Claybaugh Jan. 24.

BOYS MAY JOIN PIG CLUBS

Work Shows So Gratifying Members May Attend School At Once.

Auburn.—From the present work in the organization of pig clubs and the organization of the new ones in the counties taht have just begun the work this year, there will be at least 2000 boy members this year. Last year's enrollment was 400.

At a recent meeting of the county superintendents who have this work under supervision, the fact was brought out that one reason that this work was becoming so popular was because the boy had a chance to go to school and at the same time earn money. One of the boys has started a bank account of $105 from the money he made off his pigs. The boys' pig clubs are the cause of the introduction of many pure bred hogs into the various communities.

The six new counties in which boys' pig clubs have been formed are Lauderdale, Macon, Butler, Madison, Clay and Lamar. It is expected that several other counties will soon adopt the work.

The amount of bonds issued for the whole improvements being $90,000,000, the $25,000,000 being the apportionment for this county and is to be used partially for double tracking the present road.

ALASKAN RAILROAD MEASURE IS PASSED

DIRECTS PRESIDENT TO BUY OR CONSTRUCT 1,000 MILES OF ROAD IN ALASKA.

COST NOT OVER $40,000,000

Fifteen Republicans and One Progressive Vote for Measure, While Three Democrats Oppose.

Washington. — By a vote of 46 to 16 the Senate passed the Alaskan railway bil, directing the president to purchase or construct 1,000 miles of railroad in Alaska at a cost not to exceed $40,000,000.

Fifteen Republicans and Senator Poindexter, Progressive, voted for the bill. Senators Bacon, Hoke Smith and Williams, Democrats, voted against it.

The bill places upon the president the responsibility for the selection of the route from tidewater to the interior of Alaska and the construction, equipment and operation or leasing of such lines as he may construct or buy to constitute this route. The broadest powers are conferred upon the president in carrying out his duties.

The bill provides for a redemption fund into which shall be paid 75 per cent. of all moneys derived from the sale of public lands in Alaska or of the coal or mineral contents. Machinery utilized in the construction of the Panama canal is made available for the construction work.

Unavailing efforts to reduce the $40,000,000 appropriation authorized for the work were made. Senator Hoke Smith sought to have the appropriation reduced to $25,000,000 and Senator Smoot to $35,000,000. Other amendments defeated were those for government steamship lines to Alaska; for the sale of Alaska coal at cost to Pacific coast points and for limiting the construction to one main line.

The bill was amended to require the Senate's approval of the appointment of civil engineers receiving more than $2,000 a year; to forbid any payment for the good will of existing railways; giving injured employes the right to sue the government, and limiting the government's defenses to those provided for in the federal employers' liability law of 1908.

A similar bill is pending in the House.

REBELS BUTCHER PRISONERS.

Refugees Reaching Mexico City Report Massacre to Officials.

Mexico City. — One hundred women and children and 150 federal soldiers were massacred by rebels recently near Vanegas, north of San Luis Pososi, according to reports received here.

Mayor Rohello and Captain Ramirez and a handful of men were the only ones to escape. They arrived here bringing news of the affair, which occurred several days ago.

Baggage Car and One Coach of Passenger Train Telescoped.

Jackson, Mich. — Five persons were killed and possibly a score injured when Michigan Central passenger train No. 70 from Saginaw, collided head-on with a freight train about three miles outside the city. The baggage car and one coach of the passenger train were telescoped and every passenger in the coach either was killed or injured. The wreck apparently resulted from a misunderstanding of orders. The freight, it is said, was supposed to take a siding to allow the passenger train to pass. The collission occurred a quarter of a mile beyond the switch gate.

Goethals Will Not Take Police Position Until Then.

Panama. — Col. George W. Aviator Killed.

London. — George Lee Temple, a British aviator, was killed at Hendon. He was making a difficult dive when a strong gust of wind caught the tail of his monoplane and the machine crashed to the ground. The aviator's neck was broken.

Bradley Maintains Governor Is Right

Washington. — Senator Bradley in his report takes issue with the majority of committee on privileges and elections and maintains the right of governor of Alabama to appoint a Senator to fill out the unexpired term of the late Senator Johnston. The burden of the Bradley report is in support of the contention that the seventeenth amendment does not and was not intended to apply to any Senator in office at the time of its adoption or to any portion of his term in case of his death or resignation.

FRAME FOUR BILLS TO CURB "TRUSTS"

MEASURE APPROVED BY WILSON HAS NO ESCAPE LOOPHOLES.

TO BECOME LAWS VERY SOON

Penalty for Restraint of Commerce, Unfair Business and Interlocking Directorates — Ample Provisions Made for Trade Commission.

Washington, Jan. 23.—The administration's trust bills, embodying the program laid down by the president in his recent message, have been presented to congress.

The bills have received the approval of Mr. Wilson and the Democratic leaders of both houses of congress. With little modification they will be enacted into law. Their purposes are:

1. Definition of unlawful monopoly or restraints of trade.
2. Prohibition of unfair trade practice.
3. Creation of an interstate trade commission.
4. Regulation of corporation didectorates and prohibition of interlocking directorates.

Unlawful Monopoly Defined.

Unlawful monopoly is defined as any combination or agreement between corporations, firms, or persons designed for the following purposes:

1. To create or carry out restrictions in trade or to acquire a monopoly in any interstate trade, business, or commerce.
2. To limit or reduce the production or increase the price of merchandise or of any commodity.
3. To prevent competition in manufacturing, making, transporting, selling, or purchasing of merchandise, produce, or any commodity.
4. To make any agreement, enter into any arrangement, or arrive at any understanding by which they, directly or indirectly, undertake to prevent a free and unrestricted competition among themselves or among any purchasers or consumers in the sale, production, or transportation of any product, article, or commodity.

The penalty for violation of the law is fixed at not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for one year or both.

Guilt is made personal through a section that whenever a corporation shall be guilty of the violation of the law the offense shall be deemed to cover the individual directors, officers, and agents of such corporation, as authorizing, ordering, or doing the prohibited acts, and they shall be punished as prescribed above.

A paragraph prohibiting holding companies is to be added to this measure.

Covers Unfair Trade Practices.

The bill forbidding unfair trade practices declares that to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities, with the purpose or intent to injure or destroy a competitor, either of the purchaser or of the seller, shall be deemed an attempt to monopolize interstate commerce.

It is specifically declared that the law is not intended to prevent discrimination in price between purchasers of commodities "on account of difference in the grade, quality, or quantity of the commodity sold, or that makes only due allowance for difference in the cost of transportation."

Further, it is prescribed that nothing contained in the act shall prevent persons from selecting their own customers, "but this provision shall not authorize the owner or operator of any mine engaged in selling its product in interstate or foreign commerce to refuse arbitrarily to sell the same to a responsible person, firm, or corporation, who applies to purchase."

An attempt at monopoly also is declared to exist for any person to make a sale of goods, wares, or merchandise or fix a price charged therefor, or discount from or rebate upon such price, on the condition or understanding that the purchaser thereof shall not deal in the goods, wares, or merchandise of a competitor or competitors of the seller.

Deals With Damage Suits.

A judgment against any defendant in a suit brought under the anti-trust law the bill provides shall constitute as against such defendant conclusive evidence of the same facts and be conclusive as to the same issues of law in favor of any other party in any other proceeding brought under and involving the provisions of the law.

For the benefit of parties injured in their business or property, by any person or corporation found guilty of violating the law the statute of limitations applicable to such cases shall be suspended.

Injunctive relief is accorded against threatened loss or damage by a violation of the act under the same conditions and principles that injunctive relief against threatened conduct which will cause loss or damage is granted by courts of equity.

It is required that a proper bond shall be executed against damages for an injunction improvidently granted, and it must be shown that the danger of irreparable loss or damage is immediate.

Hits Interlocking Directorates.

Concerning directorates, the bill on this subject, which is to become effective two years from date of approval of the act, provides:

"No person engaged as an individual or as a member of a partnership or as a director or other officer of a corporation in the business of selling railroad cars or locomotives, or railroad rails or structural steel, or mining or selling coal, or conducting a bank or trust company, shall act as a director or other officer or employe of any railroad or other public service corporation which conducts an interstate business.

"No person shall at the same time be a director or other officer or employe in two or more federal reserve banks, national banks, or banking associations, or other banks or trust companies which are members of any reserve bank; and a private banker and a person who is a director in any state bank or trust company not operating under the provisions of the recent currency law shall not be eligible to serve as a director in any bank or banking association or trust company operating under the provisions of the law."

Violation of these sections is made punishable by a fine of $100 a day, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

If any two or more corporations have common director or directors, the fact shall be conclusive evidence that there exists a real competition between such corporation and such elimination of competition shall be construed as a restraint of interstate trade and be treated accordingly.

The trade commission bill provides for commission of five members, with the commissioner of corporations as chairman, and transfers all the existing powers of the bureau of corporations to the commission.

The principal and most important duty the commission besides conducting investigations will be to aid the courts when requested in the formation of decrees of dissolution.

With this in view, the bill empowers he court to refer any part of pending litigation to the commission, including the proposed decree, for information and advice.

Much Criticism for Bills.

The trust bills as framed will be the subject of sharp criticism on the part of progressives of all parties who claim they do not go far enough. It will be declared that the definition of monopoly remains inadequate that the prohibition of unfair trade practice does not cover this evil in our economic life that interlocking stock control is not covered and that the powers of the proposed trade commission are insufficient.

It is interesting to note that the proposal to place the burden of proof upon a combination believed to be violating the law has been omitted. No attempt is made to prevent or destroy monopoly based on patents. The greatest difficulty exerienced in the effective enforcement of the law has been found to be in the unwillingness of the courts to impose jail penalty. It remains optional under the proposed measures wiht the courts to fine or imprison.

Trade Board May Disappoint.

In connection with the trade commission President Wilson declared in his message that the country "demands such a commission only as an indispensable instrument of information and publicity as a clearing house for the facts by which both the public mind and the managers of great business undertakings should be guided."

The bill prescribes that the commission acts are to constitute a "public record" but the body is authorized to make public the information "in such form and to such extent as may be necessary" or "by direction of the attorney general."

It is apparent that the public mind cannot be guided unless it has the facts, and then it will not get unless the commission or the attorney general deems it politic.

In other words, public hearings will not be held as they are held by the interstate commerce commission.

Settlement of Differences.

The most important feature of the bill is that which legalizes the policy of the administration of terminating an unlawful condition by agreement between the combination attacked and the attorney general.

This feature is comprehended under a section which requires the commission, upon the request of the attorney general or any corporation affected, to investigate whether a combination is violating the law. In case the commission should find the violation to exist it must report to the attorney general a statement of the objectionable acts and transactions and the readjustments necessary for the offending combination to conform to the law.

These conclusions are to be "advisory to the attorney general in terminating by agreement with the corporation affected or by suing the said unlawful conduct or condition."

In other words, whatever may be the agreement made by the attorney general with the combination investigated, it will give the reorganized combination legal standing, so long as it conforms to the term of the agreement.

Thus it is proposed to place by law a tremendous power in the hands of the attorney general. This power has been assumed to attorneys general, and particularly so by Mr. McReynolds.

Will Give Courts Advice.

In a statement accompanying the bill made by Congressman Clayton, chairman of the house judiciary committee, it is said that the "principal and most important duty of the commission, besides conducting investigations, will be to aid the courts, when requested, in the formation of decrees of dissolution."

CARE FOR MACHINERY

Properly Housed Farm Implements Means Big Saving.

Tools Should Be Well Selected, Kept in Good Repair and Adjustment, Oiled Thoroughly and Cleaned Before Housing.

In traveling over the country, the ordinary observer is unfavorably impressed with the methods now commonly found in use by many farmers for taking care of their machinery. As a general rule, the prosperity of a farmer may be estimated by the way he cares for his machinery. Poor care indicates shiftlessness, waste, lack of energy and the necessity of buying more machinery in a short time. Good care, on the other hand, indicates prosperity, development, bank deposits, and long-lived machinery.

To properly care for the farm implements means that they must be well selected, kept in good repair and adjustment, oiled thoroughly, cleaned before housing, and have all wearing parts well greased when not in use, and painted when necessary, and must be properly housed. To neglect any of the lines of care mentioned, means serious damage and loss to the machinery.

There is no question but that to properly house machinerw is a great saving, as it not only adds a great deal to the life of the machine but it also adds to the general appearance of the farm. It is generally found that where a farmer is interested enough in his tools to properly house them, he is interested enough in them to care for them otherwise.

To "house" machinery does not mean merely to put it in some tumble-down, leaky shed, or combined machine-shed and hen-roost.

A great deal of machinery can be placed in a small space if properly arranged. At the time of storing it the machinery should be placed in the shed according to the time it will have to be removed. The machinery that will be used late in the season should be placed in the back of the shed and that which is to be used early in the season should be placed in front. In this way it will not be necessary to remove a great deal of machinery in order to get what is needed first.

Do not forget that the implements and machines on the farm represent an investment, and that when exposed to the weather they deteriorate rapidly, thus making the upkeep and original cost a heavier charge against the equipment. Dew, rain and sunshine may cause greater deterioration in expensive implements than ordinary use. To leave the implements at the end of the rows or in the field without shelter means great loss. No progressive farmer can afford it.

Binders, mowers, hay presses, tractors, silage cutters and other machines represent considerable capital, and it is economy to shelter and care for them when not in use. A tool shed costs little compared to the risk of protecting the implements. The shed is really insurance upon the implements from sun, rain and rust.

Even the small tools, such as single stocks, shovels, sweeps, hoes, spades, double shovels and cultivators need shelter. And there is another advantage besides the loss in deterioration, that is in saving time. When the implements, large and small, are always left in the tool house the hand knows where to find them and does not lose time hunting for the wrench, the shovels, the sweeps, the oil can or the garden plow.

Keeping Horses at Work.

As many die from lack of work as from overwork. A horse standing idle on a full ration finds his digestive and excretory organs overtaxed, with the result that poisonous elements form in the alimentary tract. These may be stored up in the blood and become active only when the horse is again put to work, or may become immediately effective. The horse that is not doing his usual amount of work should be put on a very much lighter ration than ordinary.

DETENTION ROOM FOR PESTS

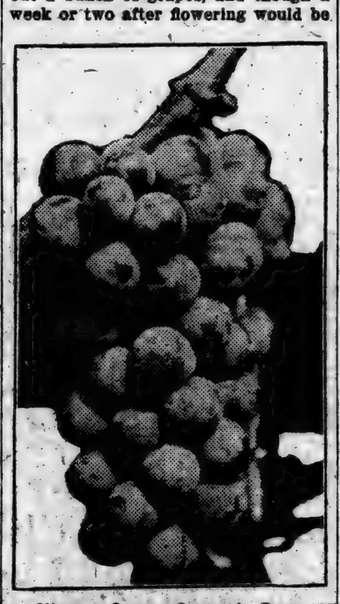
Experience has taught the officials of our national government the advisability of guarding against the possible importation of injurious or undesirable plants and animals. Well meaning but carelessly inclined friends living abroad send home specimens of beautiful or peculiar plants or flowers, strange and unusual insects, small animals as pets, and so forth, not knowing that they are aiding in the spread of what may be extremely harmful pest. Often, too, "seed" of some variety of fruit or vegetable is sent to home friends for planting which contains the eggs of some insect pest or the germs of a disease which may sweep away thousands of dollars' worth of valuable homegrown plants or trees.



To prevent any of these disasters the government has provided a "quarantine room," to which all specimens, living or dead and preserved, must first go for thorough microscopic inspection before being passed on to the recipient, says the New York Independent. The first shipment received after the establishment of this room was a lot of potatoes from the Andes of South America. They were found to be thoroughly infected with a small brown bug harmful enough to have created an endless amount of mischief among the potato interests of this country had they been allowed to enter unobserved.

The inspection room is carefully prepared to prevent the escape of microscopic germs. It is simply a glass inclosed cage about eight by twelve feet, placed in one of the regular office rooms in the department of agriculture, and is absolutely bug proof.

VALUE OF BAGGING GRAPES

Serves to Exclude Both Fungus Germs and Insects, Both of Which Pests Destroy Whole Crops.

When grapes are bagged at an early stage there is hardly any work in the fruit line that pays better. It practically assumes a perfect bunch. The time to bag them is just as soon as the flowering assures a perfect bunch. The time to bag them is just as the flowering is over. Many insects and blights are not long in finding out a bunch of grapes, and though a week or two after flowering would be soon enough, in all probability, it is better to do the work as soon as the flowers fade. Almost everyone is familiar with the length of a bunch of grapes, and in bagging all one has to do is to place the bunch inside of a bag of sufficient length, give the mouth of the bag a folding or twisting together, and then pinning the mouth, and the work is done and the bunch is safe. With the closing and fastening of the mouth of the bag it both excludes fungus germs and all insects, both of which pests destroy whole crops often where not molested. —Market Growers' Journal.

Peahay for Fattening Lamb.

Peahay made by cutting Canada field peas after the bloom and before the pods were formed, was fed to fattening lambs at the South Dakota station. It was a very palatable roughage and highly relished by the lambs. With the exception of the two lots that received alfalfa, and the lot that received sweet clover, more uniform gains were made than with either of the other lots. It is an advantage to secure uniform gains as the lambs are in a better condition for the market. This trial also emphasizes the importance of feeding a legume as a roughage.

Cheapening the Rations.

The Iowa station has found that a small amount of oil meal or cottonseed meal added to corn and oats improves and cheapens the ration for work horses. A mixture of 7½ pounds of shelled corn, 15 pounds of oats and eight pounds of oil meal gave somewhat better results than oil meal, and the ration was a little cheaper in the proportion of 7½ pounds of corn, 15 pounds oats and 6 pounds oil meal.

VOL. 1. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY FEBRUARY 5, 1914 NO. 44

CAPTAIN HOBSON AT CLANTON

Capt. R. P. Hobson, candidate for the U. S. Senate, addressed the citizens of Clanton, at Court house last Thursday night. The Captain was introduced by Prof. Pickens, who stated that the Congressman had sunk the Merrimac, Captain Bankhead's ship, Mr. Moody's ship, and had seriously punctured Mr. Underwood's ship and that he had been in some of the warmest scraps that had ever been pulled off at the national capital.

The speaking, though scheduled to commence at 7:30 oclock did not start until about 8:15. The Court house was crowded long before the speaker arrived, a large number of ladies being in attendance. Capt. Hobson spoke nearly two hours, and, though the Court house was crowded his utterances were not very liberally applauded. The speaker stated that the two most important planks in his platform was education and the sobriety of the youth.

Captain Hobson charged that because of his reactionary tendencies Mr. Underwood was unfit for democratic leadership, and asserted that by reason of his being a reactionary he was not a friend of the farmer; he characterized the Underwood campaign book as a "book of lies," and said it was full of false-hoods and misrepresentations from beginning to end. The speaker explained his vote on the bill to protect the uniform of Uncle Sam, and also his vote on the Brownsville negro case; and, in answer to the charge that he was drawing $25.00 per day when he was not at his post of duty, asserted that Underwood, by taking the tax off of liquor, was costing the people $2,000.00 a day.

The speaker declared that this was not a fight between Hobson and Underwood, but a struggle between the plain people and the big interest.s

Captain Hobson concluded his remarks by saying he would be elected Senator.

S. government is working in conjunction with the State Health department in this great movement to better the sanitary conditions of our public schools, and it is most important that every teacher who can will avail themselves of the opportunity to be present at this meeting. CLANTON, ALA., Jan. 31, '14.

Hon. Thos. E. Kilby, Anniston, Ala.

Dear Senator:—I believe that when a citizen goes before the people asking their suffrage for public office he should acquaint them with his position on all questions with which they are vitally concerned, and to exhibit to them the kind of tools he carries in his kit.

I note from the columns of the daily press that you contemplate "going over the state to meet and talk with the people," etc., and I therefore respectfully invite you to meet me in a series of joint discussions of the questions before the people of Alabama at this time. Such discussions to be had at such times and places and under such arrangements of debate as we may agree upon.

Yours very truly,

THORSBY INSTITUTE

The Ladies Guild of Thorsby at their recent annual meeting had a season of "Looking Backward" to see what justification could be found for the existence of the organization which has for eight and a half of years (since July, 1905) comprised on an average ten of the busiest ladies of Thorsby. During the time mentioned they have raised in round numbers $1,700, nearly all of which has been applied to a betterment of conditions for Thorsby Institute, especially in dormitory improvement and equipment. By keeping everlastingly at it they have been the means of adding greatly to the comfort and convenience of both teachers and students. During all these years they have steadily remained loyal to their purpose as an object well worthy of their best efforts.

This patient persistance in good works has at last borne fruit in arousing interest on the part of many who have not until recently identified themselves with the work. During the past year thirteen new members have been added and with more than double their former strength and an efficient corps of [illegible]

W. B. CRAIG MAY OPPOSE BLACKMON.

Selma, Feb. 2, 1914.—It is more than probable that Fred L. Blackmon, congressman from the fourth Alabama district, in which this county is located, and a candidate for re-election, may have opposition. For some time past there has been much talk as to opposition to Mr. Blackmon, and on Friday and Saturday of last week there was a delegation of eight or ten representative citizens of Talladega in the city conferring with citizens of this city upon the matter of bringing out a candidate to oppose Mr. Blackmon. It is known that former congressman W. B. Craig, of the Fourth district, was approached by this delegation and efforts made to pursuade him to enter the race for congress. Mr. Craig is looked upon as being a most thorough and capable man, and one who made the state a most able and acceptable representative during the terms that he served the Fourth district in Washington. Mr. Craig has not decided as yet upon what action he will take in the matter.

REPUBLICANS SEE MUCH PROSPERITY

In felicitating the people of New York upon the recent sale of $51,000,000 four-and-one-half per cent bonds at a premium which will net more than $3,000,000, the Albany Journal says:

"But not the credit of the State, nor exemption from tax, nor increase in money available for investment, would have effected so highly satisfactory a sale of these bonds if there were not the restoration of confidence which has come of President Wilson's manifestation of desire and purpose to establish a policy of dealing with big business and finance under the operation of which prosperity will be rehabilitated and maintained."

The Albany Journal is a Republican newspaper, and bitterly partisan, a fact which makes its comment doubly interesting. When it finds good in a Democratic performance, then the good is so pronounced that he who runs may easily discern the fact.

The Journal goes on to say, "throughout the whole country, the sale of these bonds will be accepted as evidence that the turn for the better has come, that business and finance are emerging from under the depression that came upon them a while ago," and "we may now expect real progress on a sound basis."

The sale of these bonds, and the subscription was far greater than the issue means, too, that money has become easy and that capital now is seeking useful channels of operation. Henceforth no legitimate business that promises fair returns need be handicapped for lack of funds.—Birmingham News.

CHRISTMAS IN CHINA

Most of those in America who are having a happy Christmas may think that in heathen China there is nothing to enjoy at Christmas time, but if they think so they are mistaken, for there are many things to be enjoyed. The missionaries who have been having Christmas celebrations before they come out, naturally think of Chrlstmas and feel that they must do something to celebrate the birth of Him whom they come to serve. In this way it is taught to the natives as they become Christians, and they begin to experience the joys of Christmas.

Christmas has been quite a merry time here on and around our compound. There are a good many Christians here and they have been celebrating Christmas in good style. The kinder-garten gave an entertainment at which they had Santa Claus, and presents were given out. The primary school, also, rendered a very interesting program. These were on Christmas eve. Then, on Christmas day, an entertainment was given at the church, at which the students from the various schools and the Sunday school had a part.

Mrs. Williams and I could not understand what they were saying, but could tell that it was good, from the expression on their faces. The parts were acted as well as you would find in almost any American Sunday school. They seemed to have the real Christian spirit as we have it in America. It was a great joy to us to see how happy and cheerful they were, and how enthusiastic they were about celebrating the birth of their Lord. I really think they were more conscious of the fact that they were celebrating the birthday of Christ than most American schools are.

But while they were so full of happiness on this joyous occasion, only a few blocks away there were hundreds, yea, thousands, who do not have one single idea of the meaning of Christmas. They are still living in the darkness that has overshadowed them for ages, and know nothing of the One whose birthday was being celebrated. Of the two millions of people in Canton, no doubt most of them have heard of Christ, but do not know much about Him, while a very few, comparatively, know Him in their personal lives. Oh, how vividly the difference between Christians and heathen is impressed upon one when he sees them at Christmas time! But, while the few know Jesus, there are millions upon millions who know nothing of Him.

But the Lord is doing great things in China and will continue to uplift the Chinese, as they know about Him. At the entertainment of the primary school, my Chinese language teacher sat on the platform with me. As he looked upon the happy children he said, "Among so much happiness [illegible] thought of what the teacher had said, and tried to realize just what Jesus means to China. A people who have been depressed for centuries by idolatry know nothing of the bright, happy spirit of the Christian. And after these centuries Christ is coming to them through the missionaries. Then my heart went out in praise to God that He has given me the privilege of coming to China to aid in bringing joy and happiness to these people while they live, and a happy home when they are done with this world.

We are far away from home and naturally think of our loved ones and would like so much to see them, but we are not homesick by any means. We are just happy that God counted us worthy to serve Him in this great country, and we are glad to give Him our best service.

I trust that the children and young people who chance to read this in America will be interested in helping other children and young people to be happy, and may I ask that you pray the Heavenly Father to bless the people of China; also that you do all you can to let them know about Jesus.

Canton, China, Dec. 26, 1913.

SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT

If I should ask a farmer what he needed to make his business a success, he would readily enumerate a number of things. The farm is his, and he knows what is essential to successful farming. He knows what he must have to yield good results next harvesting season. Every successful farmer is deeply interested in his seed for next season, his fertilizer, his tools, his live-stock, and his farm at large.

Now, I ask you what does your school need? Sit down and enumerate. The school is yours, as is your business; the things that are essential to the success of your school you should enumerate and and strive for, just as earnestly as those of your business. What will your children's and county's harvest be? What will yours be fellow teacher? Harvest season is rapidly approaching. "Just as I am, so is the community," and "as is the community, so is the school." Harvest season is rapidly approaching. The seed are the efforts that we are putting forth to make our school better, our own and our neighbor's children more efficient in life God has given them to us that we may perpetuate ourselves therein. Are our energies, our efforts and our teachings fertilizing and stimulating our youth to a higher and nobler life? The fertilization of character is poloniated at home and in the school. A love for the beautiful is created by making our home and school attractive. Christianity and love for humanity is fostered there. All this is needed. No man ever had such tools as our daily papers, magazines and thousands of the best books. Every home should have the Youths' Companion. We look closely to the needs of our live stock; that is well for we must have them; but, when that horse dies, he is no more. The Human sleeps in death, to be born anew in eternity. Why not strive to make the home and school life more attractive by giving it more of our time add labor? Interest, fellow-reader, is the essential thing in the school improvement work of the county at present. Work, which comes through interest, will make every school tell a different story in a short time.

Look at your school house and you will see a dozen needs visible to every passer by. Let us realize that the school is ours, and that we are making our property worth many times more by improving it, as well as making life better for all around us.

Interest, interest, more interest on the part of us all.

Yours for service,

JOHN A. HUNTER,

President Chilton County School Improvement Association.

MR. B. E. JONES

COMES OUT FOR SHERIEF.

The announcement of Mr. B. E. Jones for the office of Sheriff appears in this week's issue of the Press. Bas Jones, as he is called by his friends, is too well and favorably known to the people of Chilton to need any introduction at our hands. Born and reared in the Mulberry neighborhood he has been a resident of this county all of his life. For the past fifteen or sixteen years he has resided in Clanton, and by his sound business acumen has made a signal success in the mercantile and lumber business. Mr. Jones has never held public office, and has never before offered for any office. He has always been a true and loyal democrat and has ever been found fighting for democracy's principles. He is accommodating and courteous to every one and his honesty and integrity is unquestioned. By his strict fidelity to duty, his business ability, absolute fearlessness and pleasing personality Bas Jones possesses all the essential qualifications for the important office he seeks, and should the voters nominate and elect him he can be depended upon to see that the laws are enforced as they appear on the statute books.

Children Not Naturally Destructive.

Be gentle with the child who smashes his toys. The fault is not his, but yours, who provided him with toys too complicated for his immature little mind to understand. Dottoressa Maria Montessori, in her lecture at Carnegie hall, said little children were not naturally destructive, as most parents had reason to suppose, but that the instinct to pull the object to pieces was the only natural thing for a child to do with something it did not understand. Most toys given to children are too complicated, Dr. Montessori asserted.

"Instead of expecting children to amuse themselves with toys they do not understand, mothers should assume more responsibility for their children's entertainment," she continued. "The mother who drives her child away from her side when she is working makes a pitiful mistake. It is impossible to estimate the effect upon the child's mind if he were never turned away, if he could always be sure of sympathy and understanding from the person he loves most of all."

ANOTHER COFFEE WRECK

What's the Use When There's an Easy Way Out?

Along with the coffee habit has grown the prevalent "American Disease"—nervous prostration.

The following letter shows the way out of the trouble:

"Five years ago I was a great coffee drinker and from its use I became so nervous I could scarcely sleep at all nights. My condition grew worse and worse until finally the physician I consulted declared my troubles were due to coffee.

"But being so wedded to the beverage I did not see how I could do without it, especially at breakfast, as that meal seemed incomplete without coffee.

"On a visit, my friends deprived me of coffee to prove that it was harmful. At the end of about eight days I was less nervous, but the craving for coffee was intense, so I went back to the old habit as soon as I got home and the old sleepless nights came near making a wreck of me.

"I heard of Postum and decided to try it. I did not like it at first, because, as I afterwards discovered, it was not made properly. I found, however, that when made after directions on the package, it was delicious.

"It had a soothing effect on my nerves, and none of the bad effects that coffee had, so I bade farewell to coffee and have used only Postum since. The most wonderful account of the benefit to be derived from Postum could not exceed my own experience."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for a copy of "The Road to Wellville."

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

HIS FIRST VALENTINE

NOT OBSERVED AS IN THE OLD DAYS

St. Valentine Is Now Neglected, Compared to What Was Done Some Two Centuries Ago.

THE sending by mail of embossed tokens of love or friendship is about all there is left of the ancient customs of St. Valentine's day. The windows and play counters of our book stores and bazars are filled at this season of the year with examples of art and near-art to an extent that should please every sort of taste in regard to valentines. There is a day or two of fun and merry chatter when the tokens are received, or of even more boisterous mirth if the valentines are "comic;" here and there a valentine party is given by the young people, then the celebrating ceases and is forgotten.

Not so a couple of centuries ago. Then the festivities were much more in the character of observance and ceremonies. The origin of St. Valentine's day is credited to different incidents. One writer of ancient social customs says that it originated with Mme. Royale, daughter of Henry IV., of France. The lady, having built a splendid palace near Turin, desired to name it for some good saint, and finally chose St. Valentine. Thus the edifice was called "The Valentine," and at the initial entertainment given in the great drawing rooms, Mme. Royale conceived the idea of causing her guests to pair off by means of a lottery.

Ladies Drew From Lot.

The names of the men were written on slips of paper and folded. The ladies then drew from the list, and whoever each one drew was to be her "valentine" for the space of one year. At the various balls which this gay-spirited young princess gave during the season it was understood that each lady should receive a bouquet from her chosen lover, and that at every tournament the trappings of a knight's horse should be furnished by his allotted lady, with this proviso—that the lady eventually receive whatever prize he might win. Mme. Royale, however, would not herself enter into this lottery, but reserved the privilege of choosing her "valentine" independently.

Doubtless it is true that this lady did originate this costume at her palace in Turin, but it is also quite as true that this was not the real origin of St. Valentine's day, for it is alluded to by English poets before her time. Lydgate, a monk, who died in the year 1440, and who has been described as "the poet of his monastery," wrote a poem in praise of Queen Catherine, consort of Henry V., of England, in which he mentioned the observance of St. Valentine's day and the custom of "drawing lots."

Indeed, this custom seems to have been a very ancient one, and continued to comparatively modern times.

An equal number of young men and women would meet together on the eve St. Valentine's day and hold a lottery, in which the names of both men and women were drawn; thus each maid and bachelor would have two "valentines," who were required to make mutual gifts. This, of course, occasioned any amount of mirth and some funny situations.

Other Superstitions.

One superstition which held good until quite recent times was that the first young man or young woman one chanced to meet on the morning of Valentine's day would be one's valentine. Other superstitions included mystic rites, particularly in Scotland, which enabled maidens to learn who would be their future husbands. About the middle of the eighteenth century one young woman—according to the historian of social customs of that time—wrote as follows:

"Last Friday was Valentine's day, and I'll tell you what I did the night before. I got five bay leaves, pinned four of them to the four corners of my pillow and the fifth to the middle, so, if I dreamt of my sweetheart, Betsy said we would be married before the year was out. But to make more sure, I boiled an egg hard, took out the yolk and filled the egg up with salt, and when I went to bed I ate it, shell and all, without speaking or drinking after it, and this was also to have effect with the bay leaves. We also wrote our love names upon bits of paper and rolled them up in clay and put them into water, and the first that rose was to be our valentine. Would you think it? Mr. Blossom was my man, and I lay abed and shut my eyes all the morning till he came to our house, for I would not have seen another man before him for all the world."

Children Chanted Songs.

This quaint letter shows how the idea of the powers of St. Vanentine were appreciated by the maidens of that time. It was customary in the olden times for maidens to hang their shoes outside the window on the eve of St. Vanentine's day in order that their love affairs should prosper, although the explanation of this belief is not given. Children also went about chanting songs about Valentine and collecting coins as their valentines.

The valentine gifts of those days were sometimes very costly, including jewels, rings, brooches, silken sashes, or belts with begemmed buckles, silk gloves with rich embroidery, and other expensive presents which a man might make to his "valentine."

St. Valentine's day was alluded to by Shakespeare and Chaucer, and one of the earliest known writers of valentines was Charles, duke of Orleans. Drayton, a poet of Shakespeare's time, also wrote charming verses along this theme.

What connection the martyred Bishop Valentine has to do with these customs, whose ruler seems to be Cupid, would puzzle the saint himself. The death of the good bishop, which occurred in the third century, was a most cruel one. He was first beaten with clubs and then beheaded. Thus it seems paradoxical that the commemoration of him should be observed in the gayest of fashions, and always in conjunction with the pranks of the little god of love.

Many learned historians have given considerable time and investigation to the origin of the romantic observance of St. Valentine's day, but the secret is still a secret—the real mystery is still unsolved.

TWO VALENTINES

I.

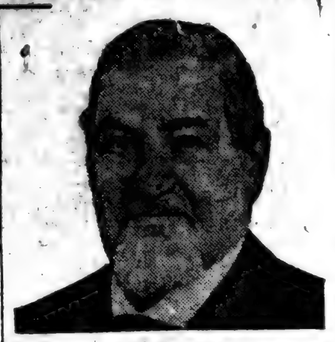
I sent my love a valentine,
And with it sent a kiss.
It bore the message, "Be thou mine,"
And looked about like this:

II.

My love sent me a valentine,
But oh, the saucy miss!
Instead of saying, "I am thine,"
It looked about like this:

Many Customs of the Day.

The making of paper valentines began in Germany quite a long time ago, but in many parts of the world people still weave conplats of flowers and wreaths of leaves for valentines. The Italian States have many pretty and unusual customs connected with the giving of favors on St. Valentine's day.



A Doctor's First Question Is_____?

"How are Your Bowels?" A Simple Remedy that Guarantees Good Bowel Action.

Trace the origin of the commoner ills of life and almost invariably you will find that constipation was the cause. It is not to be expected that a mass of fermented food can remain in the system beyond its time without vitiating the blood and affecting the nerves and muscles. It congests the entire body.

The results are colds, fevers, piles, headaches, and nervousness, with its accompanying indigestion and sleeplessness. There is only one thing to do, and that is to remove the trouble; and when nature seems unable to do it, outside aid is necessary. You will find the best of all outside aids a remedy that many thousands are now using for this very purpose, called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Many hundreds of letters are received by Dr. Caldwell telling of the good results obtained, and among the enthusiastic letters is one from Lieut. G. W. Vaughan, of 623 W. North St., Decatur, Ill. He is 72 and has had a bad liver and stomach since he came out of the army. He says he tried about everything, but never succeeded in getting permanent relief until he took Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. He is never without a bottle in the house, and he is never without good health.

It has untold advantages over pills, salts and the various coarse cathartics and purgatives, for while these do but temporary good, Syrup Pepsin cures permanently. The effect of its action is to train the stomach and bowel muscles to do their work naturally again, and in a short time all forms of medicine can be dispensed with. It can be bought without inconvenience at any nearby drug store for fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter size being regularly bought by those who already know its value. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

LIEUT. G. W. VAUGHAN

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

So long before that he had forgotten the gentleman's name and what office he was running for the old man had vowed never to be shaved or shorn until So-and-So was elected. PRESIDENT WILSON HINTS THAT HE WILL PROTECT THE CIVIL SERVICE SYSTEM.

VETOES FOR ATTACKS ON IT

Probably Sorry That He Yielded in One Instance—Rider on Postoffice Appropriation Bill Has Been Thrown Out.

BY GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington. — President Wilson more than occasionally is hinting that vetoes will await appropriation bills or any other kind of bills which contain what can be construed as atacks on the civil service system. Is it too blunt or too hard a thing to say that the president may feel that today he is paying the penalty of yielding in one instance thereby giving the clamorers after place their chance to try to make him yield again?

The house committee on post offices and post roads has for its chairman Representative John A. Moon of Tennessee. Mr. Moon was in favor of keeping in the post office appropriation bill the provision which exempted assistant postmasters from the operations of the civil service. Now it is fair to say that when the Republicans were in power a great many of them were in favor of extending the patronage lists to the depletion of the civil service lists and so perhaps it is only natural that now the Democrats are in power they should feel the same way. The rider which was put on the post office appropriation bill and intended to exempt assistant postmasters from the civil service rules unquestionably was intended simply to give 2,400 more places to the politicians to fill with men friendly to the present political order of things in Washington.

As had been expected, the rider met with the objection that it was out of order, and was struck out, so Mr. Wilson will not have to interpose the veto or give a reluctant sanction to an appropriation bill which contains a clause inimical, as he believes, to the civil service.

He Yielded a Little Once.

The president has conferred frequently with the Democrats of the house, urging them for the sake of party, and probably for his own sake, to check the disposition of some of the majority members to attack the civil service through appropriation and other measures. Through the years Mr. Wilson has declared himself on many occasions a civil service reformer, one devoted to the spirit as to the letter of the law, and yet not long ago he yielded a little with apparently great reluctance. It seems bad enough for the president to have some of the old time civil service supporters writing articles on "Broken Pledges" and other subjects intended by them to show that their former idol, the president, wobbles a little.

It is probably true that Mr. Wilson fully believed when he signed a former bill making exemptions to the civil service law, that a veto would have done injury to the public service by delaying work for which the main part of the bill made provision. In other words, he thought that while the civil service attack was unjustifiable, he must sign in order to conserve the country's best interests.

There has been sharp criticism of some of the administration's appointments to foreign offices. It is said some of the congressmen, cheered by their success in breaking down some of the civil service bulwarks, are turning their eyes to the heights where the consular service has been reposing in supposed security. The civil service law does not cover the consuls and consular agents of the government, but the efforts of two administrations to protect them with the spirit of the law thus far have been successful.

Consular Service in Peril.

If the Democrats want to get after the consular service, it will not be necessary for them to pass a law to make their work legal. In the case of the post offices they are compelled to legislate and to meet the opposition in the field of debate, thereby attracting full public attention to their deeds. The consuls and consular agents can be removed one by one quietly provided the state department and the administration shall give consent.

Some of the Republicans are charging that in many of the diplomatic appointments of the present administration there has been enough to show that the state department is willing to pay political debts by giving jobs to the faithful. It is not believed, however, in Washington that President Wilson will allow the bars which guard the consular service to be thrown down. The service today is on a good basis and every man in it has been given to believe that his job is safe. Some friends of Mr. Wilson are telling him that eventually no man's job will be safe if the Democrats put any more anti-civil service riders on the appropriation bills.

Aimed at the Pork Barrel.

There is just as much of a demand this year in both houses of congress for a public buildings bill, ordinarily known as the pork barrel bill, as there was in the years that are passed.

It has looked many times as if public buildings measures except in absolutely necessary cases were doomed, but every time expostulations failed. Senators and representatives frequently have expressed a wish that the "pork barrel" would blow up, but few have volunteered to apply the fuse and plant the dynamite.

The "pork barrel" commission created under the Taft administration is ready to report. It remains to be seen whether its findings will check the activities of the four hundred and thirty-five representatives and the ninety-five senators (there is one vacant seat) who daily are dropping bills into the hopper, hoping that they will be ground out in the form of public buildings for the towns, little and big, in the home states.

Sherman Allen, former assistant secretary of the treasury, was named by the commission appointed under the Taft administration to make an investigation of the "public building necessities" of the country. Mr. Allen has completed his work and the commission is about to report.

Some of the things which this commission has ascertained ought to fix the attention and perhaps ought to get the support of the country, but will they? Every town in the land which has none wants public buildings, and the plea always is that another town no bigger and no more important has one, "so why the discrimination?"

Great Waste of Money.

It has been learned by the investigators that it will be six years before the public buildings already authorized by congress will be completed. Congress will be told, with facts and figures to support the telling, that there has been an enormous waste of money because of the haphazard system of appropriating for post offices, custom houses and the like.

One of the discoveries of the commission is that the cheapest of the buildings costs at least $1,500 a year for maintenance and that buildings of the kind usually erected in the county seat towns cost $1,800 a year for maintenance. As against these figures the post office department shows that it is able to rent quarters for from $500 to $1,000 a year, and the owners shoulder maintenance charges.

Congress will be told in a few days that there should be a permanent tribunal authorized to see whether a government-owned post office building is necessary in the town or city which through its congressman asks for it. The commission will recommend that such a tribunal be established.

Says Business Is Safe.

Democratic senators and representatives hold that President Wilson's conviction, as expressed in his recent address, that no harm is to come to the business of the country from the legislative work which is to be done, is the most striking feature of his message to congress and to the people. The president's recent address has been productive of more comment in this city than anything else which has come from his pen or his tongue since he became president of the United States.

The business world has read Mr. Wilson's address and probably has studied it as every member of congress has done. Mr. Wilson took occasion to make it plain that he takes it for granted no possible harm can come to the commercial interests from the legislation which the Democrats have before them.

In his address the president, "speaking for the best informed men of the business world," as if he had certain knowledge of his right so to speak, said: "We shall now be their spokesman. That is the strength of our position and a sure prophesy of what will ensue when our reasonable work is done."

Unquestionably President Wilson expects the anti-trust legislation for which, with congress, he will be responsible, to be greeted with cordiality like that which he seems to be convinced has been accorded currency legislation.

Where Difficulty May Come.

It is some distance, however, from a president's message to a federal law. Congress yet has to act in these matters concerning the trusts of the country. The leaders must take hold of matters and frame the legislation which ultimately shall be passed. From present indications the Democratic chieftains intend to follow closely the lines of the president's recommendation, but that attempts will be made to divert them from these lines is certain.

The chief difficulty perhaps which the Democratic majority will have to meet is that of framing the measure which will make guilt personal. The president in his address said, "Every act of business is done at the command or upon the initiative of some ascertainable person or persons. These should be held individually responsible and the punishment should fall upon them, not upon the business organization of which they make illegal use."

Mr. Wilson thinks that one of the main objects of the legislation should be to divest such persons of their corporate cloaks and deal with them as with those who do not represent their corporations, but who deliberately break the law. Several times before this presidents of the United States have said that the big guilty man should suffer and not the little tool of the guilty man. Heretofore usually the big fellows have escaped. Mr. Wilson's hardest work probably will be to get legislation that not only will make guilt personal, but will make punishment personal. It is said in Washington that the president long has regarded that particular work as the hardest duty which he was likely to encounter during his term as chief executive.

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. —Adv.

WOULDN'T TRUST THE 'GATOR

Darkey Had by No Means Lost His Faith, but He Was Just a Little Apprehensive.

Bishop McDowell tells a story about a southern baptism. A colored preacher was dipping his converts in the waters of a tropical stream when one old darkey saw a crocodile sunning himself on the opposite bank. When his turn came to be immersed he drew back, casting terror-stricken eyes at the sleeping saurian.

"What's de mattah wid yo', brudder," said the parson; "yo' all ain't skeered o' dat dar gator, is yo'?"

The darkey admitted frankly that he was.

"Don' yo' all' member de story ob Jonah an' de whale, an' how de whale dun spit up Jonah on de shoah?"

"Yes, passon, Ah 'members erbout Jonah. But dat whale dun hab a conscience. Dat 'gator looks lak he might go to sleep an' fergit all erbout me."

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

I have ordered a big wagon load of kindling to be delivered tomorrow afternoon, and you will come home early from the office and carry it into the cellar."

No Rest—No Peace

There's no rest and but little peace for a person whose kidneys are out of order. Lame in the morning, suffering cricks in the back and sharp stabs of pain with every sudden strain, the day is just one round of pain and trouble.

It would be strange if all-day backache did not wear on the temper, but it is not only on that account that people who suffer with weak kidneys are nervous, cross and irritable.

Uric acid is poison to the nerves, and when the kidneys are not working well, this acid collects in the blood and works upon the nerves, causing headache, dizziness, languor, an inclination to worry over trifles, and a suspicious, short temper.

Rheumatic pain, neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, neuritis and gravel are further steps in uric acid poisoning.

Don't neglect kidney weakness. An aching back, with unnatural passages of the kidney secretions, is cause enough to suspect the kidneys. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy which has been used for years, the world over, for weak kidneys, backache, irregular kidney action and uric acid trouble. Thousands of grateful recommendations throughout the country prove their worth.

New York City Woman Tells of Awful Suffering

Mrs. Edith Dykeman, 154 W. 94th St., New York City, N. Y., says: "Three years ago I was so run down in health that I was a nervous wreck. I was afflicted with a severe case of disordered kidneys and doctors treated me without benefit. My kidneys acted either too freely or else the action was retarded and the passages of the secretions caused me much pain. My back ached frightfully day and night and I often rolled and tossed for hours, unable to go to sleep. In the morning I felt all worn out and was hardly able to do my housework. Whenever I stooped to pick up anything from the floor, I was hardly able to straighten again. I had terrible dizzy spells and specks seemed to be floating in front of me. If I walked up or down stairs, I was completely worn out from weakness. The least excitement brought on an attack of nervousness and I got so bad that it was hard for me to be up and around. My health was all run down. Someone advised me to take Doan's Kidney Pills and the first few doses helped me. I kept right on until I was entirely cured and I am now in the best of health. I feel like a different woman and Doan's Kidney Pills alone deserve the credit."

"You fill the pails with sand, and let me turn them out," suggested six-year-old Jack to little Doris.

His playmate obediently complied.

"Now we'll build a castle, and you shall fetch the water to go round it," exclaimed Jack.

Dutifully the little maid struggled up and down the beach, carrying buckets of water.

"Can't you fetch the water now, Jack," she suggested, "and let me pour it round?"

"Girls can't do that properly," answered the boy. "Let's paddle. But, I say, Doris, do you want to marry me when you grow up?"

"Yes—oh, yes!" Doris was delighted at the prospect.

The boy, however, assumed a bored air, and lazily extended his feet toward her.

"Very well, then," he said nonchalantly. "If you're going to be my wife, take off my shoes and stockings!"

I suffered terribly for years with many serious womanly troubles, and became so weak and nervous, I could hardly do anything. I had headaches, pains in my back and sides, and was always going to the doctor, but never felt well.

Finally, my husband bought me two bottles of Cardui, the woman's tonic. I commenced taking it, according to directions, and began feeling better. I am now on my eighth bottle, and feel better than I have in years. I sleep soundly, have a good appetite, and no more pains.

I never get tired of telling what your medicine has done for me, and I am sure it will help other suffering women, as it did me.

Cardui, the woman's tonic, and Thedford's Black-Draught liver medicine, are the only medicines we keep in the house."

If you suffer from any of the troubles so common to weak women, Try Mrs. Owen's advice—take Cardui.

For more than 50 years, Cardui has been used with entire satisfaction, by thousands of weak and ailing women. It will surely help you, too.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

FOR STATE SENATOR.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the Senate of Alabama from the the Fifteenth district, composed of the counties of Chilton, Shelby and Autauga, subject to the action of the Democratic primary.

W. W. Wallace

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the democratic primary to be held on April 6, 1914. W. F. FALLON.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the democratic primary election to be held on April 6, 1914.

B. E. JONES.

It is sincerely to be hoped that you were among the early number who qualified as citizens before 12 o'clock last Saturday night.

It is a matter of small moment to the people whether it is Theo Lacy, Theodore Lacy, or Theophilis Lacy, the paramount question in their minds just at this time is where is that ninety thousand.

Rev. C. R. Lamar, who some two or three weeks ago assumed editorial management of the Wetumkpa Herald, has resigned, his valedictory appearing in last week's Herald. We rise to remark that the Rev. Lamar be elected unanimously official valedictorian of the Alabama Press Association.

Captain Hobson, in his speech at the Court house Thursday night stated that Underwood only voted for the Webb bill after it had come up for final passage, that the fight had already been won and his vote at that time wasn't needed to carry the measure, yet, Mr. Webb, the author of the bill, says if it had not been for Mr. Underwood, the bill would no doubt have been defeated.

The man from Decatur makes a second trip to Andalusia to look over the promising newspaper field and remarked that it was full already. Yes, we should say that it is full, but it can be filled to overflowing and then some one will get spilled.—Andalusia Standard.

This same citizen wanted to come to Clanton, where we also have a crowded field; he received little encouragement, however.

It is to be hoped that Captain Hobson during his brief stay in Washington will get a full statement from the Treasury department in reference to cotton bagging and ties, and correct this false charge that Underwood took the tax off of liquor and put it on cotton bagging and ties. The republican tariff on liquor remains as it was, and cotton bagging and ties are admitted free of duty. Captain Hobson owes it to the people of Alabama to correct this mistake.

In this issue will be found a news item from Selma to the effect that a number of citizens of the Fourth Congressional District met in Selma last week for the purpose of bringing out a candidate to oppose Congressman Fred L. Blackmon. Hon. W. B. Craig's name was mentioned in connection with the race, and should he be induced to make the race it would be a lively scrap. Mr. Craig formerly represented this district and made a good Congressman. Mr. Blackmon has also made a good record.

Some Pointed Questions.

Do you want to see Clanton free from malaria and typhoid fevers? If so, vote for water works.

Do you want to await the exhorbitant insurance rates and keep this $65,000.00 at home that we are paying insurance companies for excessive rates? If so, vote for water works.

Do you want to see property valuations in Clanton enhanced? If so, vote for water works.

Do you want to see the dangers from fires reduced to the minimum and thus escape a conflagration such as our neighbors at Thorsby recently experienced? If so, a vote for water works will turn the trick.

Do you want to see Clanton grow and prosper? If so, vote for water works.

Do you, as a citizen, wish to offer any inducements to the prospective settler, who would come and cast his destinies with the best people in the world? If so, vote for water works.

These are questions of vital interest to every patriotic citizen, and should command their earnest and thoughtful consideration.

A bomb shell was thrown in the Hobson camp last week. On Wednesday Mr. G. T. McEldery, of Talladega, made the statement at Chelsea in the presence of Captain Hobson that cotton bagging and ties were not on the free list, that these articles were both taxed under a joker clause. Mr. Forney Johnston, Underwood's campaign manager, wired the Treasury department for the facts in the case and here is the answer from the assistant secretary:

"Bagging for covering cotton and ties for bailing cotton are now being admitted free of duty by Treasury Department, under paragraphs 408 and 509 of tariff act of October 3, 1913, without question. C. S. HAMLIN,

COMMITTEE MEETING.

A meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County is hereby called to meet at the Court House in Clanton, Alabama, on Saturday, the 7th day of February, 1914.

E. M. PINCKARD,
Chairman.

THE GOWAN ADDITION

The Press man, with his manifold duties as editor, manager, type setter, etc., doesn't get to "run around like other boys," and in consequence was not aware of just how fast Clanton was growing until on Monday last we had occasion to make a trip down on the Gowan Addition, Clanton's latest residential acquisition, and when we arrived there, take it from us, we were perfectly amazed and bewildered at the marvelous growth and the many changes that have occurred within the last year or so.

When the Gowan Bros. acquired this property from the Bell estate there were no improvements whatever on the property and a good many viewed their investment through a pessimistic optic and opined that the Gowans had a "White elephant" to contend with. But Gowan Bros. had lots of faith in the possibilties of Clanton and what is more they possessed grit and would not hear to failure.

They immediately set to work, had a survey made, streets laid off and the large area cut up into residence lots. They then engaged the services of an expert sales manager who had had wide experience in handling city property, to come and sell the lots at auction. There have been two or three of these sales, and almost all the lots have been disposed of.

As soon as the first sale took place those who made purchases begun at once the erection of residences, and building has continued until now this is one of the most beautiful residential sections of our growing city. The streets and sidewalks have been graded and paved and are adorned with attractive residences and bungalows, among which are the most beautiful in Clanton.

All praise to the Gowans for their enterprising spirit and may their trusting tribe increase.

All orders for groceries receive our prompt attention, we deliver goods to all parts of the city on short notice. Smith Grocery Company. tf

THORSBY ITEMS

Since the fire Thorsby has been short on business houses, but readjustments have been made so that all the needs of the town and surrounding country can now be supplied as well as formerly.

The Union Cash Grocery Company is now open every day in the week with a good stock of groceries.

A. M. Johnson has opened a store in his residence with an entirely new stock of groceries and is supplying the trade in his usual obliging manner.

P. C. Smith bought out Samuel Collins' stock of goods and has opened up a general merchandise store in the room formerly used for the post-office, the post-office has been moved to the other side of the building.

J. J. Stanley has put up a temporary building of sheet iron next to the bank, and is now supplying his usual trade.

J. R. Parnell & Son have put up a frame building next to the house occupied by Mr. Collins, and they are now waiting on customers.

J. T. Tunnell has opened a cash grocery store in the room formerly used as a barber shop, and the barber shop having been moved to the back room of the same building.

A. K. Horn has opened a drug store in the room back of the post-office.

H. C. Junkerman has opened a dental office in his residence next to Thorsby Institute.

George Freeman has begun the foundation of a new brick building.

W. L. Pyron has begun a brick building which is to be completed soon.

A. K. Horn is soon to commence the erection of a substantial brick building.

The Redmen and Woodmen are making plans for the erection of a two-story brick building on the site formerly occupied by Stanley's store.

Arrangements have been made for the purchase of the city water works by Thorsby Institute. There is some talk of putting in a dynamo to supply electric light to the town.

Mr. Thomas Uhrig has been absent in Birmingham for the past two weeks, during which time he has had a surgical operation performed on his throat.

Miss Sadie Belle Waites, from near Wetumpka, has entered the Thorsby Institue and is staying in the girls' dormitory.

Because of the change in the date for Smith Damron, the Potter Craftsman, the Chinese operetta has been postponed until February 20th, but the practices now under way promise a very pleasing entertainment at that time.

SMITH DAMRON, FEB. 14, 1914.

It has been necessary to change the dates of some of the numbers on the Thorsby Institute Entertainment Course. The revised dates for the remainder of the Course are as follows:

Smith Damron, the "Potter Craftsman," Feb. 14th.

Chinese Operetta, "The Feast of the Little Lanterns," Feb. 20th.

Miss Emma Dee Randle, Elocutionist, March 12th.

The Music Makers, (male quartette) April 7th.

Please note these changes of date. Tickets for the balance of the Course (four numbers) can be had at the remarkable low price of $1.25 for adults, and 60 cents for students and children. This is a rare opportunity for the people of Thorsby and vicinity.

WHEN YOU'RE SICK YOUR WAGES STOP

You know what that means—misery—worry—big bills—debt!

You know you can't afford to get sick. Keeping in good health means food and clothing for you and your family. It is up to you to take care of yourself. If it is up to you, whenever you don't feel right, to take something to make you right; to strengthen you, build you up, ward off sickness—then you want a medicine that will do it. That thing we have in Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. In offering it to you we protect you against money-risk, by personally promising you that, if it does not restore your health, we will give back your money without word or question. We believe it is the best builder of health, energy and strength you can get. It is helping many of your neighbors. If it don't help you, we will give back your money.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is composed principally of pure Olive Oil and the Hypophosphites. Each has been endorsed by successful physicians. Here they are for the first time combined. The result is a remarkable nerve, blood and strength-building remedy that is both food and medicine. For all who are nervous, rundown and debilitated—no matter what the cause; for old people; for convalescents; for puny children, we know of nothing that will give health and strength so quickly as Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. It is a real builder of good blood, strong muscles, good digestion. Pleasant to take, it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. If you don't feel well, economize both money and strength by beginning today to take Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. Sold only at the Rexall Stores, and in this town by us. $1.00. Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

Purchase Hardware as a Man-to-Man Proposition

When you come in J. M. Dunn's store you meet him face to face. You and him talk it over, you tell him what you want and what you want to use it for. He gives you the benefit of his knowledge of hardware and suggests the best article for the purpose at the price you wish to pay.

The appearance of hardware is deceiving, most articles of hardware look alike; a poor saw looks very much like a good saw, a poor hammer looks very much like a good one. How can you tell what is of good quality and what is not? By the store which sells itto you. "Water seeks its level." A reliable hardware man will never sell you unreliable hardware. I know hardware from A to Z. I only carry the best lines. I have different grades in every kind of hardware, but I see to it that every grade is the best that can be had for the price. Whatever price you pay you get full value for your money.

If you want a square deal in hardware, then come to see

Our Country

No citizen of the United States can help but experience a feeling of pride—not egotism—when he reflects on the accomplishments of his countrymen.

The United States, an infant in years, but a giant in accomplishment when compared to the other nations of the world, is the home of the telegraph, the telephone, the cotton gin, the steam engine and steamboat, of electricity, the flying machine, the moving picture and the automobile.

All of the improvements and variations worked out for the comfort, convenience and enrichment of mankind all over the world are directly traceable to the origin and discovery of one or more of those things.

The successful development of the various enterprises was made possible through the collection of comparatively small amounts of money, into a large amount to be applied to the work in hand.

Corporations became as necessary as the telephone, the cotton gin, the telegraph, the automobile, the railroad, have now become. Without the corporation none of the labor saving, comfort giving, economical devices would have ever attained to the importance they now occupy in the life of the average citizen.

The L. & N. Railroad is a corporation. It owes a debt, as do other railroads, to the discovery of steam, and to the thousands of thoughtful individuals who have spent their time devising ways and means for its practical and economical application.

The L. & N. Railroad owes a debt, as do other railroads, to those corporations which financed and developed the wonderful deposits of coal and iron, for without the iron there would be no steel rails, and without the coal there would be no steam to propel the engines.

The L. & N. is trying every day to discharge this debt by lending every assistance in its power; it co-operates with the coal and iron industry, supplying quick and satisfactory service to all parts of the world in search of ready markets that will pay a fair price for the output.

Do the people realize the debt the world owes to Thomas A. Edison?

If so, the people should realize the debt they owe to the L. & N. Railroad. They owe it the debt of fair, considerate treatment; the debt which is incurred when men and women risk their money in the construction of a railroad; the debt which the people incur when they are supplied unexcelled service, and when they accept the help and co-operation for the profitable development of the territory through which the L. & N. operates.

The L. & N. owes a debt to the farmer who grows his crops that create traffic; to the manufacturer who produces his article which creates traffic; to the merchant who orders the article, thus creating traffic; to the people who consume the articles of traffic.

Every effort is being made by the L. & N. to satisfactorily discharge these obligations.

Quick and sure freight transportation; fast comfortable passenger service; co-operation for the profitable development of agricultural, mineral and industrial resources—all that each of us may share a common prosperity.

Instead of each of us condemning the other, let us remember the tremendous accomplishments of our country, and reflect that their success was due to co-operative effort.

TAX COMMISSION RAISE ASSESSMENTS

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings in and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Raises in assessments totalling about $250,000 were made by the State tax commission on the properties of the Kaul Lumber Company in Bibb county. The assessments of the properties located in Tuscaloosa county were taken under advisement.

Hugh Morrow represented the lumber company and he argued the case before the commission Saturday. John B. Powell of Greenville, former member of the commission, sat in the cases as he was familiar with all the details in connection with the matter.

The Kaul Lumber Company owns large tracts of timber lands in Tuscaloosa and Bibb counties and has a large saw mill near Tuscaloosa.

R. R. Commission Meets.

The railroad commission met here in regular session and action was taken on the two cases scheduled to come before the commission.

The case to which most importance was attached was a citation of the commission to the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, requiring that company to show cause why it should not furnish better gate facilities at the Union Station in Montgomery. The citation is the result of considerable complaints received by the commission regarding inadequate gate facilities.

The second case has been before the commission at other meetings. It is styled the railroad commission against the St. Louis & Santa Fe Railroad company, and is a citation calling upon the company to show cause why it should not stop passenger trains Nos. 105 and 106 at Sulligent, Carbon Hill, Cordova and Dora.

Auburn Trustees Named by O'Neal.

Oliver R. Hood of Gadsden and Harry Herzfeld of Alexander City, were appointed as members of the board of trustees of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute to succeed W. F. Feagin and Judge N. D. Denson, respectively. The appointments were made by Governor O'Neal. Mr. Hood succeeds Mr. Feagin as the member from the Seventh district and Mr. Herzfeld succeeds Judge Denson as the member from the Fifth district.

Both the new members of the board are prominent in their districts.

As a successor to Mr. Feagin Mr. Hood's term will expire in 1919. Judge Denson's term also expires in 1919 and Mr. Herzfeld will hold the office until that time.

State Has Cause for Action.

Judge Gaston Gunter of the Montgomery city court, ruled that the State of Alabama has cause for action for conversion of money had and received in the suit brought for $125,000 against the Montgomery Savings Bank in connection with the defalcation of Theo. Lacy, former State convict clerk. Judge Gunter ruled that the State had no action for conversion of the checks in the suit. He set March 2 as the date for trial.

This suit was brought by the State to recover from the bank money paid out to Theo Lacy just prior to his mysterious disappearance from Montgomery March 12, 1913. The money was paid on checks signed by James G. Oakley, at that time head of the Convict department.

Bank Files Incorporation Papers.

Notice of the incorporation of the Bank of Tallassee was filed in the State department. The new institution has a capital stock of $15,000.

Will Build New Jail.

In compliance with an order issued by Dr. W. H. Oates, State prison inspector, Conecuh county will at once begin the erection of a new jail at Evergreen. Dr. Oates returned to Montgomery from Evergreen, where he held a conference with the board of county commissioners. When the new jail is completed it will be a model one and will be equipped with modern appliances. Dr. Oates inspected the jail several weeks ago and recommended that a new structure be built at once.

Cotton Seed Meal Seized.

Two carloads of cotton seed meal consigned to Montgomery merchants was seized by Federal officers and upon the recommendation of C. H. Billingsley, State pure food and drug clerk, it will be held until it can be shown that it measures up to the pure food laws of the State and government. Mr. Billingsley had a chemical examination made of the feed stuff and because it failed to come up to the government standard, he recommended that it be seized by the federal authorities.

Many Banks Will Increase Capital.

Alabama is progressing rapidly in a financial way, according to Alex E. Walker, superintendent of the State banking department, who reports that petitions for capital increases aggregating $195,000 are on file in his office. Three new banks are being organized and seven new banks have applied for permission to organize, according Mr. Walker.

Among the banks, which have increased or will increase their capital stock are the Bank of Bay Minette, from $10,000 to $25,000; Bank of Seale, $50,000 to $75,000; New Market Banking Company, $10,000 to $20,000; Peoples Bank of Evergreen, $100,000 to $200,000; Bank of Albertville, $25,000 to $50,000; Bank of Andalusia, $50,000 to $100,000; Farmers and Merchants Bank of Headland, $25,100 to $50,000.

Business men of Bessemer have notified the banking department of their intention to organize a new bank and citizens of Wilsonville headed by A. H. Smith, cashier of the Bank of Childersburg, will organize a new institution. C. P. Deming and others are planning to organize a new bank at Jones Mill in Conecuh county.

Carelessness Caused Mine Disaster.

C. H. Nesbit, chief mine inspector, called on Governor O'Neal to discuss routine business matters in connection with the work of the State mine inspection department. Mr. Nesbit declared that the recent mine disaster in Tuscaloosa county was caused by carelessness on the part of the miners. Twelve men were killed and several injured in the explosion. Mr. Nesbit has not yet prepared his official report on the disaster.

Helmes Appointed.

M. W. Helmes, of Enterprise, was appointed as a member of the Coffee county board of commissioners by Governor O'Neal.

Says Books Are Poorly Kept.

Because M. H. Craig, former superintendent of education of Lawrence county, "over-contracted" the apportionment of school funds of his county for the scholastic year 1911-12 and erroneously paid the money in the scholastic year 1912-13, he is due the State $1,403.38, according to Charles L. Townes, examiner of public accounts, in a report filed with Governor O'Neal.

This sum is due "on account of the negligent, careless and incompetent method of conducting the duties of the office," according to the report of the examiner.

"The few records Mr. Craig had were imperfectly kept and he had no system of bookkeeping whatever," reads the report. "Many of his contracts were misplaced, together with a large number of teachers' reports, and it was practically impossible to ascertain with any degree of certainty whether or not all teachers appearing on the pay roll were properly paid.

"Mr. Craig paid out in 1912-13 the sum of $1,403, which should have been paid out of the funds of the preceding scholastic year. This left $1,187 due and unpaid to the teachers for the year 1912-13. Under a ruling of the attorney general, the superintendent of education and the county board of education are liable for the payment of the $1,403 and which should, when paid, be applied to the appropriation for the year 1912-13 to the extent of extinguishing the balance due the teachers that years," says the examiner.

In his report, Examiner Townes incorporates the opinion of the Attorney General and also attaches a list of the teachers who were unpaid. He cites the number of the districts in which the teachers worked and the amount due each teacher. The examination covered the period from October, 1911, to October, 1913. With the exception of a few minor errors the books of other Lawrence officials were correct.

Militia Officers Pass.

Twenty-one officers of the Alabama National Guard were successful in passing the efficiency tests held by the State board of military examiners. There were no failures.

Florala Merchant Bankrupt.

J. E. Flournoy, a merchant of Florala, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the Federal court here, listing liabilities amounting to $2,246.11, without assets.

To Rebuild High School.

School officials of Winston county will rebuild the County High School at Double Springs, which was destroyed by fire in October. Checks for the insurance money on the building have been received by the State department of education. W. F. Feagin, state superintendent; Prof. J. S. Thomas, of the University of Alabama, and J. B. Hobdy, of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, went to Double Springs this week in order that they might be present when construction work began.

Corn Prize Money Paid.

Capt. John C. Chaney, chief clerk of the State department of agriculture, mailed a warrant for $350 as first prize money in the State corn contest, won by Cecil Adams, of Eclectic, Elmore county. Adams won first prize with a yield of 235 bushels of corn on one acre. Elmore county led the State in the corn contest for 1913. Its general report showed an average greater than any other county. Warrants for the winners of $35 in prizes in fifty-two counties of the State also were sent out.

STATE SUFFRAGISTS MEET IN HUNTSVILLE

MARKS BIRTH OF POLITICAL ACTIVITY OF PROGRESSIVE WOMEN OF STATE.

MANY ATTEND CONVENTION

Mrs. Solon Jacobs Reviews Year's Progress—Surage in 1915 is Slogan.

Huntsville. — Practically all of the leading suffragists of Alabama assembled here on February 4 and 5. Hundreds of men and women were present. Delegates came from Montgomery, Mobile, Selma, Tuscaloosa, Greensboro, Vinemont, Cullman, Pell City and Coal City, in all of which towns there are equal suffrage organizations. Many other towns and counties of Alabama were represented by individuals who have earnest enthusiasm for the cause.

The Huntsville convention was an epoch-making event for the State, for it marks the birth of the political activity and organization of the progressive women of Alabama. Plans were systematically laid down for the coming political campaign and the counties mapped out for action.

"Woman Suffrage for Alabama in 1915" is the slogan.

A review of the year's progress in suffrage was given by the president of the State association, Mrs. Solon Jacobs. Reports were presented from the presidents of the eleven local organizations and from the chairmen of the various committees of the State organization.

It was in Huntsville, where the first suffrage sentiment in Alabama originally existed, that Susan B. Anthony and Carrie Chapman Catt came at the invitation of Mrs. Virginia Clay Clopton. Mrs. Milton Humes, Mrs. Alberta Chapman Taylor and Mrs. Anne Buell Robertson.

It was at the invitation of Mrs. Clopton, president of the Huntsville Equal Suffrage Association, and of Mrs. Milton Humes that the suffragists of Alabama were invited to Huntsville. Mrs. Clopton, who is the oldest suffragist in the State, presided at one of the evening meetings.

The Huntsville association, re-organized last year by Mrs. Oscar Hundley, with Mrs. Clay Clopton as president, comprises over 100 members, most representative women of the historic little city. The Birmingham association, of which Mrs. Hundley is president, counts nearly a thousand members. Selma, whose president is Mrs. Julian B. Parke, has over 100 members; Tuscaloosa, whose president is Mrs. Frederick D. Losey, already has nearly fifty. The membership list is growing so rapidly and it is estimated at the present rate of progress throughout the State that by this time next year the State association will be several thousand strong and that practically every club woman, every educator and every progressive and modern-spirited home-maker in Alabama will be enlisted in the suffrage ranks.

Entertainment of an elaborate order was provided for the delegates by the local suffragists.

HORTICULTURISTS TO MEET.

Sessions Will Be Held on March 4, 5 nd 6.

Auburn. — The eleventh annual meeting of the Alabama State Horticultural Society, which is expected to be the best in the history of the organization, will be held in Thorsby March 4, 5 and 6. The meeting will be of great intest to all interested in any phase of horticulture.

A number of excellent speakers will be present to give practical talks on the different horticultural subjects.

Thorsby is one of the most up-to-date truck growing centers in the South. Free entertainment will be given visitors by the citizens of this enterprising town.

Exhibits of various fruits and vegetables will be shown in connection with the meeting, and premiums will be awarded for the best products.

WANTS STREET FAIRS CUT OUT.

Farmers' Union Calls on County Authorities to Take Action.

Gadsden.—At a meeting of the Etowah County Farmers' Union resolutions were passed calling on the authorities of the county to suppress and prohibit street fairs coming into the towns and municipalities because of the alleged bad influences that spread from them to the rural communities.

TWO L. & N. LINES INTO MOBILE.

Second Main Line to Be From Selma Via Flomaton.

Mobile.—Before the Louisville and Nashville railroad completes its program of construction in Alabama, it will probably have two main lines into Mobile from Birmingham. One will be via Montgomery, being the present main line, and the other will be via Flomaton, and Selma via a new main line which is under process

STATEMENTS ABOUT PRIZES

Duncan and Hobdy Say Dunson Won Corn Awards Fairly.

Auburn. — Answer to the charge of favoritism extended to Walker Lee Dunson, winner of the government corn prizes in Alabama, on the part of J. B. Hobdy and L. N. Duncan, in charge of boys' corn club work in Alabama, was made here in a lengthy statement signed by Mr. Hobdy and Mr. Duncan. Charges were made by W. A. Adams, of Electic, Ala., who claimed the two men misrepresented matters to him and obtained his signature to an affidavit declaring his son, Cecil Adams, did not abide by regulations in growing 239 bushels of corn on an acre of ground.

The statement declares Mr. Hobdy visited the plot of the Adams boy and reported that there were irregularities in the gathering and measuring of the corn, and a copy of the Adams affidavit was included in the statement. The statement says Dunson abided by the regulations in every particular, and they were compelled to award prizes to him.

GOLD MINING IN CLEBURNE.

Work Has Been Resumed After Long Rest.

Heflin.—Gold mining in the southern part of Cleburne county has been resumed after several years of inactivity. Mines formerly worked by the Clear Creek Mining Company are now under the management of a Birmingham organization and the machinery is back in motion.

The lost vein of Arbacoochee, which more than 50 years ago yielded profitable returns, has been sought many years, and experts recently declared they had discovered it. A number of experts are working in the fields in this section.

The Pinetucky mines are quiet, but there is some talk of a resumption of work. The Stone Hill copper mines, located nearby, are not in operation now. The metal is so deeply imbedded in the earth owners have not been able to operate with success.

Territory between this place and Anniston, Calhoun county, bears evidence of rich gold and copper deposits, and there is talk from time to time of extensive operations in the mining industry.

THEY MEAN TO VOTE.

Two Dallas County Citizens Pay Thirteen Years' Poll Tax.

Selma.—Two residents of Dallas County who are anxious to participate in the elections which will be held this year have called at the office of Tax Collector Phillips and paid their poll tax for the past 12 years. Each one of these residents tendered to Tax Collector Phillips a new $20 gold certificate and received in exchange with their poll tax receipt 50 cents in change.

They are Probate Judge T. D. Grubbs, who will likely seek re-election; Capt. J. L. Cherry, now with the Interstate Grocery Company of Eufaula, and J. T. Searcy of Clayton, superintendent of education of Barbour county.

LACY SURRENDERS TO AUTHORITIES

ABSCONDING CHIEF CLERK ALABAMA CONVICT BUREAU GIVES UP.

WILL MAKE NO STATEMENT

Refuses to Tell of His Whereabouts Since His Disappearance Last March.

LACY MUST MAKE BAIL OF $50,000.

Montgomery. — Theo Lacy, absconding chief clerk of the State convict department, must remain in jail until he makes a $50,000 bond, according to a ruling of Judge Armstead Brown, of the Montgomery city court. Judge Brown declined to reduce the original bond of Lacy from $92,000 to $20,000, as suggested by Solicitor Temple Selbels. He fixed $50,000 as an amount he considered reasonable in the case. Lacy has not made the $50,000 bond and may remain in jail until his trial, which has been set for February 24, in the criminal division of the city court.

Montgomery, Ala.—Theodore Lacy, former chief clerk in the Alabama state convict bureau, charged in numerous indictments with having embezzled funds amounting to more than $90,000, surrendered himself to the Montgomery county authorities. News of his surrender was kept a secret for about trhee hours, but bondsmen summoned to the county prison could not maintain the secret.

Lacy disappeared from Montgomery last March, his disappearance causing a big political sensation. A determined search had been made since that time throughout the state and the south, but no trace of him could be found.

The governor was notified of the surrender of Lacy and immediately sent two of his secretaries to the county jail to represent him. The governor declined to make any statement. It is due to his a activities and those of his detectives that the surrender was brought about.

It is stated that three bonds are demanded of Lacy, totaling $67,000, one being for $50,000. When Lacy surrendered he offered a bond for $20,000 that was signed by sureties of Selma, worth half a million dollars.

Lacy arrived at the county jail, and was followed into the office almost immediately by Edward Pettus and Mr. Patterson of Selma. The doors of the prison were not thrown open to him in as welcome a manner as would generally have been expected, and, owing to the fact that the night jailer was in the rear of the prison, it required several knocks from the former clerk before he was received.

"Have you a capias for Lacy?" he inquired when Jailer Phenix admitted the two men to his office.

"Why, no, we have none, but I reckon one could be found in the sheriff's office across the street in the court house, replied the jailer. "And, by the way, I have just seen two beautiful little children I understand are Mr. Lacy's."

"I am the father of those children," said Lacy, speaking to the jailer for the first time. Then the jailer in an open-mouthed wonder realized he was talking to the man who had hettered detectives and officers of Montgomery county and the state for months, and for whom a reward of $5000 had been offered, and which has been standing since March last.

Although Lacy chatted and joked with the newspaper men and friends at the jail, he would make no statement regarding his whereabouts during the past 10 months. He would not say where he had been, or how he reached Montgomery. He walked to the county jail, through Dexter avenue and Washington street, two of the main thoroughfares of the city, without being recognized, although his appearance is not changed.

"I will not make a statement for the press at this time," said Lacy, "as I have been advised not to say anything. My lawyers have told me to be silent regarding my absence since last March, and I'm going to carry out their instructions."

The three indictments against Theodore Lacy are stated to contain a general charge of embezzlement. Nine other indictments were made against James G. Oakley, president of the convict bureau, at the time of the alleged defalcation, and civil suits were instituted against him.

Theodore Lacy disappeared shortly after noon on Wednesday, March 12, 1913. There had been rumors of a shortage in the convict department for some time, and it was shortly before matters came to a head that Lacy fled. With him, he took about $90,000, which he drew from the Exchange National bank and the Montgomery Savings Bank on checks signed by James G. Oakley.

The disappearance of Lacy was not taken seriously until warrants were issued for his arrest, and rewards of $5000 offered for his capture.

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Common Form of Insanity.

A party of Clevelanders entertained some holiday visitors and having showed them everything interesting in Cleveland proper they had to take them to Newburg for a view of the asylum. The superintendent was in a genial frame of mind and he conducted the bunch personally.

"Here is a queer case, ladies," he said, pausing at a particular cell. "This man has the delusion that he possesses the motive power that runs the universe. He is perfectly harmless, but he actually believes that without him the world would not move. Strange notion, isn't it?"

"Why, not at all!" exclaimed one of the women. "My husband has the same idea and he always has had it. Is he crazy, too?"

IN PAIN WITH HEMORRHOIDS

Bissell, Ala.—"I was troubled for several years with protruding hemorrhoids. They caused pain of the most severe kind and some loss of blood. They were so inflamed that the touch of anything against them was most intense agony. I got no rest nights and had to have my legs and feet propped up in the bed.

"I tried all kinds of advertised cures, and I was told that an operation was the only relief. I suffered untold agony. I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. I tried it and then procured a box of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I was cured sound and well in three weeks' time. A cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment accomplished what all else failed to do." (Signed) L. R. Cook, Nov. 12, 1912.

Harsh Judge.

Judge Stephen C. Greene, at a dinner in Charleston, was defending a harsh sentence.

"I am a conservative," said Judge Greene, "and I believe that it is better for law and order that sentences should err on the side of harshness rather than on the side of lenity.

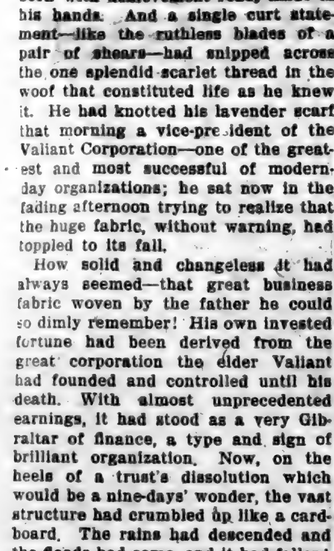
CHAPTER I.

The Crash.

"Failed!" ejaculated John Valiant blankly, and the hat he held dropped to the claret-colored rug like a huge white splotch of sudden fright. "The Corporation—failed!"

The young man was the glass of fashion, from the silken ribbon on the spotless Panama to his pearl-gray gaiters, and well favored—a lithe stalwart figure, with wide-set hazel eyes and strong brown hair waving back from a candid forehead.



Never had his innocuous and butter-fly existence known a surprise more startling. He had swung into the room with all the nonchalant habits, the ingrained certitude of the man born with achievement ready-made in his hands. And a single curt statement—like the ruthless blades of a pair of shears—had snipped across the one splendid scarlet thread in the woof that constituted life as he knew it. He had knotted his lavender scarf that morning a vice-president of the Valiant Corporation—one of the greatest and most successful of modern-day organizations; he sat now in the fading afternoon trying to realize that the huge fabric, without warning, had toppled to its fall.

How solid and changeless it had always seemed—that great business fabric woven by the father he could so dimly remember! His own invested fortune had been derived from the great corporation the elder Valiant had founded and controlled until his death. With almost unprecedented earnings, it had stood as a very Gibraltar of finance, a type and sign of brilliant organization. Now, on the heels of a trust's dissolution which would be a nine-days' wonder, the vast structure had crumbled up like a cardboard. The rains had descended and the floods had come, and it had fallen!

The man at the desk had wheeled in his revolving chair and was looking at the trim athletic back blotting the daylight, with a smile that was little short of a covert sneer. He was one of the local managers of the corporation whose ruin was to be that day's sensation, a colorless man who had acquired middle age with his first long trousers and had been dedicated to the commercial treadmill before he had bought a safety-razor. He despised all loiterers along the primrose paths, and John Valiant was but a decorative figurehead.

Valiant started as the other spoke at his elbow. He had come to the window and was looking down at the pavement. "How quickly some news spreads!"

For the first time the young man noted that the street below was filling with a desultory crowd. He distinguished a knot of Italian laborers talking with excited gesticulations—a smudged plasterer, tools in hand,—clerks, some hatless and with thin alpaca coats—all peering at the voiceless front of the great building, and all, he imagined, with a thriving fear in their faces. As he watched, a woman, coarsely dressed, ran across the street, her handkerchief pressed to her eyes.

"The notice has gone up on the door," said the manager, "I sent word to the police. Crowds are ugly some times."

Valiant drew a sudden sharp breath. The corporation down in the mire, with crowds at its doors ready to clamor for money entrusted to it, the aggregate savings of widow and orphan, the piteous hoarded sums earned by labor over which pinched sickly faces had burned the midnight oil!

The older man had turned back to the desk to draw a narrow typewritten slip of paper from a pigeonhole. "Here," he said, "is a list of the bonds of the subsidiary companies recorded in your name. These are all, of course, engulfed in the larger failure. You have, however, your private fortune. If you take my advice, by the way," he added significantly, "you'll make sure of keeping that."

"What do you mean?" John Valiant faced him quickly.

The other laughed shortly. "A word to the wise," he quoted. "It's very good living abroad. There's a boat leaving tomorrow."

A dull red sprang into the younger face. "You mean—"

"Look at that crowd down there—you can hear them now. There'll be a legislative investigation, of course. And the devil'll get the hindmost." He struck the desk-top with his hand. "Have you ever seen the bills for this furniture? Do you know what that rug under your feet cost? Twelve thousand—it's an old Persian. What do you suppose the papers will do to that? Do you think such things will seem amusing to that rabble down there?" His hand swept toward the window. "It's been going on for too many years, I tell you! And now some one'll pay the piper. The lightning won't strike me—I'm not tall enough. You're a vice-president."

"Do you imagine that I knew these things—that I have been a party to what you seem to believe has been a deliberate wrecking?" Valiant towered over him, his breath coming fast, his hands clenched hard.

"You?" The manager laughed again—an unpleasant laugh that scraped the other's quivering nerves like hot sandpaper. "Oh, lord no! How should you? You've been too busy playing polo and winning bridge prizes. How many board meetings have you attended this year? Your vote is proxied as regular as clockwork. But you're supposed to know. The people down there in the street won't ask questions about patent-leather pumps and ponies; they'll want to hear about such things as rotten irrigation loans in the Stony-River Valley—to market an alkali desert that is the personal property of the president of this corporation."

Valiant turned a blank white face. "Sedgwick?"

"Yes. You know his principle: 'It's all right to be honest, if you're not too damn honest.' He owns the Stony-River Valley bag and baggage. It was a big gamble and he lost."

Valiant was staring at the other with a strange look. Emotions to which in all his self-indulgent life he had been a stranger were running through his mind, and outre passions had him by the throat. Fool and doubly blind! A poor pawn, a catspaw raking the chestnuts for unscrupulous men whose ignominy he was now called on, perforce, to share! In his pitiful egotism he had consented to be a figurehead, and he had been made a tool. A red rage surged over him. No one had ever seen on John Valiant's face such a look as grew on it now.

He turned and without a word opened the door. The older man took a step toward him—he had a sense of dangerous electric forces in the air—but the door closed sharply in his face. He smiled grimly. "Not crooked," he said to himself; "merely callow. A well-meaning, manicured young fop wholly surrounded by men who knew what they wanted!" He shrugged his shoulders and went back to his chair.

Valiant plunged down in the elevator to the street. He pushed past the guarded door, and threading the crowd, made toward the curb, where his bulldog, with a bark of delight, leaped upon the seat of a burnished car, rumbling and vibrating with pent-up power. There were those in the sullen anxious crowd who knew whose was that throbbing metal miracle, the chauffeur spick and span from shining cap-visor to polished brown puttees, and recognized the white face that went past, pelted it with muttered sneers. But he scarcely saw or heard them, as he stepped into the seat, took the wheel from the chauffeur's hand and threw on the gear.

He drove mechanically past a hundred familiar things and places, but he saw nothing, till the massive marble fronts of the upper park side ceased their mad dance as the car halted before a tall iron-grilled doorway with wide glistening steps, between windows strangely shuttered and dark.

He sprang out and touched the bell. The heavy oak parted slowly; the confidential secretary of the man he had come to face stood in the gloomily doorway.

"I want to see Mr. Sedgwick."

"You can't see him, Mr. Valiant."

"But I will!" Sharp passion leaped into the young voice. "He must speak to me."

The man in the doorway shook his head. "He won't speak to anybody any more," he said. "Mr. Sedgwick shot himself two hours ago."

CHAPTER II.

Vanity Valiant.

"The witness is excused."

In the ripple that stirred across the court room at the examiner's abrupt conclusion, John Valiant, who had withstood that pitiless hail of questions, rose, bowed to him and slowly crossed the cleared space to his counsel. The chairman looked severely over his eye-glasses, with his gavel lifted; and a statuesque girl in the rear of the room, laid her delicately gloved hand on a companion's and smiled slowly without withdrawing her gaze, and with the faintest tint of color in her face.

Katharine Farge neither smiled nor flushed readily. Her calm was an index of her whole personality, integral, symmetrical, exquisitely perfect. The little group with whom she sat looked somewhat out of place in that mixed assemblage. Smartly groomed and palpably members of a set to whom John Valiant was a familiar, they had had only friendly nods and smiles for the young man at whom so many there had gazed with jaundiced eyes.

To the general public which read its daily newspaper perhaps none of the gilded set was better known than "Vanity Valiant." The new Panhard he drove was the smartest car on the avenue, and the collar on the white bulldog that pranced or dozed on its leather seat sported a diamond buckle. To the space-writers of the social columns, he had been a perennial inspiration. The patterns of his waistcoats, and the splendors of his latest bachelors' dinner at Sherry's—with such items the public had been kept sufficiently familiar. To it, he stood a perfect symbol of the elder ease and insolent display of inherited wealth. And the great majority of those who had found place in that roomy chamber to listen to the ugly tale of squandered millions, looked to him with a resentment that was sharpened by his apparent nonchalance.

Long before the closing session it had been clear that, as far as indictments were concerned, the investigation would be barren of result. Of individual criminality, flight and suicide had been confession, but more sweeping charges could not be brought home. The gilded fool had not brought himself into the embarrassing purview of the law.

* * * * * * * * *

The jostling crowd flocked out into the square, among them a fresh-faced girl on the arm of a gray-bearded man in black frock coat and picturesque broad-brimmed felt hat. She turned her eyes to his.

"So that," she said, "is John Valiant! I'd almost rather have missed Niagara Falls. I must write Shirley Dandridge about it. I'm so sorry I lost that picture of him that I cut out of the paper."

"I reckon he's not such a bad lot," said her uncle. He hailed a cab. "Grand Central Station," he directed, with a glance at his watch, "and be quick about it. We've just time to make our train."

* * * * * * * * *

Some hours later, in an inner office of a downtown sky-scraper, the newly-appointed receiver of the Valiant Corporation, a heavy, thick-set man with narrow eyes, sat beside a table on which lay a small black satchel with a padlock on its handle, whose contents—several bundles of crisp papers—he had been turning over in his heavy hands with a look of incredulous amazement. A sheet containing a mass of figures and memoranda lay among them.

The shock was still on his face when a knock came at the door, and a man entered. The newcomer was gray-haired, slightly stooped and lean-jowled, with a humorous expression on his lips. He glanced in surprise at the littered table.

"Fargo," said the man at the desk, "do you notice anything queer about me?"

His friend grinned. "No, Buck," he said judicially, "unless it's that necktie. It would step a Dutch clock."

"Hang the haberdashery! Read this—from young Valiant." He passed over a letter.

Fargo read. He looked up. "Securities aggregating three millions!" he said in a hushed voice. "Why, unless I've been misinformed, that represents practically all his private fortune."

The other nodded. "Turned over to the corporation with his resignation as a vice-president, and without a blessed string tied to 'em! What do you think of that?"

"Think! It's the most absolutely idiotic thing I ever met. Two weeks ago, before the investigation—* * * but now, when it's perfectly certain they can bring nothing home to him—" He paused. "Of course I suppose he owes the corporation, eh? But it won't be ten years before the receivers get dividends." And then, as the full import

Where the devil does he come in meanwhile?"

The receiver pursed his lips. "I knew his father," he said. "He had the same crazy quixotic streak."

He gathered the scattered documents and locked them carefully with the satchel in a safe. "Spectacular young ass!" he said explosively.

"I should say so!" agreed Fargo. "Do you know I used to be afraid my Katharine had a leaning toward him. But thank God, she's a sensible girl!"

* * * * * * * * *

Dusk had fallen that evening when John Valiant's Panhard turned into a cross-street and circled into the yawning mouth of his garage.

A little later, the bulldog at his heels, he ascended the steps of his club, where he lodged—he had disposed of his bachelor apartments a fortnight ago. The cavernous seats of the lounge were all occupied, but he did not pause as he strode through the hall. He took the little pile of letters the boy handed him at the desk and went slowly up the stairway.

He wandered into the deserted library and sat down, tossing the letters on the magazine-littered table. He had suddenly remembered that it was his twenty-fifth birthday.

In the reaction from the long strain he felt physically spent. He thought of what he had done that afternoon with a sense of satisfaction. A reversal of public judgment, in his own case, had not entered his head. He knew his world—its comfortable faculty of forgetting, and the multitude of sins that wealth may cover. To preserve at whatever personal cost the one noble monument his father's genius had reared, and to right the wrong that would cast its gloomy shadow on his name—that had been his only thought. What he had done would have been done no matter what the outcome of the investigation. But now, he told himself, no one could say the act had been wrung from him. That, he fancied, would have been his father's way.

He smiled—a slow smile of reminiscence—for there had come to him at that moment the dearest of all those memories—a play of his childhood.

He saw himself seated on a low stool, watching a funny old clock with a moon-face, whose smiling lips curved up like military mustachios, and wishing the lazy long hands would hurry. He saw himself stealing down a long, corridor to the door of a big room strewn with books and papers, that through some baleful and mysterious spell could not be made to open at all hours. When the hands pointed right, however, there was the "Open Sesame"—his own secret knock, two fierce twin raps, with one little lonesome one afterward—and this was unfailing. Safe inside, he saw himself standing on a big, polar-bear-skin, the door tight-locked against all comers, an expectant baby figure with his little hand clasped in his father's. The white rug was the magic entrance to the Never-Never Country, known only to those two.

He could hear his own shrill treble: "Wishing-House, Wishing-House, where are you?"

Then the deeper voice (quite unrecognizable as his father's) answering: "Here I am, Master; here I am!"

And instantly the room vanished and they were in the Never-Never Land, and before them reared the biggest house in the world, with a row of white pillars across its front a mile high.

John Valiant felt an odd beating of the heart and a tightening of the throat, for he saw a scene that never faded from his memory. It was the one hushed and horrible night, when dread things had been happening that he could not understand, when a big man with gold eye-glasses, who smelled of some curious sickish-sweet perfume, came and took him by the hand and led him into a room where his father lay in bed, very gray and quiet.

The white hand on the coverlet had beckoned to him and he had gone close up to the bed, standing very straight, his heart beating fast and hard.

"John!" the word had been almost a whisper, very tense and anxious, very distinct. "John, you're a little boy, and father is going away."

"To—to Wishing-House?"

The gray lips had smiled then, ever so little, and sadly. "No, John."

"Take me with you, father! Take me with you!"

His voice had trembled then, and he had had to gulp hard.

"Listen, John, for what I am saying is very important. You don't know what I mean now, but some time you will," The whisper had grown strained and frayed, but it was still distinct. "I can't go to the Never Never Land. But you may sometime. If you * * * if you do, and if you find Wishing-House, remember that the men who lived in it * * * before you and me * * * were gentlemen. Whatever else they were, they were always that. Be * * * like them, John. * * * will you?"

"Yes, father."

The old gentleman with the eye-glasses had come forward then, hastily.

"Good-night, father—"

He had wanted to kiss him, but a strange cool hush had settled on the room and his father seemed all at once to have fallen asleep. And he had gone out, so carefully, on tiptoe, wondering, and suddenly afraid.

CHAPTER III.

The Turn of the Page.

John Valiant stirred and laughed, a little self-consciously, for there had been drops on his face.

Presently he took a check-book from his pocket and began to figure on the stub, looking up with a wry smile. "To come down to brass tacks," he muttered, "when I've settled everything (thank heaven, I don't owe my tailor!) there will be a little matter of twenty-eight hundred odd dollars, a passe motor and my clothes between me and the bread-line!"

Everything else he had disposed of—everything but the four-footed comrade there at his feet. "But I'd not sell you, old chap," he said, softly; "not a single lick of your friendly pink tongue; not for a beastly hundred thousand!"

He withdrew his caressing hand and looked again at the check-stub. Twenty-eight hundred! He laughed bleakly. Why, he had spent more than that a month ago on a ball at Sherry's! This morning he had been rich; tonight he was poor!

What could he do? He could not remember a time when he had not had all that he wanted. He had never borrowed from a friend or been dunned by an importunate tradesman. And he had never tried to earn a dollar in his life; as to current methods of making a living, he was as ignorant as a Pueblo Indian.

He rose grimly and dragged his chair facing the window. The night was balmy and he looked down across the darker sea of roofs, barred like a gigantic checker-board by the shining lines of streets, to where the flashing electric signs of the theater district laid their wide swath of colored radiance. The manifold calls of the street and the buzz of trolleys made a dull tonal background, subdued and far-away.

DID NOT IMPRESS LANDLORD

Innkeeper Could Serve Excellent Luncheon, But Evidently Was Not of Literary Mind.

They are telling in Westchester a story about Richard Harding Davis and Governor Morris.

These two writers, it appears, were motoring the other day, and stopped at an inn for luncheon. The luncheon was excellent, and after it was over Mr. Davis went out to look over the car, leaving Mr. Morris alone. Mr. Morris, in good spirits from his fine meal, said genially to the landlord:

"Landlord, you'll be interested, perhaps, to know that my companion is Mr. Richard Harding Davis."

The landlord tried his best to look impressed, and succeeded.

"You didn't know, I suppose, that you've ten years before the mast," Mr. Davis remained behind to settle the bill. As he counted his change Mr. Davis in his turn said to the landlord:

"Landlord, my friend there is Governeur Morris."

Again the landlord looked impressed and puzzled.

"Morris? Morris?" he said. "The name sounds familiar. Meat like, ain't it, sir?"

Nature's Adjustment.

In the case of all fish which take care of their young, a curious adaptation of natural law to circumstances is found. Those which take the greatest pains and care in sheltering their offspring have the fewest eggs, perhaps less than one hundred at a lay while one of the other kind—species of fish which pay not the slightest attention to their young—produce hundreds of thousands, and even millions of eggs at a single lay.

YOUTH WAS A LITTLE BITTER

Uncle's Quite Natural Desire Did Not Seem to Him to Be Altogether Reasonable.

Howard is quite a spendthrift. His only living relative is an old uncle who is not; and there are other differences between Howard and his uncle, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. However, one day not long ago our young hero more or less diffidently approached his avuncular relative with the intimation that it would be a graceful thing for the old chap to loosen up.

"Young man," said the uncle, "you are a spendthrift. If I had money I would not give it to you. But I have no money. You seem to think I have a treasure hidden away somewhere. Get rid of that notion. I have saved up a sum large enough to bury me decently when I die, and that is all. Now, get out!"

A friend of Howard asked him a little later in the day why he looked so thoughtful.

"I was just wondering," he said, "where that old fellow got the idea that he ought to be buried decently."

SALTS IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS TROUBLE YOU

Eat Less Meat If Your Kidneys Aren't Acting Right or If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

Joy and Utility.

"Still have two cars?"

"Yes."

"I thought you intended to sell the older one."

"No. My son and his high school friends keep the old car busy."

"I see. You get the use of the new car yourself."

"No, I don't. It keeps the new car hustling to tow the old car home."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

NOTHING TO DO UNTIL TOMORROW

An exchange says: "It is easy to be an editor. To run a newspaper successfully a man has merely to be able to write poems, discuss tariff and money questions, umpire a baseball game, report a wedding, saw wood, describe a fire so that the readers will shed their wraps, shine at a dance, measure calico, abuse the liquor habit, test whiskey, subscribe to charity, go without meals, attack free silver, wear diamonds, invent advertisements, overlook scandal, appraise babies, delight pumpkin raisers, minister to the afflicted, lead the disgruntled, fight to a finish, set type, mold opinions, sweep out the office, speak at the prayer meeting, and stand in with every body. And in addition to the above essentials the poor editor has to print a paper once a week." —Blount County Journal.

MR. L. R. SAWYER.

Elsewhere appears the announcement of Mr. L. R. Sawyer for the office of Connty Commissioner from the first district. Mr. Sawyer is a resident of Beat 12 in the northern part of the county, and is a successful farmar and business man, and though he has never before aspired to serve his people in an official capacity, he has taken a lively interest in county affairs and is well known to a large number of our citizens as a young man of clean morals and unquestioned integrity. One of the questions often asked of a candidate in ascertaining his qualifications for the office he seeks, is, has he made a success of his own business and will he, if elected serve the interests of the county in a business-like manner? This question can be answered most assuredly in the affirmative in Mr. Sawyer's case; having made a success of his own business he will add new life to this important body and make the county a most capable official. He states that he is going to wage a vigorous campaign and is confident of being elected.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN GARNER

The death of the above named gentleman, which occurred at his home in Nocatee, Fla., last Saturday, will be received with sincere sorrow by his many friends in this county.

Mr. Garner had been a sufferer for many years with Bright's disease, coupled with a complication of diseases, and about six years ago removed with his family to Southern Florida, in the hope that the warm climate and balmy breezes would alleviate his suffering and that he would soon regain his former vigorous health. But the fatal malady had gained such a hold on his system his constitution was undermined, and he continued to grow weaker until on Saturday last he was relieved of his earthly pains and passed away.

Mr. Garner was well known to the people of Clanton and Chilton county, where he resided for many years, serving once as postmaster, and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. He was possessed of a jovial and kindly disposition and had a pleasant word for all whom he came in contact. He was a devoted father and an affectionate husband. The deceased was about 62 years of age, and is survived by a widow, one son and two daughters, all of whom reside in Florida.

CHILTON COUNTY HEALTH CONSERVATION

A meeting of far-reaching importance was held in Clanton on Saturday, Feb. 7th, in conjunction with the County Teachers Reading Circle. It was at this meeting that the first announcement of the move to put a trained nurse in the county to conserve the public health was made public.

A large per cent of the teachers of the county were present as were also many of the towns people and others to hear Dr. W. H. Sanders and Dr. Gragg, State and county health officers respectively. One of the principal speakers was Mrs. Thomas M. Owen, President General of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Southern Commercial Congress, who, after a very pleasing address outlining the work of the Auxiliary, and proceeded to organize a county branch.

Mary Carr Gibson, of Verbena, was chosen President, and Mrs. J. M. Horn, of Jemison, Vice President. The Secretary and Treasurer are to be chosen later from Clanton.

It should also be mentioned that one of the most pleasing features of the meeting was held in the Red Men's Hall, a courtesy extended by that order, and duly appreciated by all.

The first work of the County Auxillary will be to raise the remaining $500 necessary for salary and expenses of the county nurse, the other having been appropriated jointly by the County School Board and the Board of County Commissioners.

The work of the nurse will be directed by the Superintendent of Education, the County Health Officer and the Judge of Probate. Her work will be mostly with the school children, and teachers, teaching sanitation and school hygiene in and about school buildings, and suggesting to teacher or parent anything for the good of the child. She will also be at the call of any physician in the county for bedside nursing when it is necessary. We are confident that the remainder necessary to put this nurse in the field will be quickly contributed by the people of the county, thereby making her services available before the close of the present school year.

This splendid work is undertaken by the Rural Organization Service through its field agent, Mr. J. Sterling Moran, who resides at Thorsby.

GOOD MINSTREL SHOW

One of the best entertainments that has been given in Clanton for some time was that of Montevallo's Minstrels at the Lyric Theatre Saturday. There were ten members in the play, and it would be invidious to say that there was any particular star, so well did the entire troupe perform their parts. The play was replete with songs, jokes, etc., from start to finish and was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience. Following is the program rendered:

MR. W. Y. ATCHISON

In this issue will be found the announcement of Mr. W. Y. Atchison for re-election to the office of County Commissioner from the second district. Mr. Atchison has been a member of the Board of Commissioners since May, 1912, having been appointed by Governor O'Neal to serve the unexpired term of the late E. J. Hayes, and has faithfully discharged the duties of the office with credit to himself and the county. The duties of the Commissioners' are to administer the county's finances in an economical and business-like way, and to see to the roads and bridges of the county being kept in repair. Mr. Atchison's services on the Board has rendered him thoroughly familiar with the county needs in this regard, and if nominated and elected he will continue to serve the county as he has in the past—faithfully and well. He is a native Chiltonian and a democrat of the old school.

MR. KILLGORE AND THE SHERIFF'S RACE

Editor Press:

Allow me a few words to the voters and much oblige, etc.

Gentlemen:—I have been solicited by some of my best friends, both democrats and republicans, to enter the race for Sheriff, but, so far, I have declined.

I am not seeking any office, but I have to say here and now that I had rather serve my friends than my foes, regardless of the consequences. I have said that I would never ask for the nomination for another office; I stand on my word. Some of my friends say they are going to put me out any way. I do not know whether they will or not, but, I do know that I would rather serve a friend than a foe regardless of the results.

Now, gentlemen, all of you that are familiar with the stand I have taken know me. I will say this, that I would not give up my principles for no office, friend or party. So it is up to my friends and not my foes as to what is done with this matter. With best regards, I am yours to serve friends and the best interests of the public.

Means Killgore.

HON. WM. B. CRAIG

Last week a large number of representative citizens of the Fourth Congressional District met in Selma for the purpose of putting out a candidate in opposition to Hon. F. L. Blackmon. This delegation was composed of citizens from all over the district, in every walk of life, business men, merchants, professional men and farmers. An urgent demand was made upon Hon. Wm. B. Craig to enter the race, but he at first refused on account of his law practice. But after considering the matter he thought it was his duty to yield to their request, hence his announcement. Mr. Craig is well remembered by the people of this district, succeeding Hon. S. J. Bowie, he served four years in congress, voluntarily retiring at the end of his second term, and made a splendid representative. During his incumbency he made frequent visits through the district, and was ever alive to his constituents' interests. Mr. Craig is an able lawyer, a good citizen and will make an ideal congressman.

CAPTAIN KOLB COMING TO CHILTON COUNTY

A letter was received by Capt. W. J. Bethune, Mountain Creek, from Capt. Reuben F. The Captain, in the closing paragraph of his letter says: "I look forward to this visit with much pleasure, especially so as it will afford me the opportunity of meeting, once more, "the old soldier boys" who are now at the Home."

AN ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENT.

One of the most beautiful and enjoyable social entertainments of the season was the [illegible] given by Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] of the amateur minstrel company of Montevallo.

The attractive home whose hospitable doors are ever open to their friends, was never more beautiful than on this occasion.

The living room, parlor and dining room were elaborately decorated with palms, ferns and carnations; the scheme of pink and white being carried out in every detail.

The table in the dining room was spread with cluny lace over pink satin, the center piece being a handsome cut glass vase filled with pink and white carnations.

From an attractively appointed table, fruit punch was served by Misses Willie Bell Sartor and Kathleen Mullins.

Later in the evening a delicious salad course was served.

Those who assisted in receiving the guests were Misses Margaret Watson and Lucile Gross. The guests were: Miss Mamie Maroney, Miss Ella Peters, Mrs. Lewis Campbell, Mrs. B. Reid and Mrs. H. D. MR. JNO. W. STANFIELD

Among our new announcements this week is the name of John W. Stanfield for Representative in the next Legislature. The next general assembly of Alabama will be one of the most important ever held in this State. Regulation of public service corporations, tax reforms and other important measures will have the attention of the Legislature, and it behooves the the people of Chilton to send a man who will be on the alert to our best interests and will render the greatest good to the greatest number. Aside from the legislation which will effect the State as a whole, there will be local measures which the people of this county will be interested in, and our representative should be possessed with the ability and imbued with the purpose of promoting his constituency's best interests. Mr. Stanfield has been a resident of Chilton many years, and the long list of representative citizens appended to his announcement attests the esteem in which he is held by the people of his community—those who have known him for years—and it goes without saying that should he be chosen Chilton's interests in the next law-making body will be well taken care of.

CARD FROM MR. JONES

To the People of Chilton County

I hope you will elect me to the office of Sheriff. I have tried all the time to do my full duty to whatever interest I have served, and I promise you that if I am elected to the office to which I aspire I shall give it my full time and attention, and that I will do my whole duty to the best of my ability.

Respectfully,
B. E. JONES.

J. SMITH DAMRON.

THE POTTER CRAFTSMAN

J. Smith Damron carries with him for his lecture an old fashioned potter's kick wheel. Laying aside his coat and vest, he takes a ball of clay and places it upon the potter's wheel, which he operates with his foot by means of a treadle. He also makes [illegible] stories and draws important lessons for everyday life.

"TWOULD BE SWEET TO DIE"

Thought This Lady, While Undergoing Frightful Experience, Here Told First Time.

Linn, W. Va.—"There is no doubt but that my life was saved by the use of Cardui, the woman's tonic," says Mrs. Abbie Shackleford, of this town. "Before using Cardui, I was very bad off—would have nervous and shaking spells through my entire body, terrible sick headaches, and would find myself gasping for breath. I often thought during those trying times that it would be sweet to die.

I took many different medicines and treatments, but they did me no good. I got weaker and weaker every day.

Finally, I decided to try Cardui and got two bottles. I was certainly greatly surprised to note the quick change for the better, after taking only one-third of the first bottle. The shaky spells and sick headache have entirely disappeared. Can now walk one mile to church and back, and not feel tired.

Cardui also proved a blessing to my oldest daughter. Everyone thought she had appendicitis, on account of a bad pain in her side, but Cardui brought her back to good health.

I will never be without Cardui in the house."

Cardui will surely do for you, what it has done for so many thousands of other women. It will help you.

TEMPERANCE DAY IN ALABAMA MARCH 6

SUPERINTENDENT OF EDUCATION WILLIAM F. FEAGIN ISSUES PROCLAMATION.

SING TEMPERANCE SONGS

Teachers Will Attempt to Show Pupils the Effect of Strong Drink.

Birmingham. — Temperance day in Alabama is March 6. On this day the children in the public schools of the State will be instructed as to the evils of strong drink. Temperance songs will be sung in the schools and the teachers will in every way possible attempt to show the pupils the effect of strong drink, not only on the drinker alone, but on his immediate family and his associates.

Superintendent of Education William F. Feagin has issued the following proclamation anent the day:

"In keeping with the spirit and purpose of an act entitled 'To Educate the Children of Alabama On the Evil of Intemperance,' section 6 of which reads as follows: 'That there shall be one day in each scholastic term of the public schools set apart to be known as Temperance day, when suitable programme shall be prepared to the end that the children of Alabama may be taught the evils of intemperance' I have designated Friday, March 6, 1914, as Temperance day for the current scholastic year."

FIGHT ON IN EIGHT DISTRICTS

Many Candidates in Field—Lively Interest Manifested in Each District.

Birmingham.—At the present time Congressman J. Thomas Heflin is the only Alabama congressman who is not confronted with a fight to retain his seat. Three congressmen are not running for re-election, but there is a fight in every district with the exception of the Fifth, that is represented by Mr. Heflin. So far there has not been any talk of opposition to Mr. Heflin.

Former Congressman William B. Craig of Selma, who represented the Fourth district in Congress for two terms, has announced his candidacy in opposition to Congressman Fred L. Blackmon.

In the First district Oscar Gray of Choctaw, former solicitor of the First circuit, is opposing Congressman G. W. Taylor. In the Second district Woodford Mabry is opposing Congressman Hugh Dent. In the Third district Henry B. Steagall is opposing Henry D. Clayton. In the Sixth there is a battle between William B. Bankhead and W. B. Oliver. In the Seventh district Capt. L. P. Rainey is opposing Congressman John L. Burnett. In the Eighth three candidates have announced following the retirement of Congressman William Richardson. The candidates are Judge E. B. Almon of Colbert, W. W. Callahan of Morgan and Judge Ballentine of Madison.

The candidates in the Ninth district are Nathan L. Miller, Jere C. King, Geo. Huddleston and Geo. W. Darden.

CASE TO SUPREME COURT.

Suit One of Six Growing Out of Knight-Yancey Cotton Failure.

Decatur.—Seeking to determine whether or not the Louisville and Nashville railroad is due the National Park Bank of New York the sum of $139,000 for a loss resulting from the failure of the Knight-Yancey Cotton company of Decatur several years ago, the case of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company vs. the National Park Bank, has been carried to the supreme court from the Morgan county law and equity court, and taken under advisement by the court.

Judgment for $139,000 was rendered by a jury in the lower court and the railroad appealed. The suit is one of 36 pending against the railroad, and involves a claim of $3,500,000. Thirty-five of the cases are in the federal courts.

DALLAS COUNTY RAISING CATTLE

Large Number of Thoroughbreds Being Augmented.

Selma.—Dallas county and Central Alabama is fast developing into one of the greatest cattle growing sections of Alabama and the farmers of the county are improving and increasing their herds as rapidly as possible. On the different farms of the county there are hundreds of blooded and registered cattle and to this number other blooded and registered cattle is being added each week.

20,000 Bushels Potatoes Destroyed.

Mobile.—Information was received of a fire at Dawes, Mobile county, which resulted in $15,000 loss. An immense sweet potato dry kiln with 20,000 bushels of sweet potatoes was destroyed. The kiln was the largest in the south and the only one in this section. It was valued at $5,000 and insured. It is owned by T. J. Sunkett. The potatoes lost were jointly owned by Williams T. Cochran of Mobile and [illegible] and other residents of Dawes. Mr. Cochran places his loss at nearly $10,000.

GRANTED EXTENSION OF TIME.

2 1-2 Cent Passenger Rate Will Not Be Effective Until March.

Montgomery.—Application of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad company for an extension of the effective date of an order of the railroad commission for the establishment of a 2 1-2 cents passenger rate on the company's lines has been granted, thereby making the order of the commission effective early in March.

The railroad company applied for an extension in order that three federal judges might first pass upon the question. The company has applied to Federal Judge W. I. Grubb of Birmingham to grant an appeal to be prosecuted before three judges, and this hearing will probably be had before the order becomes effective.

The Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis case is analagous to the other rate cases decided by the commission, and the same plan has been adopted in all cases. With the exception of this railroad, the 2 1-2 cents passenger rate is now in effect on every line in the state doing interstate business.

CITIES MAY MERGE.

Steps for Consolidation of Alabama City and Attalla.

Gadsden.—Definite steps looking to the consolidation of Alabama City and Attalla were taken at the city hall in Attalla, when citizens of the two towns met. A resolution was adopted asking Mayor Russell of Attalla to appoint two men to serve on a commission with him to meet a similar commission from Alabama City. This commission will devise plans for accomplishing the amalgamation. It is probable that the voters of Alabama City will be given the opportunity to decide the question of whether they shall be annexed to Attalla. There is little opposition to the plan in either city.

SUNDAY SERVICE ON N. C. & ST. L.

Improved Service on Gadsden-Guntersville Branch.

The new train will leave Gadsden at 8:25 o'clock in the morning, arriving at Guntersville at 10:25 o'clock. The returning train will leave Guntersville at 4:10 o'clock, and arrive in Gadsden at 6 o'clock. The new service comes after many months of litigation between the State railroad commission and the road.

His Grievance.

The court of appeal has finally decided against Mr. George Gray, the well-known actor, in the action brought against him by Miss Marie Corelli for infringing the copyright of her novel, "Temporal Power," in his sketch, "The People's King."

If Miss Corelli has a large circle of readers who admire her books, there is also a number of people who do not. Two men belonging to the opposing camps, both well-known journalists, were discussing her the other day.

"What I like about Miss Corelli," said the one who admired the authoress, "is that she is so—so alive!"

"Yes, that's what I object to!" retorted the other.—Pearson's Weekly.

BIG EATERS HAVE BAD KIDNEYS AND BACKACHE

Take a Glass of Salts at Once If Your Back Is Hurting or Kidneys and Bladder Trouble You.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

Says Electricity Aids Digestion.

Professor Bergonie of Bordeaux and Professor Arsonval of Paris announce that currents of electricity of three amperes and from 1,000 to 1,500 volts passed through the body of a man enable him to digest 70 per cent. of the food which ordinarily passes away undigested.

ISSUES CALL UPON ALABAMA BANKS

SUPERINTENDENT WALKER ASKS FOR ASSESSMENTS — TOTAL FOR YEAR IS $9,085.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Call upon Alabama banks for their annual assessments, which are paid to help defray the expenses, has been issued by Alex E. Walker, State superintendent. The total assessments for the year is $9,085. They are due April 1. After that day a penalty of $5 a day will be exacted. Assessments are based on capital stock, surplus and undivided profits.

Allen Claims Fees Are Due Him.

Tax Commissioner J. V. Allen of Jefferson county has intimated that he will apply for a writ of mandamus to compel C. Brooks Smith, State auditor, to issue his warrant for $438 in payment of fees which Mr. Allen claims to be due him on certain raises in Jefferson county.

Auditor Smith has refused payment on the ground that the raises in question were made by the State tax commission and that a payment of Mr. Allen would mean double remuneration for the performance of the same duty.

The raises in dispute were made by Mr. Allen, but the board of revenue refused to accept them and the tax commission made the same raises later. Mr. Allen obtained a judgment against Jefferson county for $438 for fees, which he claimed were due by the county.

Stay of Execution Granted.

Governor O'Neal granted a stay of execution to Alex Waldrop, condemned wife murderer of Anniston, who was sentenced to be hanged Feb. 6. The death sentence was suspended until midnight of February 19. The stay was granted that the govornor might make an investigation of the evidence in the case.

The governor has received many telegrams requesting the death sentence of Waldrop be commuted to life imprisonment. Waldrop was said to have killed his wife with a razor while he was in a drunken condition. Both were cotton mill employes.

Brooks Gets Another Trial.

Percy Brooks, a well-known man of Madison county, will get a new trial on an indictment charging him with assaulting a school teacher a year ago. He was convicted and sentenced to twenty years imprisonment. The supreme court recently reversed and remanded the case and later denied the State's application for rehearing.

The supreme court settled finally the squabble between Judge Thomas Wert, of the Morgan law and equity court and the judge of the Eighth judicial circuit in denying the State's application to reinstate its application for a rehearing of a petition for a writ of prohibition preventing the latter judge from taking jurisdiction of an application for habeas corpus entered by Charles Silberman, of Decatur, after he had been ordered to jail for contempt by Judge West, for violating an injunction against a liquor nuisance.

Fransom Named Major.

Captain Paul O. Fransom, of the Second Regiment, A. N. G., was elected major of that regiment in a recent election, according to announcement from the office of General Joseph B. Scully, adjutant general. He defeated Major George O. Dickey by a vote of twenty to fourteen. Major Dickey had served as major since 1908. Captain Fransom is commanding officer of the Montgomery Blues.

Reward for Murderer.

The governor has offered a reward of $100 for the arrest of Millard Carpenter, a negro, who is alleged to have umrdered John T. Camp, in Birmingham several months ago.

Taxable Bonds Not Reported.

In the annual itemized account of the State tax commission it is shown that Talladega county is paying taxes on bonds valued at $101,000, while Jefferson county is paying on bonds valued at $1,000. Mobile county pays on bonds valued at $21,350 and Montgomery has not reported a single taxable bond. Bonds reported to the State tax commission as being subject to taxation are valued at $256,558, although it is practically certain that citizens of Alabama own several million dollars' worth of bonds.

No Revision of Appellate Court.

The supreme court will not revise any action of the court of appeals in its finding of the facts. The higher tribunal holds supervisory powers only on questions of law, and not of fact. This was the decision of the court in an opinion by Justice DeGraffenreid. The ruling was made in the case of Ella Sheaf, who obtained judgments on notes in the Gadsden city court. The case was reversed by the court of appeals, whereupon the appellee applied to the supreme court to review the case.

Union Soldier Gets Alabama Pension.

After drawing a pension from the State of Alabama for a period of ten years, L. S. Burcham, of Colbert county, has discovered that he fought in the Union Army during the War Between the States and should have been drawing a Federal pension, according to H. Y. Brooke, examiner of public accounts, who has been in Washington investigating the war records of the State pensioners.

Burcham made application to the Colbert county pension board and affirmed that he had fought in the war with Spencer's regiment.

He was placed on the pension rolls of the State and drew his pension for ten years.

When Examiner Brooke went to Washington he discovered that Spencer's regiment was the only regiment organized in Alabama that fought on the Union side during the war.

Burcham was a member of Company A of that regiment and is probably entitled to a pension from the Federal government. In this case he would draw a much larger sum each qurter.

Examiner Brooke declares that he believes the veteran made his mistake honestly.

Madison Jurist to Face Impeachment.

W. T. Lawler of Huntsville, probate judge of Madison county, must be tried before a court of impeachment on two charges—wilful neglect of duty and corruption in office. An order to this effect was issued by the supreme court. The court also decided to have the evidence in the case taken by an attorney, to be selected by the counsel for the two sides. Immediately after the court issued its order, Attorney General obert C. Brickell and Judge Paul Speake, attorney for the defense, selected Addison White, a prominent young attorney of Huntsville, to take the testimony. The trial has been set for April 10.

The court's ruling in the Lawler case was in answer to certain demurrers to the attorney general's charges. The court sustained the demurrer to the charge that Judge Lawler had been incompetent, but overruled the demurrers relating to neglect of duty and corruption in office.

Union Station at Troy.

Railroad commission issued an order approving plans for a union passenger station at Troy, submitted by the Atlantic Coast Line and the Central of Georgia Railroad companies. The plans submitted by the two companies were approved with the exception that the commission directed that an umbrella shed be constructed between the tracks of the Atlantic Coast Line and the Central of Georgia railway, extending from Walnut to Academy street

Nine Fertilizer Inspectors at Work.

Nine fertilizer inspectors of the State department of agriculture and industries began their labors, and during the next three months will be busy in all parts of the State in the performance of their duties.

The inspectors will collect samples of fertilizer for the purpose of having them analyzed, and will see that the law is carried out with reference to tags and other matters pertaining to the selling of fertilizer.

Appointments Made.

J. S. Freeman, of Jasper, was appointed tax commissioner of Walker county. The appointment was made by John S. Mooring, chairman of the State tax commission, and approved by Governor O'Neal. Archie McDowell was appointed jury commissioner of Madison. His home is at Huntsville. E. C. Schussler, of LaFayette, was named game warden of Chambers county, succeeding F. M. McCoy, resigned.

To Begin Work on Road.

First construction work on the Birmingham-Montgomery highway will begin in Chilton county this spring, according to W. S. Keller, State highway engineer. Active work will begin toward raising $100,000 within a few months, and this money will go toward the Birmingham-Montgomery highway. Mr. Keller is president of the association.

State Wants to Help.

R. P. Boyd, assistant State highway engineer, went to Evergreen to urge the commissioners of Conecuh county to take advantage of the State aid road fund next year. He will go to Luverne to put the same proposition before the Crenshaw county commissioners.

Franklin County Man Paroled.

Governor O'Neal paroled Lucian Harris, a white man of Franklin county, sentenced to a five-year term on a charge of manslaughter. Harris has served about six months of his term. The parole was recommended by the trial judge and solicitor. Harris was convicted of the murder of Zophas Jackson, of Red Bay. He claimed that he shot the man in defense of his home and was tried three times before being convicted, the juries failing to reach an agreement in his first two trials.

Rules for Drawing Rooms.

Persons travelling alone will find it rather expensive to ride in drawing rooms after March 1. Railroads in the territory have issued the ultimatum that there must be at least two railroad tickets shown by the occupant of a drawing room and one and one-half full fares paid by a person using a compartment exclusively. This will be unpleasant news to bachelors and spinsters. For them a drawing room means double railroad fare, but newly-weds will encounter no difficulties.

His Table Manners.

"The charity worker," says one of them, "is always learning. We can learn much from the destitute. Thus, apropos of the affectation of some of our table etiquette, I once heard a ragged little chap at a school treat say, as he held a chicken leg in one fist and a hot potato in the other:

"The trouble about table manners is that they was invented by people who was never very hungry."

Amusing Truth.

The late Frank Simmons, the famous American sculptor who recently died in Rome, was an exponent of the frank, naturalistic method.

"How much more amusing the true is than the ideal," he said one day in his studio to a correspondent. "Take the case of the little girl.

"'My dear,' the little girl's mother said, 'don't you think you're getting too old to play with boys?'

"The little girl frowned in scornful astonishment.

"'Why, no, mamma!' she cried impatiently. 'The older I get the better I like 'em.'"

GAS, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" settles sour, gassy stomachs in five minutes—Time it!

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any dealer and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.—Adv.

Myor Mitchel of New York was praising a commuter who, by continual complaints, had improved the railway service of his district.

He smiled and ended:

A DOCTOR'S GRATEFUL TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. C. H. Lee, Newcastle, Pa., writes: "About 18 months ago eczema broke out in my right ankle and spread to my knee. The itching was intense. In three or four months it went to the left ankle and leg. I got no relief until six months ago, when I tried EX-ZEMA-FO. The first bottle allayed the itching, with the second bottle, to my delight, improvement began and I am now about well. In Mr. F. The appearance of hardware is deceiving, most articles of hardware look alike; a poor saw looks very much like a good saw, a poor hammer looks very much like a good one. How can you tell what is of good quality and what is not? By the store which sells itto you. "Water seeks its level." A reliable hardware man will never sell you unreliable hardware. We want to get the news to all old people about Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion, a remarkable new food-medicine which we firmly believe is the best remedy ever made to overcome the weakening, debilitating effects of increasing old age. It helps to rebuild wasted tissues, strengthen the nerves, and give new energy and a lively feeling to the body. It contains no alcohol or dangerous drug. It may not make you feel better for a few days, but if you do not feel much better and stronger before you have taken a quarter as much as you have of other medicines that have not helped you, we will gladly give back your money.

You who are weak and run-down—you who are often troubled by various cold weather ailments, use Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion to get and keep well and strong. It is a sensible, pleasant-tasting aid to renewed strength, better spirits, glowing health. If it doesn't help you, come and tell us and we will give back your money without a word. Mr. W. H. Wright is having erected a pretty residence on the corner of 9th street and 3rd ave.

The cement blocks have been removed from the front of the Alred Drug Co's building and wil be replaced with pressed brick and a solid plate glass front, which will add greatly to the appearance of their commodious quarters.

A man named Brown passed through Clanton Friday last traveling in a buggy drawn by eight dogs and wolves. He was from far away Alaska, and was en route to Washington on a wager of $10,000.00. The canies, geared up like horses, presented quite a novel and interesting spectacle.

WASHINGTON AS A PRACTICAL JOKER

POSTERITY sees a stiff, formal picture of Washington standing in the bow of a boat crossing the Delaware amid floating blocks of ice on that memorable Christmas night, to fight the battle which turned the tide of the revolution in the right direction. But no painter could delineate the heroism of the actual scene. His men were ragged—half naked. Besides the running ice in the river, there was a blinding blizzard, and it was so bitter cold that the chief loss on the American side was of the men who, though inured to pioneer hardships, froze to death that awful night.

Did General Washington stand in his boat in that dangerous current during a driving storm and stare pompously at the opposite shore? Not he. Instead of that, he "sat tight" and cajoled the men, using every device that might make them forget their terrible situation; even telling them a facetious story, which, coming from him, startled them, set their blood tingling and made them oblivious to the cold and dangers around them. That was the grandest deed in the military stratagem which made Frederick the Great of Prussia, and, indeed, the whole world, wonder at the genius of Washington.

Nearly every one knows the outside of the story of the siege of Boston by the new commander-in-chief, who had come to the continental congress as a wealthy Virginia colonel, and his nondescript crowd of raw recruits, wholly unused not only to military discipline, but even to military forms. But few know of the transcendent bluff General Washington had to put up when he discovered that there were but a few rounds of gunpowder in the possession of the whole American army, while the British were amply supplied with ammunition and might sally forth any hour against the American "irregulars."

"Some one had blundered." Many a commander would have shown up the improvident officers who had that matter in charge and peevishly thrown up the command as ridiculously impossible. But General Washington did not tell his most trusted officers of the excruciating dilemma he found himself in. He knew the awful secret would spread if known to a few, and the great cause of justice might be lost. He began quietly to scour the country for gunpowder. He soon found that the nearest place at which any quantity could be had was in a magazine on the island of Bermuda. To get that required a secret expedition, much hazard and many weeks; but Washington's nerve was equal to the fearful strain.

During that long, tense interval the American troops were working away upon the fortifications, preparing for a grand attack. Meanwhile the young commander-in-chief was entertaining hospitably at his headquarters, the Craige mansion, now best known as "Longfellow's Home," in Cambridge. As a pleasant diversion, "Lady" Washington, then one of the wealthiest women in America, came to visit the general, and all the countryside was agog over her coach-and-four with six black postilions in white and scarlet livery. Even the British, cooped up in Boston, were impressed by the resources and apparent confidence of the American generalissimo.

While one expedition was gone to Bermuda for powder, General Knox, with a small force, succeeded in bringing a number of cannon several hundred miles on ox sleds in midwinter from Fort Ticonderoga. In those "times that tried men's souls" it was Washington's iron nerve, supported by his broad sense of humor, sometimes scintillating with a radiance worthy of a Franklin or a Lincoln, which saved the day. This was only one of many occasions on which Washington had to fight out the revolution alone.

A friend of Lincoln's once said of him, "The president's laugh is his life-preserver." This was truer of Washington than any one seems to have realized in a day when strict gravity without levity, was expected of public characters. To laugh or to see the humorous side of an incident was considered the sign of a frivolous disposition.

Washington's early biographers were solemn men. To have told in their books how much their hero laughed would have been, in their opinion, wantonly exposing his weakness to public gaze. Men like "Parson" Weems, renegade preacher and tramp fiddler though he was, had been brought up to think that laughing was "worse than wicked—it was vulgar!" In straining to make their hero appear to have been a demigod, those pedantic biographers related not what George Washington really did, but what they imagined such a boy or man ought to have done under given conditions.

Washington would have laughed heartily at Weems' hatchet-and-cherry-tree story if he had ever heard it—which he never did, for it was not invented till a later edition of the erring rector's juvenile history, six years after Washington's death. Yet the real hero of the cherry-tree fiction would have found it the occasion of gravity as well as mirth. In the stilted story of "Little George and His Pa," Weems was only carrying out the idea of his time; to tell not what the small boy actually did, but what the consummate little prig he conceived little George Washington to have been would have done if he had cut down his father's favorite cherry tree.

If little George Washington had been the insufferable little prig described by Mr. Weems, his half-brothers would not have loved him better than their own brothers, or their own children, for that matter. His early life was fuller of exciting experiences than any fiction. Yet the life of young Washington is yet to be told as an adventure story. Even in his quaint little diaries he early discloses a lively sense of humor—savage humor sometimes, but broad and boyish. He showed this by telling only the jokes against himself. When he was a lad of sixteen he led a surveying party to lay out the lands of his old friend, Lord Fairfax, in the wilderness of the Shenandoah. Here is one of his own experiences as a "tenderfoot," recorded on Tuesday, March 15, 1747-8:

"We got our Suppers & was lighted into a Room, and I, not being so good a Woodsman as ye rest of my company, stripped myself very orderly, & went into ye Bed, as they called it, when to my surprise I found it to be nothing but a little straw—matted together without sheets or anything else but one threadbare blanket, with double its weight of Vermin, such as Lice, Fleas, &c.

"I was glad to get up (as soon as ye light was carried from us) I put on my Clothes and lay as my Companions. Had we not been very tired, I am sure we should not have slept much that night."

The next night he related that they "had a good dinner & a good Feather Bed, which was a very agreeable regale."

In describing an Indian war dance, he went on, "Some liquor elevating their Spirits put them in ye Humor of Dauncing. Ye best Dauncer jumped about ye ring in a most comicle Manner!"

Others of that wilderness gang told a story of the boy surveyor which he was too modest to relate about himself—how young George turned the tables on Big Bear, the wily chief, who was in the habit of holding out his sinewy hand with seeming friendly intent and saying, Indian fashion, "How?" Woe to the unsuspecting white man whose hand Big Bear seized in his terrible grasp, while he laughed in savage glee at the paleface's anguished contortions.

Young Washington had been warned in time. He had a huge, strong hand of his own and knew a trick or two that he thought he would like to try on that Indian's wiry claw if he could just get the right hold. His chance came soon enough for Big Bear, who presented a seemingly amicable paw with an innocent "How?"

The young surveyor seized the Indian's hand with such friendly enthusiasm that Big Bear did an agonizing little dance "in a very comical manner," while the spectators, both white and red, stood by and shouted with glee to see the cruel savage caught in his own trap. Never again did Big Bear show such solicitude for the health of George Washington.

At the age of twenty George was the chosen envoy to carry a "notice to quit" from the governor of Virginia to the French commander encamped in the Ohio region. He wrote in his journal of that expedition concerning the supper given him by the French and Indians at the fort at Venango:

"The wine, as they dosed themselves pretty plentifully with it, soon banished the restraint which at first appeared in the conversation, and gave a license to their tongues to reveal their sentiments more freely. They told me that it was their absolute design to take possession of the Ohio—and by G—— they would do it!"

At the French fort, while awaiting the commandant's reply, the young envoy from Virginia played a diplomatic game for the friendship of the Indians. When the French plied the Indians with liquor, young Washington promised them guns; and the game of diplomacy, seasoned with savage sauce, went on between the grizzled chevalier, old in the arts of war and duplicity, and the young Virginia major, who possessed common sense and humor withal.

After the awful slaughter of Fort Duquesne, into which he had rushed from a bed of fever, in a vain attempt to save Braddock and his army, Major Washington was left in command of the scattered forces. At this time he wrote to his brother "Jack" a letter, which at least suggests Mark Twain's attitude toward the "grossly exaggerated" story of his own death:

"Forth Cumberland, 18 July, 1755.

"Dear Brother: As I have heard, since my arrival at this place, a circumstantial account of my death and dying speech, I take this early opportunity of contradicting the first, and of assuring you that I have not as yet composed the latter.

But by the all-powerful dispensations of Providence I have been protected beyond all human probability and expectation, for I had four bullets through my coat and two horses shot under me, yet escaped unhurt, altho' death was leveling my companions on every side of me!

"We have been most scandalously beaten by a trifling body of men, but fatigue and want of time will prevent me from giving you the details, until I have the happiness of seeing you at Mount Vernon.

GEORGE."

War is not supposed to develop the latent sense of humor in a commanding general, but Washington's wit never forsook him. His successful stratagems were little more than practical jokes raised to the highest power. They always "worked," and then he waited, laughing in his military sleeve, while his fat-witted enemies tried to play his own tricks back on him. Even in his retreats and escapes from the British—as at Long Island and before Princeton—he laughed and kicked up nimble heels in the face of the pursuing enemy.

It was while his headquarters were in Jersey that Washington perpetrated the great Jersey joke still perpetuated by so many millions. He told an English traveler named Weld that he "was never so much annoyed by mosquitoes, for they used to bite through the thickest boot."

When the war was over the victorious commander entertained the vanquished general, Lord Cornwallis, at dinner, with some of the leaders among the French allies. Washington presided. In calling for toasts, Cornwallis, with an obliviousness of the changed conditions that was truly English, proposed "The King of England" as a subject for high praise.

The other guests were in consternation. Would the presiding genius, on whose very head King George had set a price, resent this as an insult?

"The King of England," announced the toastmaster general, raising his glass. The guests gazed at him, transfixed with astonishment.

"Long may he," continued Washington. "—Long may he stay there!"

He pronounced the last two words in a stage whisper, with a shrug and a rueful grimace which made all the company, including Lord Cornwallis, who now saw his mistake, applaud with hearty laughter; and Washington's ready humor had prevented a disagreeable complication.

After the Revolution, Washington was permitted the long-coveted happiness of living peacefully under his "own vine and figtree," as he called it hundreds of times in as many letters. It is a great mistake to think that his life at Mount Vernon was either stale or stilted. Nelly Custis, his adopted daughter, is authority for the statement that retired general was always full of gayety and good spirits, surrounding himself with young people's company, enjoying their lively conversation, "particularly the jokes," as he once said. Nelly went so far as to claim that she found no one quite so willing to keep pace with her own extravagant spirits as her dear, delightful old foster father.

How Washington did enjoy his home when he was finally permitted to stay there! Mount Vernon was a Mecca for pilgrims from all over the world. He once wrote to Tobias Lear, "Unless some one pops in unexpectedly Mrs. Washington and myself will do what I believe has not within the last 20 years been done by us—that is, to sit down to dinner by ourselves!"

MOTHER! LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Low Suspicion.

"Twobble is a young man of ingratiating manners."

"So he is. I'll bet he never pays his board bill promptly."

IN MISERY WITH ECZEMA

Franklinton, La.—"About four years ago my face broke out in little red pimples. At first the eczema did not bother, but finally the pimples began itching and burning and then there came little raised places. I suffered untold misery. I scratched them until they bled and I could not sleep at night. I was ashamed of my face and I could not bear to touch it.

"I tried different remedies without result until I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in six weeks they completely cured my face. That was nine months ago, and no sign has appeared since." (Signed) Mrs. Leola Stennett, Dec. 14, 1912.

From Many, One.

"This is our most valuable fowl," said the amateur hen farmer.

"A fine bird," remarked the visitor, trying to look wise.

"Yes, indeed. We have named her E Pluribus Unum."

"Why the name?" the visitor questioned.

"She came from the only egg that hatched of 50 in the incubator."

Perpetual Anecdote.

When Oliver Goldsmith was a youth some young people at a gathering were amusing themselves by trying to see who could make the ugliest face. Many extravagant facial contortions were on display.

At the conclusion, the master of ceremonies stepped up to Goldsmith and said: "Sir, I think you have won the prize."

"Oh," responded the poet, "I wasn't playing."

This incident also happened to Frederick the Great, Dean Swift, William the silent, Louis XIV., Mr. Pepys, Ivan the Terrible, Julius Caesar, Socrates and Attila the Hun.—Kansas City Journal.

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

To be outside! All that light and color and comfort and pleasure would hum and sparkle on just the same, though he was no longer within the circle of its effulgence—slaving perhaps, he thought with a twisted smile, at some tawdry occupation that called for no experience, to pay for a meal in some second-rate restaurant and a pallet in some shabby-genteel, hall bedroom, till his clothes were replaced by ill-fitting "hand-me-downs"—till by wretched gradations he arrived finally at the status of the dime seat in the gallery and five-cent cigars!

There was one way back. It lay through the hackneyed gateway of marriage. Youth, comeliness and fine linen, in the world he knew, were a fair exchange for wealth any day. "Cutlet for cutlet"—the satiric phrase ran through his mind. Why not? Others did so. And as for himself, it perhaps need be no question of plain and spinstered millions—there was Katharine Fargo!

In his heart John Valiant was aware, by those subtle signs which men and women alike distinguish, that while Katharine Fargo loved first and foremost her own wonderful person, he had been an easy second in her regard.

John Valiant looked down at the bulldog squatted on the floor, his eyes shining in the dimness. A little hot ripple had run over him. "Not on your life, Chum!" he said. "No shameless barter! There must be other things besides money and social position in this doddering old world, after all! We're going to begin something for ourselves, if it's only raising cabbages! And we're going to stand it without any baby-aching—the nurse never held our noses when we took our castor-oil!"

It was folded down, that old bright page. Finis had been written to the rose-colored chapter. And even as he told himself, he was conscious of a new rugged something that had been slowly dawning within him, a sense of courage, even of zest, and a furious hatred of the self-pity that had wrenched him even for a moment.

He turned from the window, picked up his letters, and followed by the dog, went slowly up another flight to his room.

* * * * * * * * *

He tore open the letters abstractedly: the usual dinner-card or two, a tailor's spring announcement, a chronic serial from an exclamatory marble-quarrying company, a quarterly statement of a club house-committee. The last two missives bore a nondescript look.

One was small, with the name of a legal firm in its corner. The other was largish, corpulent and heavy, of stout Manila paper, and bore, down one side, a gaudy procession of postage stamps proclaiming that it had been registered.

"What's in that, I wonder?" he said to himself, and then, with a smile at the unmasculine speculation, opened the smaller envelope.

"Dear Sir," began the letter, in the most uncompromisingly conventional of typewriting:

"Dear Sir:

"Enclosed please find, with title-deed, a memorandum opened in your name by the late John Valiant some years before his death. It was his desire that the services indicated in connection with this estate should continue till this date. We hand you herewith our check for $286.20 (two hundred and thirty-six dollars and twenty cents), the balance in your favor, for which please send receipt.

"And oblige,

"Yours very truly,

"Emerson and Ball."

"(Enclosure)

He turned to the memorandum. It showed a sizable initial deposit against which was entered a series of annual tax payments with minor disbursements credited to "inspection and care." The tax receipts were pinned to the account.

The larger wrapper contained an unsealed envelope, across which was written in faded ink and in an unfamiliar dashing, slanting handwriting, his own name. The envelope contained a creased yellow parchment, from between whose folds there clumped and fluttered down upon the floor a long flattish object wrapped in a paper, a newspaper clipping and a letter.

Puzzled he unfolded the crackling thing in his hands. "Why," he said half aloud, "it's—it's a deed made over to me." He overran it swiftly. "Part of an old Colony grant * * * a plantation in Virginia, twelve hundred odd acres, given under the hand of a vice-regal governor in the sixteenth century. I had no idea titles in the United States went back so far as that!" His eye fled to the end. "It was my father's! What could he have wanted of an estate in Virginia? It must have come into his hands in the course of business."

He picked up the newspaper clipping. It was worn and broken in the folds as if it had been carried for months in a pocketbook.

"It will interest readers of this section of Virginia (the paragraph began) to learn, from a recent transfer received for record at the County Clerk's office, that Damory Court has passed to Mr. John Valiant, minor—"

He turned the paper over and found a date; it had been printed in the year of the transfer to himself, when he was six years old—the year his father had died.

"—John Valiant, minor, the son of the former owner.

"There are few indeed who do not recall the tragedy with which in the public mind the estate is connected. The fact, moreover, that this old homestead has been left in its present state (for, as is well known, the house has remained with all its contents and furnishings untouched) to rest during so long a term of years unoccupied, could not, of course, fail to be commented on, and this circumstance alone has perhaps tended to keep alive a melancholy story which may well be forgotten."

He read the elaborate, rather stilted phraseology in the twenty-year-old paper with a wondering interest. "An old house," he mused, "with a bad name. Probably he couldn't sell it, and maybe nobody would ever live in it. That would explain why it remained so long unoccupied—why there are no records of rentals. Probably the land was starved and run down.

"It's an offset to the hall-bedroom idea, at any rate," he said to himself humorously. "It holds out an escape from the noble army of rent-payers. When my twenty-eight hundred is gone, I could live down there a landed proprietor, and by the same mark an honorary colonel, and raise the cabbages I was talking about—eh, Chum? —while you stalk rabbits. How does that strike you?"

He laughed whimsically. He, John Valiant, of New York, first-nighter at its theaters, hail-fellow-well-met in its club corridors and welcome diner at any one of a hundred brilliant glass-and-silver-twinkling supper tables, entombed on the wreck of a Virginia plantation, a would-be country gentleman, on an automobile and next to nothing a year!

He bethought himself of the fallen letter and possessed himself of it quickly. It lay with the superscription side down. On it was written, in the same hand which had addressed the other envelope:

For my son, John Valiant,
When he reaches the age of twenty-five.

That, then, had been written by his father—and he had died nearly twenty years ago! He broke the seal with a strange feeling as if, walking in some familiar thoroughfare, he had stumbled on a lichened and sunken tombstone.

"When you read this, my son, you will have come to man's estate. It is curious to think that this black, black ink may be faded to gray and this white, white paper yellowed, just from lying waiting so long. But strangest of all is to think that you yourself whose brown head hardly tops this desk, will be as tall (I hope) as I! How I wonder what you will look like then! And shall I—the real, real I, I mean—be peering over your strong broad shoulder as you read? Who knows? Wise men have dreamed such a thing possible—and I am not a bit wise.

"John, you will not have forgotten that you are a Valiant. But you are also a Virginian. Will you have discovered this for yourself? Here is the deed to the land where I and my father, and his father, and many, many more Valiants before them were born. Sometime, perhaps, you will know why you are John Valiant of New York instead of John Valiant of Damory Court * * * I cannot tell you myself." There was some tragedy, then, that had blighted the place, some "melancholy story," as the clipping put it.

He bent over the deed spread out upon the table, following with his finger the long line of transfers: "'To John Valyante,'" he muttered; "what odd spelling! 'Robert Valyant'—without the 'e.' Here, in 1730, the 'y' begins to be 'i.'" There was something strenuous and appealing in the long line of dates. "Valiant. Always a Valiant. How they held on to it! There's never a break."

A curious pride, new-born and self-conscious, was dawning in him. He was descended from ancestors who had been no weaklings. A Valiant had settled on those acres under a royal governor, before the old frontier fighting was over and the Indians had sullenly retired to the westward. The sons of those who had braved sea and savages had bowed their strong bodies and their stronger hearts to raze the forests and turn the primeval jungles into golden plants-tions.

There stole into his mood an eery suggestion of intention. Why should the date assigned for that deed's delivery have been the very day on which he had elected poverty? Here was a foreordination as pointed as the index-finger of a guide-post. "'Every man carries his fate,'" he repeated, "'on a riband about his neck.' Chum, do you believe in fate?"

For answer the bulldog, cocking an alert eye on his master, discontinued his occupation—a conscientious if unsuccessful mastication of the flattish pastrel that had fallen from the folded deed—and with much solicitous tail-wagging, brought the sodden thing in his mouth and put it into the outstretched hand.

His master unrolled the pulpy wad and extricated the object it had enclosed—an old-fashioned iron door-key.

After a time Valiant thrust the key into his pocket, and rising, went to a trunk that lay against the wall. Searching in a portfolio, he took out a small old-fashioned photograph, much battered and soiled. It had been cut from a larger group and the name of the photographer had been erased from the back. He set it upright on the desk, and bending forward, looked long at the face it disclosed. It was the only picture he had ever possessed of his father.

He turned and looked into the glass above the dresser. The features were the same, eyes, brow, lips, and strong waving hair. But for its time-stains the photograph might have been one of himself, taken yesterday.

CHAPTER V.

On the Red Road.

The green, mid-May Virginian afternoon was arched with a sky as blue as the tiles of the Temple of Heaven and steeped in a wash of sunlight as yellow as gold. Nothing in all the springy landscape but looked warm and opalescent and inviting—except a tawny bull that from across a barred fence-corner switched a truculent tail in silence and glowered sullenly at the big motor halted motionless at the side of the twisting road.

Curled worm-like in the driver's seat, with his chin on his knees, John Valiant sat with his eyes upon the distance. For an hour he had whirred through that wondrous shimmer of color with a flippant loitering breeze in his face, sweet from the crimson clover that poured and rooted over the roadside.

"Chum, old man," said Valiant, with his arm about the bulldog's neck, "if those color-photograph chaps had shown us this, we simply wouldn't have believed it, would we? Such scenery beats the roads we're used to, what?" He wound his strong fingers in a choking grip in the scruff of the white neck, as a chipmunk chattered by on the low stone wall. "No, you don't you cannibal! He's a jolly little beggar, and he doesn't deserve being eaten!"

He filled his briar-wood pipe and drew in great breaths of the fragrant incense. "What a pity you don't smoke, Chum; you miss such a lot!"

After a time he shook himself and knocked the red core from the pipe-bowl against his boot-heel. "I hate to start," he confessed, half to the dog and half to himself. "To leave anything so sheerly beautiful as this! However, on with the dance! By the road map the village can't be far now. So long, Mr. Bull!"

He clutched the self-starter. But there was only a protestant wheeze; the car declined to budge. Climbing down, he cranked vigorously. The motor turned over with a surly grunt of remonstrance and after a tentative throb-throb, coughed and stopped dead. Something was wrong. With a sigh he flung off his tweed jacket, donned a smudgy "jumper," opened his tool-box, and, with a glance at his wrist-watch which told him it was three o'clock, threw up the monster's hood and went bitterly to work.

At half past three the investigation had got as far as the lubricator. At four o'clock the bulldog had given it up and gone nosing afield. At half past four John Valiant lay flat on his back, like some disreputable stevadore, alternately tinkering with refractory valves and cursing the obdurate mechanism. A sharp stone gnawed frenziedly into the small of his back and just as he made a final vicious lunge, something gave way and a prickling red-hot stab of pain shot zigzagging from his smitten crazy-bone through every tortured crevice of his impatient frame. Like steel from flint it struck out a crisp oath that brought an answering bovine snort from the fence-corner.

She Was the First to Recover. "You Did Look So Funny!"

(but, oh, not on the old white bear's skin rug—never again with me holding your small, small hand!)—

"'Wishing-House! Wishing-House! Where are you?'

"And this old parchment deed will answer—

"'Here I am, Master; here I am!'

"Ah, we are only children, after all, playing out our plays. I have had many toys, but O John, John! The ones I treasure most are all in the Never-Never Land!"

CHAPTER IV.

A Valiant of Virginia.

For a long time John Valiant sat motionless, the opened letter in his hand, staring at nothing. He had the sensation, spiritually, of a traveler awakened with a rude shock amid wholly unfamiliar surroundings.

He was trying to remember—to put two and two together. His father had been Southern-born; yes, he had known that. But he had known nothing whatever of his father's early days, or of his forebears; since he had been old enough to wonder about such things, he had had no one to ask questions of.

Phrases of the letter ran through his mind: "Sometime, perhaps, you will know why you are John Valiant of New York instead of John Valiant of Damory Court * * * I cannot tell you myself." There was some tragedy, then, that had blighted the place, some "melancholy story," as the clipping put it.

He bent over the deed spread out upon the table, following with his finger the long line of transfers: "'To John Valyante,'" he muttered; "what odd spelling! 'Robert Valyant'—without the 'e.' Here, in 1730, the 'y' begins to be 'i.'" There was something strenuous and appealing in the long line of dates. "Valiant. Always a Valiant. How they held on to it! There's never a break."

He clutched the self-starter. But there was only a protestant wheeze; the car declined to budge. Climbing down, he cranked vigorously. The motor turned over with a surly grunt of remonstrance and after a tentative throb-throb, coughed and stopped dead. Something was wrong. With a sigh he flung off his tweed jacket, donned a smudgy "jumper," opened his tool-box, and, with a glance at his wrist-watch which told him it was three o'clock, threw up the monster's hood and went bitterly to work.

At half past three the investigation had got as far as the lubricator. At four o'clock the bulldog had given it up and gone nosing afield. At half past four John Valiant lay flat on his back, like some disreputable stevadore, alternately tinkering with refractory valves and cursing the obdurate mechanism. A sharp stone gnawed frenziedly into the small of his back and just as he made a final vicious lunge, something gave way and a prickling red-hot stab of pain shot zigzagging from his smitten crazy-bone through every tortured crevice of his impatient frame. Like steel from flint it struck out a crisp oath that brought an answering bovine snort from the fence-corner.

Worming like a lizard to freedom, his eyes puckered shut with the wretched pang, John Valiant sat up and shook his grimy fist in the air. "You silly loafing idiot!" he cried. "Thump your own crazy-bone and see how you like it! You—oh, lord!"

His arm dropped, and a flush spread over his face to the brow. For his eyes had opened. He was gesturing not at the bull but at a girl, who fronted him beside the road, haughtiness in the very hue of her gray-blue linen walking suit and, in the clear-cut cameo face under her felt cavalry hat, myrtle-blue eyes that held a smolder of mingled astonishment and indignation. An instant he gazed, all the muscles of his face tightened with chagrin.

"I—I beg your pardon," he stammered. "I didn't see you. I really didn't. I was—I was talking to the bull."

The girl had been glancing from the flushed face to the thistly fence-corner, while the startled dignity of her features warred with an unmistakable tendency to mirth. He had struggled to his feet, nursing his bruised elbow, irritably conscious of his resemblance to an emerging chimney-sweep. "I don't habitually swear," he said, "but I'd got to the point when something had to explode."

"Oh," she said, "don't mind me!" Then mirth conquered and she broke forth suddenly into a laugh that seemed to set the whole place aquiver with a musical contagion. They both laughed in concert, while the bull pawed the ground and sent forth a rumbling bellow of affront and challenge.

She was the first to recover. "You did look so funny!" she gasped.

"I can believe it," he agreed, making a vicious dab at his smudged elbow. "The possibilities of a motor for comedy are simply stupendous."

She came closer and looked curiously at the quiescent monster—at the steamer-trunk strapped on the carrier and the bulging portmanteau peeping over the side of the tonneau. "Is it broken?"

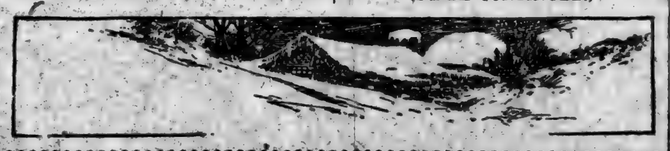
"Merely on strike, I imagine. Are we far from the village?"

"About a mile and a half."

"I'll have to have it towed after me. The immediate point is my traps. I wonder if there is likely to be a team passing."

"I'm afraid it's not too certain," answered the girl, and now he noted the liquid modulation, with its slightly questioning accent, charmingly Southern. "There is no livery, but there is a negro who meets the train sometimes. I can send him if you like."

"You're very good," said Valiant, as she turned away, "and I'll be enormously obliged. Oh—and if you see a white dog, don't be frightened if he tries to follow you. He's perfectly kind."



She looked back momentarily.

"He—he always follows people he likes, you see—"

"Thank you," she said. The tone had now a hint—small, yet perceptible—of aloofness. "I'm not in the least afraid of dogs." And with a little nod, she swung briskly on up the Red Road.

John Valiant stood staring after her till she had passed from view around a curve. "Oh, glory!" he muttered. "To begin by shaking your fist at her and end by making her wonder if you aren't trying to be fresh! You poor, profane, floundering dolt!"

REGIMENTAL COLORS IN PAWN

Odd Experiences of British Emblems Once Greatly Prized by Those Who Carried Them.

The discovery of the long lost colors of the old 50th regiment in the garden of Buntington house, near Chichester, is a reminder of the strange fates that have befallen so many of these glorious military emblems, London Tit-Bits remarks. The colors of the 31st foot—since disbanded—were captured by American pirates during the war of independence and hidden away in Ireland; the colors of the 20th regiment were deliberately burnt prior to the surrender at Saratoga, to prevent their capture by the enemy.

At Bergen-op-Zoom the Royal Scots, to save their precious colors from falling into French hands, sank them deep in the river, though the enemy later fished them out; and when the second battalion of the 8th foot was disbanded at Portsmouth in 1816 the colors were cut into small pieces and distributed among the officers.

One of the colors of the 1st Northamptonshire regiment, which had been carried right through the peninsular campaign, was discovered some years ago in a curiosity shop, though how it got there is a mystery to this day. A similar uncertainty attaches to a pair of old colors of the 2d Border regiment, which were recovered from a London pawn broker, who was offering them for sale, by Lord Archibald Campbell in 1888.

Four years later four colors which had accompanied the Gloucester regiment in Egypt and in the peninsula were recovered from a York pawnbroker. It appeared that, having been bequeathed by an old colonel of the regiment to his son, they were ultimately secured by a servant, who, falling on evil times, pawned them for a few shillings.

Wood Is Made Fireproof.

It is said that the Metropolitan railway has fireproofed all its rolling stock without the elimination of woodwork and the structural and decorative advantages which woodwork affords. The method of fireproofing is the same as that now being employed by the admiralty. This consists of the impregnation of the pores and fibers of the wood with chemicals such as render the wood absolutely fireproof. Wood so treated is said to lose none of its natural characteristics and has no harmful effect upon glues, paints, varnishes or metal fittings with which it may be brought into contact.—Railway Times, London.

Pauline motored to the station to meet her dearest friend, who was coming down for a week-end.

"Oh, Belle," cried Pauline enthusiastically, "do you know, Mr. Barnum, the young millionaire, is going to teach me to swim."

"To swim!" exclaimed the guest, wonderingly. "Why, Pauline, I thought you had been taught already."

"Yes, so I have, dear," said Pauline, "but not by him."

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy. Waterworks For Clanton

Election Monday, March 2nd. Let's All Pull Together For the Upbuilding Of Our Growing City.

But ten days remain before the citizens of Clanton vote on the issuance of bonds for waterworks improvement, the election taking place on the 2nd of March. Let each and every citizen look at this question in the light of what he considers will be for the best interest of himself and the town, and then having arrived at a decision that waterworks is our greatest need, let's rally to the polls and give the pesky house fly, typhoid and malarial fevers a swat right in the face. Summer will be soon upon us and the deadly fly will be on the job spreading his fatal disease germs, and who can tell but what your loved one will fall victim to his merciless onslaught. With a well regulated system of sanitary sewerage the dangers arising from these sources will be reduced to the minimum. Then, too, fire insurance rates will be greatly reduced, and with an abundant water supply many serious conflagrations would be averted.

Dr. John W. Ritchie, Professor of Biology, William and Mary College, Virginia, and a nigh authority on public health, in speaking of public sanitation, has the following to say:

"Many persons agree that public sanitation is a good thing, but, think that the town or state in which they live cannot afford it. These persons do not understand what preventable diseases are costing their communities, or do they not understand political economy. For any man can afford to spend two dollars if thereby he can save ten dollars, and any community that spends money on public sanitation will save far more in the time that has been lost on account of sickness than it spent in trying to preserve the health of its citizens. The typhoid epidemic at Plymouth, Pennsylvania, and the persons who died in it were earning in wages $18,000 a year. Lawrence, Mass., put in a water filter and in four months the filter prevented enough typhoid fever to pay for itself. Many towns everywhere think they cannot afford a public water supply, and yet, every few years each one of these towns pay out more than the cost of a water system because of intestinal diseases. One such town the writer knows, a town of about 2,000 inhabitants. Every year this town has from twenty to thirty cases of typhoid fever (besides other intestinal diseases) with two or three deaths, and every two years the people spend enough on typhoid fever alone to pay for the water system that they think they cannot afford. Count up the number of cases of consumption, or the number of persons who suffer from malaria in your town, and see if the people of the town are not acting in a very extravagant manner when they neglect public sanitation. You will certainly find this to be the case. It is cheaper to live in a town where the sidewalks are clean, flies and mosquitoes banished, and skilled health officers employed to watch for and prevent infectious diseases than it is to live in an unsanitary town. It is certainly more pleasant to live in a clean town than in an unclean town; at least it is more pleasant to be well in a clean town than it is to be sick in an unclean one. The only sensible thing for any community to do, therefore, is to have public sanitation and free itself as nearly as possible from preventable diseases."

CONGRESSMAN BLACKMON SEEKS RE-ELECTION

Hon. Fred L. Blackmon has announced his candidacy for re-election to Congress from this, the Fourth District. Mr. Blackmon is serving his second term in the lower house of Congress, and during this service he has done much for the district. He is a member of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, a very important committee, and it has been said that the Fourth district has more rural routes, possibly, than any other district in the State; and this is due largely to Fred Blackmon's untiring efforts as a member of this committee to further his constituents interests.

In our home county (Chilton) for instance, Fred Blackmon succeeded in geting route 8 from Clanton established after the Republican post office department had turned it down. The patrons along this proposed route were very anxious for its establishment. The matter was taken up with Congressman Blackmon with the result that the route was soon put into operation.

Mr. Blackmon since being a member of Congress has won the esteem of the people of the district has been true to the trust reposed in him, and has been loyal to his friends, and they believe he is justly entitled to another term.

THORSBY NOTES

Our new brick buildings are rising up apace. The outside work on Mr. Horn's buiiding is about completed. Mr. Pyron is running his up for a second story.

Work has begun on a new building for Mr. L. C. Robinson, and one for Mr. Mims. Ground is being broken for the building proposed by the Woodmen and Red Men, and another good sized building is to be erected on the lot adjoining it.

The Institute building is being re-painted, a gift from a friend in Connecticut having made this possible.

Mr. and Mrs. Maben, who have been residing at the Quarry, have moved their family to Thorsby that they may put their children in school.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucas, from Michigan, are here looking for a home. They have traveled over quite a territory, but think Thorsby is the best place they have yet found.

Nearly 15.000 strawberry crates have been shipped in recently, and are awaiting the coming of the luscious berries in the coming months. If all are filled, it will mean the largest amount of strawberries that has ever been shipped from Thorsby.

P. K. Villadsen, J. Sterling Moran and wife, H. H. Dahl, W. L. Leary, J. W. Collins and S. H. Herbert attended the county meeting of the Farmers' Union at Mineral Springs, and report an interesting and profitable meeting.

Mr. J. Smith Damron, the Potter craftsman, who delivered his lecture at the Institute Saturday night, remained over Sunday and spoke to a goodly crowd Sunday afternoon on "The Bible and Men" showing that all the great men of the nation were believers in the Bible. He also delivered a lecture at the Baptist church Sunday night.

Rev. J. M. Graham will hold a series of meetings at the Congregational church, beginning Sunday morning, Februrry 22. Services will probably be held every night during the following week.

Messrs. Treat and Davis, the government motion picture experts, who have been traveling in the West and South-west, have returned to Thorsby.

The Boy Scouts of Thorsby meet every Friday afternoon for a business meeting, and on Saturday afternoon they take a "hike" into the country, if the weather permits. They are learning to "Be Prepared", for every emergency. Mr. Serano G. Norton is Scout Master, and Mr. Arthur Villadsen is Assistant Scout Master.

MOUNTAIN CREEK NEWS

MINISTER BITTEN BY A DOG.

Rev. J. A. Cannon, a Baptist minister residing near Mountain Creek, was bitten by a mad dog. Mr. Cannon immediately went to be treated by the physicians at the Pasteur Institute, Montgomery. After examing the head of the dog, (the brute having been killed, the head was sent to the Institute), the physicians informed Mr. Cannon that he would require a constant treatment of 21 days. Every hope is entertained by the minister's friends as to his recovery.

REV. O. W. GREER RE-CALLED.

The Baptist church people of this place being so well pleased with the Rev. O. W. Greer and the results of his pastorate, extended the young divine a call for another. Mr. Greer accepted. This church has been successful during the past year, and has made some new additions to the roll of membership.

BRADY SIMS BREAKS A LEG.

A painful accident happened to Brady Sims, son of Judge Sims. The young man had entered the barn for the purpose of feeding stock, and fell from the second to the first floor breaking his left leg. Dr. Maddox was called and says that the young man is doing well.

DEATH OF CHAS. KENDRICK.

Charley Kendrick, aged twenty-seven years, a worthy young man of this vicinity, died of Bright's disease, and was buried on last Saturday. There were a large number of friends present at the funeral.

A "H. O. T." FOX CHASING.

Mr. Charley White and nine invited guests—all well mounted—accompanied by a pack of twenty-seven dogs, "stayed out" for one entire night and started one, only one, "sly" fox on the Falkner estate, and this only "sly" rover of the Chilton county hills give the sportsmen "a run" for his "brush." His foxship led the hunters and their dogs up hill and down, over and around barb-wire fences until, as streaks of the morning sunlight appeared the merry hunters reined their jaded steeds, give a "blast" or two on their hunting horns and started homeward. At last accounts the fox was headed for Coosa county.

BURGLARS AT MR. COBURN'S.

On his return from church last Sunday evening Mr. George W. Coburn discovered that thieves had entered during his absence. On investigation Mr. Coburn discovered that some household articles were missing and the "house" robbed of meat.

"BIG INJUNS" "EAT HEAP."

The Redmen of Verbena invited the "Mountain Creek Braves" to join them in a "pow-wow" and "oyster-hiding" contest. Thomas J. Henderson with "a bunch" of braves started on the journey to Verbena, and, after arriving, they entered a "wigwam" and smoked the pipe of peace, and, it is said, "got away" with a share of the Mobile Bay plants.

TOWN OFFICERS ELECTED.

Yesterday there was an election held at Mountain Creek for town officers which resulted in the selection of Mr. E. V. Speer as the mayor, and B. G. Baxley, W. W. Coburn, W. B. Corley, T. L. Kicker and R. H. Long, aldermen. The election passed off quietly, and, it is not stated as a fact that Postmaster Benjamin Gray and L. & N. agent Hubbard held back the ballot boxes in order to "stuff" them with votes for their candidate. Dr. Haley, said this morning that he accepted defeat cheerfully since it was by so agreeable a gentleman as Mr. E. V. Speer, and, like Charley White's fox he was runing yet—next time.

OLD SOLDIERS' HOME NOTES.

There are now 19 graves at the Old Soldiers cemetery without head-stones. In speaking of this matter Capt. J. M. Simpson said that in the near future the grave stones would be supplied, as he had given the order for them.

Mrs. Bessie Hestle, a daughter of Captain Simpson, and wife of the L. & N. civil engineer, is visiting Mrs. Carrie McMasters, a sister here at the Home.

Camp 1711, U. C. V.'s held a regular meeting and adjourned after attending to some routine business.

Congressional Primary

To Be Held On April Sixth. Both Candidates Favor Primary On The Above Named Date

Selecting April 6 as the date for the congressional primary, the business of the Democratic Executive Committee of the Fourth District was dispatched in short order at the meeting in the Calhoun county court house Monday at noon, Captain A. P. Agee of Anniston presiding and R. E. L. Neil of Selma, acting as secretary.

There was no fight in the committee on the part of either of the two candidates through their supporters. B. M. Roberts read a letter from Congressman Blackmon to the effect that he favored an election on April 6, and the friends of W. B. Craig stated that he was also opposed to holding the election on May 1f, as had been suggested.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The State Executive Committee of the Democratic and Conservative Partv of Alabama have ordered a Democratic primary election to be held on Monday, April 6th, 1914, to nominate Democratic candidates for the various offices to be voted on in the regular election in November, 1914; and having fixed the qualifications of the voters in said primary and provided the necessary machinery for holding said primary; therefore, be it resolved that the Democratic Executive Committee for the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama, hereby acquiesce and concur in the action of the said State Executive Committee and adopt the same plan for holding a primary election to nominate a congressman to represent the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama in the 64th congress of the United States, as that heretofore fixed by the State Executive Committee of the Democratic and Conservative Party of Alabama.

Resolved further, That at the same time and in the same manner in which county officers are chosen, there shall be elected from each of said districts two members of the Democratic Executive Committee of the Fourth Congressional District.

Resolved further, That chairmain of each county executive committee shall make return immediately to the chairman of this committee of the result of said election in said county of said district executive committee thus chosen.

Chilton county was represented at the meeting by H. M. Simpson and Barney M. Roberts.

THE FEAST OF THE LITTLE LANTERNS

CHINESE OPERETTA TO BE GIVEN BY STUDENTS OF THORSBY INSTITUTE.

This charming musical play will be given Friday night, February 20. The following is a brief synopsis of the play:

Prince Chan had died in battle, and his property was to be kept by guardtans until "The Feast of the Little Lanterns," when it was to be given to any TWO surviving children. Two of his children, brother and sister, had been kidnapped long ago, and Princess Chan, the only one remaining, is in sorrow because of the loss of her brother and sister, and because she ALONE cannot claim her father's estate. A Japanese juggler girl visits the palace, and proves to be the long-lost sister. All rejoice over her return, and "The Feast of the Little Lanterns" is celebrated with much glee.

This operetta consists of solos, choruses, and dialogues in song. The costuming and scenery, together with the music of the tom-tom, add to the charm of the play, which cannot fail to be enjoyed by every one. This is one of the numbers on the entertainment course.

AGRICULTURISTS AT MONTGOMERY

ASSOCIATION OF SOUTHERN AGRICULTURAL WORKERS MEET FEB. 24, 25 AND 26.

LARGE NUMBER WILL ATTEND

Practically Every Southern State Will Be Represented—Program Includes Prominent Speakers.

Montgomery.—Two hundred or more delegates, representing practically every state, are expected in Montgomery February 24 and 25 for the fiftieth annual convention of the Association of Southern Agricultural Workers, composed of state agricultural commissioners, farm demonstration agents, teachers of agriculture and all others interested in agricultural development in the south.

The program for the three days includes a number of the most prominent and well known agricultural workers in the south and the convention will be very interesting and valuable, not only for agricultural workers, but for farmers and the general public. The general program covers subjects of wide interest to the entire south, and it is expected that some action will be taken at the conclusion of the discussion of each of these which will unite the southern effort for the accomplishment of important results.

Programs and literature concerning the approaching Montgomery convention are now being sent out from Raleigh, N. C., the home of B. W. Kilgore, secretary of the association.

Visiting delegates will be welcomed to the state by Gov. Emmet O'Neal and to the city by Mayor W. A. Gunter, Jr. Response to the addresses of welcome will be delivered by Dr. A. Soule, president of the Georgia College of Agriculture at Athens, Ga.

Among the prominent visitors expected at the convention will be the various agricultural commissioners of southern states and a number of experts from the United States department of agriculture, including Bradford Knapp, Dr. C. G. Hopkins of the faculty of the University of Illinois, has accepted an invitation to address the convention and he will speak at the second day's session. The general program embraces four divisions, a division of general subjects and discussions, a division for agricultural commissioners, a dvision for animal husbandry and livestock problems and a division for field corps and fertilizers.

Dr. C. A. Cary of Auburn, state veterinarian, is president of the association, having been so honored at the last convention held in North Carolina, and he was instrumental in securing the 1914 convention for Alabama and Montgomery. Other officers are E. R. Kone of Texas, and A. M. Soule of Georgia, vice presidents; B. W. Kilgore of North Carolina, secretary.

This convention will be one of the most important and largest Montgomery has encertained in a number of years, and it is expected that the attendance from other Alabama points alone will be very large, as a general invitation to all farmers of Alabama to attend the sessions is extended.

PHARMACIST CANDIDATES.

Class of Twenty-six Men and One Woman Seek Licenses.

Birmingham.—The triennial examination of applicants for certificates of licensed pharmacists was held by the Alabama State board of pharmacy at the city hall. Twenty-six men and one woman took the examination.

$17,000 FIRE IN TUSCALOOSA.

Blaze Starts from Explosion of Gasoline in Tailoring Establishment.

Tuscaloosa.—Following an explosion in the Buck Brothers' tailoring establishment, presumably of gasoline, fire swept over four buildings in the heart of Tuscaloosa's business district, inflicting a loss of about $17,000.

$25,000,000 in This Mortgage.

Mobile.—A mortgage for $25,000,000 to the Guarantee Trust company of New York, and William B. Edinburg of Tuskegee, from the Alabama, Tennessee and Northern railroad, to guarantee a bond issue of that amount, was filed in probate court here. The document is the longest ever filed for record here, covering 112 printed pages. It is provided that the bonds may be issued from time to time as it becomes necessary, and it is said that the full amount may never be issued.

Mayor Not Guilty of Buying Votes.

Huntsville.—A verdict of not guilty was entered in the cases of R. E. Smith, former mayor of Huntsville, who was indicted by the last circuit court grand jury on charges of vote bribery. Mr. Smith was tried and acquitted on one charge in December. When the second case was called, Mr. Smith demanded a trial. Some of the principal witnesses for the state were not present. Judge Speake threw the second and third cases against Mr. Smith out of court.

STATE GETS WATERWAY BENEFIT

Over $800,000 in Rivers and Harbors Bill.

Washington.—Report of the rivers and harbors appropriation bill was made public. The bill carries approximately $40,000,000 and the cash is available at once. Formerly river and harbor bills have strung their appropriations over a series of years.

The following items were in the bill for Alabama:

Chattahoochee river, $120,000.

Coosa river between Rome and Gadsden, $65,000.

Mobile harbor, general improvement, $120,000.

Mobile harbor, removing obstructions, $5000.

Mobile bar, $20,000.

Black Warrior and Tombigbee locks and dams, $500,000.

Tombigbee mouth to Demopolis $12,500.

Tombigbee from Demopolis to Walker's bridge, $18,000.

Channel connecting Mobile bay and Mississippi sound, $10,000.

Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas intracostal waterway from Mobile bay to the Rio Grande; Section 5, Mobile to Mississippi river, $100,000; section 7, Sabine river to Galveston bay, $150,000; section 12, Brazos, Santiago to Rio Grande, $80,000.

The report of the board of engineers on the intracostal waterway sometime ago was calculated to throw cold water on this scheme, the board declaring that it did "not consider the construction of the entire length of the waterway as necessary either for commercial, military or naval purposes." They, however, qualified this by saying the portions of Alabama and Louisiana would be benefited because of the population being large enough over the route through these states to warrant the work.

COKE OUTPUT 4,000,000 TONS.

Production Fell Short of This Mark in 1911 and 1910.

Birmingham.—The coke production of Alabama for 1913, it is estimated, will run close to 4,000,000 tons. It is practically certain that the coke output will exceed 3,500,000.

The large coke producing companies that have made reports on the coke production report decided gains over the coke production of 1912.

So far the banner year in the coke industry was in 1910, when 3,231,000 tons of coke were produced.

In 1911 the production fell short of this mark and again in 1910 the production was off, only 2,881,886 tons being produced during that year.

INCREASES LUMBER EXPORTS.

Mobile's Record Second in the Entire South.

New Orleans.—Lumber export statistics for 1913 gathered by The Lumber Trade Journal published shows that New Orleans is the leading lumber exporting port of the south, Mobile second, Gulfport third, and Pensacola fourth. Figures for only half of the year were taken from custom house reports because on July 1, 1913, the customs districts were rearranged and several southern ports shifted from one district to another.

Mobile's imports for January were more than $23,000 greater than for January a year ago.

GOODWYN SETS CANDIDATES RIGHT

ANSWERS QUESTIONS AS TO RULES OF QUALIFYING WITH EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings in and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Candidates for the state senate from districts representing more than one county will qualify with the chairman of the state democratic executive committee, according to Tyler Goodwyn, state head of that organization.

Chairman Goodwyn announced that he had received a large number of inquiries in regard to the manner in districts representing one county shall qualify.

Regarding the latter, Chairman Goodwyn announces that such candidates from counties which in themselves compose districts, shall qualify with the county chairman.

The assessment fee for candidates for the senate who qualify with the state chairman is $25. The counties which in themselves compose districts have assessed different fees. Montgomery county has assessed a qualification fee of $50 for candidates for the senate.

Chairman Goodwyn announced, furthermore, that candidates for the office of solicitor for districts composed of more than one county shall also qualify with the state chairman, with an assessment of $100. Candidates for solicitor of one county will qualify with the county chairman.

More Money for Farm Agents.

Members of the Central Alabama Livestock Association went on record as favoring increased appropriations by state and counties for the employment of more farm demonstration agents for the various counties of the state, in a resolution adopted by the association in Quarterly meeting at the Business Men's League auditorium in Montgomery.

A second resolution, introduced by Dr. A. C. Cary, of Auburn, and unanimously adopted, called upon the board of revenue of Montgomery county to continue the tick eradication work. The resolution called attention to the fact that Montgomery county has 70 private and public dipping vats, and that the county is almost clean of cattle tick now, these facts being advanced to urge upon the board of revenue the importance of continuing the work in connection with the state authorities.

The meeting here was largely attended by livestock raisers of several adjoining counties as well as many representatives of Montgomery county.

Leads in Hunters' Licenses.

Jefferson county led the state in number of hunters' licenses issued, according to a brief report issued by John H. Wallace, Jr., state game and fish commissioner.

During the year 1116 licenses were issued in Jefferson county, which was nearly one-fifth of the number issued in the entire state. The total was something over 6000.

The record shows that of this number 800 paid state licenses, 4352 county and 62 non-resident, making an increase of about 300 over 1913.

In Mobile county 912 licenses were taken out and in Montgomery county 514 licenses were taken out.

Pure Food Inspector Coming.

C. J. Smith, inspector of the federal pure food department of Washington will come to Alabama soon to investigate violations of the pure food laws in this state, according to announcement by C. H. Billingsley, state pure food and drug clek. Mr. Smith will come to Alabama to confer relative to the detailing of a federal pure food inspector to this state. He was sent here by C. L. Alsberg, head of the bureau of chemistry, and his trip was made at the request of C. H. Billingsley.

Game Warden Named.

T. H. Reese of Hannon has been appointed game warden of Macon county by John H. Wallace, Jr., state game and fish commissioner. Mr. Reese succeeds S. M. Eich, whose term has expired.

Captain Amerine Dies.

Capt. Miles H. Amerine, chief clerk of the state bureau of cotton statistics and a prominent person in military circles for many years, died at his home.

Courts Take Vacation.

With the completion last week of the call of the second division of the supreme court and the court of appeals, entered upon their six weeks' mid-winter vacation and there will be no more grind until April 6, the day of the State primary, when the second lap of the term will be started with a call of the first division. The high courts last week heard cases from the counties of Bibb, Choctaw, Dallas, Greene, Hale, Marengo, Perry, Sumter and Wilcox.

Will Have No Corn Contest in 1914.

Capt. Reuben F. Kolb, commissioner of agriculture and industries, announced that Alabama would have no corn contest this year. This decision was reached by Captain Kolb and other members of the board of agriculture.

The reason for deciding against a corn contest this year is due to the fact that an Alabama farmer has captured the title of champion corn grower of the South and that the State as a whole has made wonderful progress in the development of this crop. The efforts of the farmers this year will be directed principally along other lines.

"With the present push and well directed energy the full output of an acre of land has not yet been reached," said Commissioner Kolb in a letter to the governor appended to a corn bulletin now being printed. "Still as we are so far in the lead we have decided for this year to forego having a corn contest."

Commissioner Kolb also told the governor that "we are more than delighted to be able to inform you that this State now contains the champion corn grower of the United States." The champion is Cecil Adams of Eclectic, who grew 239.36 bushels of corn on one acre.

State's Finances.

With a working balance in the State treasury of more than half a million dollars, and with a neat sum to the credit of the State auditor, there is little need of worry in regard to Alabama's finances. The latest report received by the governor from the treasury shows that there is a working balance in the treasury of $560,051.47. The auditor's balance was $50,591.45, and the outstanding warrant account was $509,460.02.

Funds have been pouring into the treasury during the past few weeks, and the State has been able to meet all of its obligations with little difficulty. The treasury will be in a good condition until June or July, probably, when the finances usually go to a low ebb. However, there will be plenty of money on hand for the next few months, and indications are that the State will be in as good shape during the fall and early winter months as at any time within the past few years.

Can Only Pay for One Primary.

No county is authorized to bear the expenses of more than one primary, according to an opinion rendered by the attorney general to Secretary of State Cyrus B. Brown, at the request of Probate Judge J. P. Stiles, of Jefferson county.

Judge Stiles asked whether or not counties have authority or are required to pay expenses of the two primaries called for in their respective counties for the nomination of candidates for office. Under section 5 of the primary election law, the attorney general ruled that "It was not the contemplation of the legislature that more than one primary will be held for the purpose of nominating a candidate for any office. I am therefore of the opinion and so advise you, that the county will be only authorized to pay the expenses of one primary."

Buying Arms in Montgomery.

Victoriano Huerta and Francisco Villa are looking to Montgomery for supplies of arms and ammunition. Following the sale of 1,500,000 brass jacketed rifle cartridges to Huerta by a local gun company several days ago, it developed that representatives of each faction of the Mexican revolution had conferred with the Montgomery gun stores and made arrangements whereby arms and ammunition held under option would be sent to the Mexican country.

One proprietor of a gun store admitted that he had sold 10,000 Italian rifles and 1,500,000 rounds of ammunition to Huerta, but refused to discuss negotiations now being carried on.

Could Not Get State Business.

Charges that J. Craig Smith, former president of the State convict department, bought ten ounce woolen convict stripes in 1908 from Eliasberg Brothers Mercantile Company, of Selma, at 29 cents a yard, when he could have purchased identically the same goods from Steiner, Lobeman and Frank of Montgomery at 25 cents a yard, were made by Charles L. Townes, examiner of public accounts, who submitted to Governor O'Neal an affidavit signed by Bernard Frank, of Montgomery, in which Mr. Frank asserted he had bid the lower price, but was told that Craig Smith had placed the order with the Selma firm at the higher price.

Inefficient Company Mustered Out.

Order to muster out Company L, of the 1st Infantry, Alabama National Guard, was issued by Adjutant General J. B. Scully. Inefficiency and failure properly to care for government property are the reasons for the action taken. An inspection of the company was recently made by General Scully and Captain W. P. Screws of the United States Army. E. G. Sheppard, property clerk, has been instructed to take charge of all the property in the possession of the company.

Newspaper Man on River Commission.

J. C. O'Connell, a newspaper man of Mobile, was appointed a member of the Mobile river commission by Governor O'Neal. The vacancy to which he was appointed has existed for several months.

Gendarme Butler Jailed.

Prisoners confined in the Butler county jail at Greenville will be transferred to the Covington county jail at Andalusia. Dr. Gaston has condemned the Butler county jail, and he will not permit prisoners held there.

NAVY OFFICERS PAY TRIBUTE TO DEAD

GRAVES OF HEROES OF BATTLESHIP MAINE COVERED WITH FLORAL TRIBUTES.

MANY PROMINENT SPEAKERS

National Salute Fired Over Graves of Havana Harbor Victims While Bugle Sounds Taps.

Washington.—Homage to the men of the battleship Maine, who lost their lives in the epoch making catastrophe in Havana harbor 16 years ago, was paid by the navy and high officials of the nation at Arlington national cemetery. Snow-covered mounds over the sleeping warriors were decorated with floral tributes and a staunch little vessel plowed through the ice floes of the Potomac to strew sprigs of evergreen on the water. Over the graves a detachment of blue jackets fired three volleys and a national salute and a bugle sounded "taps."

Impressive exercises were held indoors at Fort Meyer, the blizzard making it impossible to carry out the full program arranged for the occasion at the cemetery. Hundreds had braved the freezing blasts, however, to participate in the ceremonies at the graves.

President Wilson, confined by his physician's orders to the White House, sent a beautiful floral tribute. President Menocal of Cuba cabled an expression of the reverence of his government for the dead of the Maine. His message expressed deep regret that he could not participate in the services, and added: "But my mind will be with you for the brave officers and sailors of the Maine."

Orations were delivered at Fort Meyer Commander-in-Chief Washington Gardner of the Grand Army of the Republic, Representative Logue of Pennsylvania, the Rev. Eugene A. Hannan, representing the Rev. Mr. Chadwick, who was chaplain of the Maine, and by John McElroy of the Army and Navy Union.

Secretary Daniels of the navy department and the official heads of a number of patriotic organizations were present. John McElroy suggested that the memorial was typical of "all men who, on land or sea, had given the full measure of devotion to the country's laws by dying under its flag."

Although 16 years have passed since that day in February, 1898, when the Maine was literally torn to pieces and 260 of her officers and crew perished, yet each year seems to bring added veneration for those who lost their lives in the explosion. The exercises, while centering about the graves of the Maine heroes, took on, however, a larger significance in including all those of the land and sea forces who had sacrificed themselves in the line of patriotic duty.

An impressive feature of the closing exercises was the sounding of taps—the final good night—by many buglers widely separated at remote points throughout the vast cemetery, one after another taking up the dying echoes, and passing them along from point to point like old time signalling of war days.

AVIATOR PLUNGES TO DEATH.

Lieut. J. McMurray Killed When Machine Falls 800 Feet Into Water.

Pensacola.—Lieut. J. McMurray of the United States naval aviation corps stationed here was instantly killed when his machine plunged into Pensacola bay. He fell about 800 feet. The machine was demolished, and Lieutenant McMurray's body was discovered shortly afterwards about 100 yards from the spot where he fell.

Lieutenant McMurray had been flying out in the gulf and was returning to the station when the accident occurred. An investigation has not revealed the cause of the accident.

The death of Lieutenant McMurray is the first fatality that has occurred at the Pensacola station.

TAKEN FROM TRAIN AND HUNG.

Mississippi Mob Stops Train, Takes Prisoner From Sheriff.

Hernando, Miss.—Stopping an Illinois Central passenger train in the woods near Love, Miss., a mob of about 50 masked men held passengers and members of the crew at bay under cover of revolvers while they forced Sheriff E. F. Nichols of DeSoto county to turn over to them Johnson McGuirk and Bill Phillips, negroes, accused of wounding J. K. Ingram, a wealthy mill owner, near Byhalia, Miss., several weeks ago. McGuirk was hanged from a railroad trestle and Phillips restored to the custody of the sheriff.

SIXTY INJURED IN COLLISION.

Missouri Passenger Crashes Into Six ter Train.

Springfield, Mo.—Sixty persons were injured, a score of them seriously, and five probably fatally, in a collision of two St. Louis and San Francisco railroad passenger trains at Nichols Junction, four miles west of here. One train was running from Joplin and the west to St. Louis and the other from Springfield to Kansas City.

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely.

CHAPTER V.—Continued.

The girl walked on up the highway with a lilting stride, now and then laughing to herself, or running a few steps, occasionally stopping by some hedge to pull a leaf which she rubbed against her cheek, smelling its keen new scent, or stopping to gaze out across the orange-green belts of sunny wind-dimpled fields, one hand pushing back her mutinous hair from her brow, the other shielding her eyes. Farther on the highroad looped around a strip of young forest, and she struck into this for a short cut. In the depth she sat down to rest on the sun-splashed roots of a tree. Leaning back against the seamed trunk, her felt hat fallen to the ground, she looked like some sea-woman emerging from an earth-hued pool to comb her hair against a dappled rock.

She drew back against the tree and caught her breath as a bulldog frisked over a mossy boulder just in front of her.

A moment more and she had thrown herself on her knees with both arms outstretched. "Oh, you splendid creature!" she cried, "you big, lovely white darling!"

The dog seemed in no way averse to this sensational proceeding. He responded instantly not merely with tail-wagging, but with ecstatic grunts and growls. "Where did you come from?" she questioned, as his pink tongue struggled desperately to find a cheek through the whorl of coppery hair. "Why, you must be the one I was told not to be afraid of."

She petted and fondled the smooth intelligent muzzle. "As if any one could be afraid of you! We'll set your master right on that point." Smiling to herself, she pulled one of the roses from her belt, and twisting a wisp of long grass, wound it round and round the dog's neck and thrust the ragged rose-stem firmly through it. "Now," she said, and pushed him gently from her, "go back, sir!"

He whined and licked her hand, but when she repeated the command, he turned obediently and left her. A little way from her he halted, with a sudden perception of mysterious punishment, shrugged, sat down, and tried to reach the irksome grass-wisp with his teeth. This failing, he rolled laboriously in the dirt.

Then he rose, cast a reproachful glance behind him, and trotted off.

CHAPTER VI.

Mad Anthony.

Beyond the selvage of the sleepy leaf-sheltered village a cherry bordered lane met the Red Road. On its one side was a clovered pasture and beyond this an orchard, bounded by a tall hedge of close-clipped box which separated it from a broad yard where the gray-weathered roof of Rosewood showed above a group of tulip and catalpa trees. On the sunny steps a lop-eared puppy was playing with a mottled cat.

The front door was open, showing a hall where stood a grandfather's clock and a spindle-legged table holding a bowl of potpourri. The timepiece had landed from a sailing vessel at Jamestown wharf with the household goods of that English Garland who had adopted the old Middle Plantation when Dunmore was royal governor under George III. Framed portraits and engravings lent tints of tarnished silver, old-rose and sunset-golds—colors time-toned and reminiscent, carrying a charming sense of peaceful content, of gentleness and long tradition. The dark polished stairway had at its turn a square dormer-window which looked out upon one of the rose-arbors.

Down this stair, somewhat later that afternoon, came Shirley Dandridge, booted and spurred, the rebellious whorls of her russet hair now as closely filleted as a Greek boy's, in a short divided skirt of yew-green and a cool white blouse and swinging by its ribbon a green hat whose rolling brim was caught up at one side by a crisp blue-black hawk's feather. She stopped to peer out of the dormer-window to where, under the latticed weave of bloom beside a round iron table holding a hoop of embroidery and a book or two a lady sat reading.

The lady's hair was silver, but not with age. It had been so for many years, refuted by the transparent skin and a color as soft as the cheek of an apricot. It was solely in her dark eyes, deep and strangely luminous, that one might see lurking the somber spirit of passion and of pain. But they were eager and brilliant withal, giving the lie to the cane whose crook one pale delicate hand held with a clasp that somehow conveyed a sense of exasperate if quasi-humorous rebellion.

She looked up at Shirley's voice, and smiled brightly. "Off for your ride, dear?"

"Yes. I'm going with the Chalmers."

"Oh, of course. Betty Page is visiting them, isn't she?"

Shirley nodded. "She came yesterday. I'll have to hurry, for I saw them from my window turning into the Red Road." She waved her hand and ran lightly down the stair and across the lawn to the orchard.

She pulled a green apple from a bough that hung over a stone wall and with this in her hand she came close to the pasture fence and whistled a peculiar call. It was answered by a low whinny and a soft thud of hoofs, and a golden-chestnut hunter thrust a long nose over the bars, flaring flame-lined nostrils to the touch of her hand. She laid her cheek against the white thoroughbred forehead and held the apple to the larger reaching lip, with several teasing withdrawings before she gave it to its juicy crunching.

She let down the top bar of the fence and vaulting over, ran to a stable and presently emerging with a saddle on her arm, whistled the horse to her and saddled him. Then opening the gate, she mounted and cantered down the lane to meet the oncoming riders—a kindly-faced, middle-aged man, a younger one with dark features and coal-black hair, and two girls.

Chisholm Lusk spurred in advance and lifted his hat. "I held up the judge, Shirley," he said, "and made him bring me along. He tells me there's a fox hunt on tomorrow; may I come?"

"Pshaw! Chilly," said the judge. "I don't believe you ever got up at five o'clock in your born days. You've learned bad habits abroad."

"You'll see," he answered. "If my man Friday doesn't rout me out tomorrow, I'll be up for murder."

They rode an hour, along stretches of sunny highways or on shaded bridle-paths where the horses' hoofs fell muffled in brown pine-needles and drooping branches flicked their faces. Then, by a murky way gouged with brusk gullies, across shelving fields and "turn-rows" in a long detour around Powhattan Mountain, a rough spur in the shape of an Indian's head that wedged itself forbiddingly between the fields of spring corn and tobacco.

"Do let us get a drink!" said Chilly Lusk. "I'm as thirsty as a cotton-batting camel."

"All right, we'll stop," agreed the judge, "and you'll have a chance to see a local lion, Betty. This is where Mad Anthony lives. You must have heard of him when you were here before. He's almost as celebrated as the Reverend John Jasper of Richmond."

Betty tapped her temple. "Where have Ah heard of John Jasper?"

"He was the author of the famous sermon on 'The Sun do Move.' He used to prove it by a bucket of water that he set beside his pulpit Saturday night. As it hadn't spilled in the morning he knew it was the earth that stood still."

Betty nodded laughingly. "Ah remember now. Is Mad Anthony really mad?"

"Only harmlessly," said Shirley. "He's stone blind. The negroes all believe he conjures—that's voodoo, you know. They put a lot of stock in his 'prophecisms.' He tells fortunes, too. S-sh!" she warned. "He's sitting on the door-step. He's heard us."

"Howdy Do, Anthony," He Said.

The old negro had the torso of a black patriarch. He sat bolt upright with long straight arms resting on his knees, and his face had that peculiar expressionless immobility seen in Egyptian carvings. His age might have been anything, judging from his face which was as seamed and creviced with innumerable tiny wrinkles that it most resembled the tortured glaze of some ancient bitumen pottery unearthed from a tomb of Her.

The judge dismounted, and tossing his bridle over a fence-picket, took from his pocket a collapsible drinking cup. "Howdy do, Anthony," he said. "We just stopped for a drink of your good water."

The old negro received the word "drink," he said in the quavering tones of extreme age. "Yas, Marse. He'p yo'se'f. Come f'om he centah ob de yerf, dat watah. En dah's folks say de centah of de yerf is all fiah. Yo' reck'n dey's right, Mars' Chahmahs?"

"Now, how the devil do you know who I am, Anthony?" The judge set down his cup on the well-curb. "I haven't been by here for a year."

The ebony head moved slowly from side to side. "Ol' Ant'ny don' need no eyes," he said, touching his hand to his brow. "He see evything heah."

The judge beckoned to the others and they trooped inside the paling. "I've brought some other folks with me, Anthony; can you tell who they are?"

The sightless look wavered over them and the white head shook slowly. "Don' know young mars,'" said the gentle voice. "How many yuddahs wid yo'? One, two? No, I don' know young mistis, eidah."

"I reckon you don't need any eyes," Judge Chalmers laughed, as he passed the sweet cold water to the rest. "One of these young ladies wants you to tell her fortune."

The old negro dropped his head, waving his gaunt hands restlessly. The judge beckoned to Betty Page, but she shook her head with a little grimace and drew back.

"You go, Shirley," she whispered, and with a laughing glance at the others, Shirley came and sat down on the lowest step.

Mad Anthony put out a wavering hand and touched the young body. His fingers strayed over the habit and went up to the curling bronze under the hat-brim. "Dis de li'l mistis," he muttered, "ain' afeahd ob ol' Ant'ny. Dah's fiah en she ain' afeahd, en dah's watah en she ain' afeahd. Wondah whut Ah gwine tell huh? Whut de coloh ob yo' hain, honey?"

Old Anthony's hand fell back to his knee. "Young mars' laugh at de ol' man," he said, "but he don' know. Dat de coloh dat buhn mah han's—de coloh ob gol', en eyes blue like er cat-bird's aig. Dah's er man gwine look in dem eyes, honey, en gwine make 'em cry en cry." He raised his head sharply, his lids shut tight, and swung his arm toward the North. "Dah's whah he come f'om," he said, "en heah"—his arm veered and he pointed straight toward the ragged hill behind them—"he stay."

Lusk laughed noiselessly. "He's pointing to Damory Court," he whispered to Nancy Chalmers, "the only uninhabited place within ten miles. That's as near as he often hits it, I fancy."

"Heah's whah he stay," repeated the old man. "Heap ob trouble wait heah fo' him too, honey,—heap ob trouble, heah whah li'l mistis fin' him."

"Come, Anthony," said Judge Chalmers, laying his hand on the old man's shoulder. "That's much too mournful! Give her something nice to top off with, at least!"

But Anthony paid no heed. "Gr'et trouble. Dah's fiah en she ain' afeahd, en dah's watah en she ain' afeahd. En Ah sees yo' gwine ter him, honey. Ah heah's de co'ot-house clock a-strikin' in de night—en yo' gwine. Don' wait, don' wait, li'l mistis, er de trouble-cloud gwine kyah him erway f'om yo' * * * When de clock strike thuh-teen—when de clock strike thuh-teen—"

The droning voice ceased. The gaunt form became rigid. Then he started and turned his eyes slowly about him, a vague look of anxiety on his face. For a moment no one moved. When he spoke again it was once more in his gentle quavering voice:

The judge set a dollar bill on the step and weighted it with a stone, as the rest remounted. "Well, good-by, Anthony," he said. "We're mightily obliged."

He sprang into the saddle and the quartette cantered away. "My experiment wasn't a great success, I'm afraid, Shirley," he said ruefully.

"Oh, I think it was splendid!" cried Nancy. "Do you suppose he really believes those spooky things? I declare, at the time I almost did myself. What an odd idea—'when the clock strikes thirteen,' which, of course, it never does."

"Don't mind, Shirley," bantered Lusk. "When you see all 'dem trouble' coming, sound the alarm and we'll fly in a body to your rescue."

They let their horses out for a pounding gallop which pulled down suddenly at a muffled shriek from Betty Page, as her horse went into the air at sight of an automobile by the roadside.

"Now, whose under the canopy is that?" exclaimed Lusk.

"It's stalled," said Shirley. "I passed here this afternoon when the owner was trying to start it, and Lieut. Uncl Jefferson as first aid to the injured."

"I wonder why he says 'Dr.,'" said Nancy. "I've never been that far before."

"Why, said Betty gaily, "Mr. Valiant's Rod Lantern's (corporation, of course, sugar-baby)."

CHAPTER VII.

Uncle Jefferson.

A red rose, while ever a thing of beauty, is not invariably a joy forever. The white bulldog, as he plodded along the sunny highway, was sunk in depression. Being trammeled by the limitations of a canine horizon, he could not understand the whims of Adorable Ones met by the way, who seemed so glad to see him that they threw both arms about him, and then tied to his neck irksome colored weeds that prickled and scratched and would not be dislodged. So it was a chastened and shamed Chum who at length wriggled stealthily into the seat of the stranded automobile beside his master and thrust a dirty pink nose into his palm.

John Valiant lifted his hand to stroke the shapely head, then drew it back with an exclamation. A thorn had pricked his thumb. He looked down and saw the draggled flower thrust through the twist of grass. "Oh, pup of wonders!" he exclaimed. "Where did you get that rose?"

Chum sat up and wagged his tail, for his master's tone, instead of ridicule, held a dawning delight. Perhaps the thing had not been intended as a disgrace, after all!

With the first sight of the decoration Valiant had had a sudden memory of a splotch of vivid red against the belted gray-blue of a gown. He grinned appreciatively. "And I warned her," he chuckled. "Told her not to be afraid!" He dusted the blossom painstakingly with his handkerchief and held it to his face—a live brilliant thing, breathing musk-odors of the mid-moon of paradise.

A long time he sat, while the dog dozed and yawned on the shiny cushion beside him. Of a sudden Chum sat up and barked in earnest.

Turning his head, his master saw approaching a dilapidated hack with side lanterns like great goggles and decrepit and palsied curtains. It was drawn by a lean mustard-tinted mule, and on its front sat a colored man of uncertain age, whose hunched vertebrae and outward-crooked arms gave him a curious expression of replete and bulbous inquiry. Abreast of the car he removed a moth-eaten cap.

"Evenin', suh," he said,—"evenin', evenin'."

"Howdy do," returned the other amiably.

"Ah reck'n yo'-ll done had er breck-down wid dat machine-thing dar. Yo' been hyuh 'bout er hour, ain' yo'?"

"Nearer three," said Valiant cheerfully, "but the view's worth it."

A hoarse titter came from the conveyance, which gave forth sundry creakings of leather. "Huyh! Huyh! Dat's so, suh. Dat's so! Hm-m. Reck'n Ah'll be gittin' erlong back." He clucked to the mule and proceeded to turn the vehicle round.

"Hold on," cried John Valiant. "I thought you were bound in the other direction."

"No, suh. Ah'm gwine back whah I come f'om. Ah jus' druv out hyuh 'case Miss Shirley done met me, en she say, 'Unc' Jeffe'son, yo' go 'treckly out de Red Road, 'case er gemman done got stalled-ed.'"

"Oh—Miss Shirley. She told you, did she? What did you say her first name was?"

"Dat's huh fust name, Miss Shirley. Yas, suh! Miss Shirley done said I me ter come en git de gemman whut—whut kinder dawg is yo' got dar?"

"It's a bulldog. Can you give me a lift? I've got that small trunk and—"

"Dat's a right fine dawg, Miss Shirley she mighty fond ob dawgs, too."

"Fond of dogs, is she?" said Valiant. "I might have known it. It was nice of her to send you here, Uncle Jefferson. You can take me and my traps, I suppose?"

"'Pens on whah yo' gwineter," answered Uncle Jefferson sapiently.

"I'm going to Damory Court."

A kind of shocked surprise that was almost stupefaction spread over the other's face, like oil over a pool. "Dam'ry Co'ot! Dat's de old Valiant place. Ain' nobody lives dar. Ah reck'n ain' nobody live dar fer mos' er hun'erd yeahs!"

"The old house has a great surprise coming to it," said Valiant gravely. "Henceforth some one is going to occupy it. How is it anyway?"

"Measurin' by de coonskin en th'ow-in' in de tail, et's erbout two mile. Ain' gwineter live dar yo'se'f, suh, is yo'?"

"I am for the present," was the crisp answer.

Uncle Jefferson stared at him a moment with his mouth open. Then ejaculating under his breath, "Fo' de Lawd! Whut folks gwineter say ter dat!" he shambled to the rear of the motor and began to unship the steamer-trunk. "Whut yo' gwineter do wid dat-ar?" he asked, pointing to the car. "Ah kin come wid ole Sukey—dat's mah mule—en fotch it in de mawnin'. Ain't gwineter rain ter-night no-how."—

This matter having been arranged, they started jogging down the green-bordered road, the bulldog prospecting alongside.

"S'pose'n de Co'ot done ben sold en yo' gwineter fix it up fo' de new ow'nah," hazarded Uncle Jefferson presently.

Valiant did not answer directly. "You say the place hasn't been occupied for many years," he observed. "Did you ever hear why, Uncle Jefferson?"

"Ah done heerd," said the other vaguely, "but Ah disremembahs. Sump'in dat happened befo' Ah come heah f'om ol' Post-Oak Plantation. Reck'n Majah Bristow he know erbout it, er Mis' Judith—dat's Miss Shirley's mothah. Her fathah wus Gen'l Tawm Dandridge, en he died fo' she was bawn."

Shirley Dandridge! A high-sounding name, with something of long-linked culture, of arrogant heritage. In some subtle way it seemed to clothe the personality of which Valiant had had that fleeting roadside glimpse.

"Reck'n yo'-all come f'om New York?" inquired Uncle Jefferson, after a little silence. "So! Dey say dat's er pow'ful big place. But Ah reck'n ol' Richmon's big ernuf fo' me." He clucked to the leisurely mule and added, "Ah bin ter Richmon' onct. Yas, suh! Ah nevah see sech houses—mos' all bigger'n de county co'ot-house."

John Valiant expressed a somewhat absent interest. He was looking thoughtfully at the blossom in his hand, in an absorption through which Uncle Jefferson's reminiscences oozed on.

Diagnosis by Electricity.

For the benefit of the nervous cases that come to the doctor, it has been asserted by Scripture that it is just as necessary to know how emotional they are as it is to know how high the temperature is in a case of fever. Moreover, in many cases it is necessary to find out what experiences in the past or present life of the patient produce emotions. For this purpose the patient sits at ease with hands on the electrodes, which may be so concealed in the arms of his chair that he is unaware that the most intimate processes of his soul are being registered as various words are spoken or various topics of conversation are discussed, the galvanometer showing when a sensitive subject has been touched.—Fred W. Eastman, in Harper's Magazine.

VERY MUCH WRONG NUMBER

Experience Probably Taught Testy Old Gentleman to Be More Careful Whom He Rang Up.

A gentleman was staying in an English provincial town, when he heard that Mr. Moneyboy, his partner in business, was at another town close by, so he rang up his hotel on the telephone.

"Is Mr. Moneyboy there?" he inquired.

"No, he is not," came the response.

"Well, has he engaged rooms?"

"No. We don't reserve rooms here; first come, first served is our rule," came the sharp and somewhat airy reply.

He was rather taken back at the lofty independence they seemed to have in that town.

"Can you tell me," he asked, "if he will stay with you when he returns this evening?"

"He possibly may do," was the answer.

"Look here," roared the irate gentleman, "you're the most impudent jack-in-office that ever spoilt his master's business. Go away and tell some one who knows more about the business of the hotel to come and speak to me."

There was a chuckle at the other end of the wire.

"This isn't a hotel; it's the town jail," said the voice.

The confused gentleman rang off sharp.

Why He Left Scotland.

At a Caledonian banquet in London a Scotsman who had settled in the metropolis made a speech in which Scotland and all things Scottish were so insidiously praised that an Englishman, who sat next him, said when he had finished:

"If Scotland is all that you Scotsmen say it is, why don't you stay there instead of coming here?"

"Weel," answered the Scotsman, "ah'll tell ye hoo it was wi' me. When Ah wis in business in Fife Ah had a fine fowp wis just as clever as mysel' an' Ah couldna say the two o's apart. Sae Ah says' dae' thegither, an' efter ayont, then Ah'd been clever fule mysel'."

Rebutting a Libel.

John D. Rockefeller, talking to a Cleveland clergyman, said one day with a whimsical but rather sad smile:

"From the stories that are told about my love for money and my disregard for humanity, you'd think I was some such monster as the criminal of the anecdote.

"A judge once said to a terrible criminal:

"'And you actually had the heart to murder this poor man for 50 cents!'

"'Well, your honor,' said the criminal, with an injured innocence air, 'well, your honor, what do you expect? Fifty cents here—and 50 cents there—it soon mounts up!'"—Washington Star.

Uric Acid Is Slow Poison

Excess uric acid left in the blood by weak kidneys, causes more diseases than any other poison.

Among its effects are backache, headache, dizziness, irritability, nervousness, drowsiness, "blues," rheumatic attacks and urinary disorders. Later effects are dropsy, gravel or heart disease.

If you would avoid uric acid troubles, keep your kidneys healthy. To stimulate and strengthen weak kidneys, use Doan's Kidney Pills—the best recommended special kidney remedy.

An Alabama Case

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

Mrs. Emma Virginia Harms, 508 S. Jefferson St., Mobile, Ala., says: "Kidney trouble caused me terrible suffering. My knees and joints swelled and my ankles were twice their normal size. For over a year I didn't leave the house and I gave up hope. I had awful pains through my back and was at death's door. After doctors' treatment and everything else had failed, Doan's Kidney Pills came to my aid and in a few weeks, they made me a well woman. I have never suffered since."

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Let's roll up a large majority for water works improvements, and, thereby keep our town on the map.

Read what Professor Ritchie has to say on public sanitation on the front page of this issue. There is food for thought.

If you want office now is the time to come out and let the "dear people" know where you stand. Not many days remain before the election takes place.

Tell your neighbor what beneficent results will follow from the installation of waterworks, and thereby put in a good stab for the civic improvement of Clanton.

Hon. Wm. B. Craig, candidate for Congress, spent Saturday last in Clanton, being scheduled for a speech at the court house. The day was raw and cold, however, and the court room being unheated it was thought best to postpone the speaking until a more propitious time. Mr. Craig put in a good day mingling with the voters on the streets and received a good many assurances of support.

This has certainly been a siege of beautiful spring weather we have been experiencing for the last few days. The night and early mornings are rather cold, but the days are fine and pleasant and it makes one feel that we have seen the last of cold weather. Soon the spring poet will be heard. There has not been many farmers in town recently; they are, no doubt, taking advantage of the ideal weather in preparing to make more 13 cent cotton and hog and hominy.

The Democratic Executive Committee of the Fourth Congressional District met in Anniston on Monday. The committee ordered the election for April 6, the day which the State committee had set. There had been some talk of putting the election off until some time in May, but the early primary met with the approval of both candidates and the committee acted accordingly. This was the wise and sensible thing to do—there was no use of incuring the expense and trouble of two primaries, the farmers would be busy in their crops and the vote would not be large anyway.

In going over our books we find that a number of our subscribers are in the arrears for subscription. Now these are all good men, but have been just a little negligent in this matter. Under the postal regulations a newspaper cannot carry a subscriber who is more than twelve months in arrears for his subscription, and unless these delinquents "come across" we will be compelled in justice to ourselves to drop them from our mailing list. This is a matter in which we had absolutely no control. Uncle Sam is master and his mandate must be obeyed in this regard. We are doing our best to give you a good clean newspaper, and we want your continued support and co-operation. This is a political year and you can ill-afford to be without your county paper. So now don't delay this matter longer, you need the paper and we need the money.

DEATH OF MR. M. P. ROBINSON.

Mr. M. P. Robinson died at his home, Union Grove, after an illness of two weeks. Mr. Robinson had an attack of measles which developed into pneumonia. He was about 75 years of age, and had been a resident of this county two years, coming from Coosa county. He was a highly respected citizen and leaves a widow and several children to mourn his demise. The remains were laid to rest in Union Grove cemetery on Sunday, services being conducted by the Odd Fellows of which order the deceased was a devout member. It was said that the procession was one of the longest that ever attended a funeral in this section, besides the large number of relatives and friends there were nearly 75 Odd Fellows in attendance, several coming from Clanton and Jemison.

The bereft ones have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in their sad hour.

TWO HOME WOMEN TALKED ABOUT HIAR

Two women met in our store the other day, when one of them said:

"My, how pretty your hair looks! What have you been doing to it?"

"Why I have been using Harmony Beautifier for the past two weeks," was the reply.

"Why, indeed!" replied the first woman, that is just what I am using. Isn't it great, and don't you think my hair shows a lot of improvement?"

Harmony Hair Beautifier is becoming all the rage among both men and women who are particular in the care of their hair. It is just what it is named—a hair beautifier. It seems to polish and burnish the hair, making it glossy, silky-soft, and more easy to put up in graceful, wavy folds that "stay put." Contains no oil, and will not change color of hair nor darken it. Simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing it.

To keep your hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This liquid shampoo gives an instantaneons rich, foaming lather, that immediately penetrates to every part of the hair and scalp, insuring a quick and thorough cleansing. It is washed off just as quickly, the entire operation taking only a few moments. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us.—Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

CORN CLUB WORK

Editor Press:

Permit me to say to the boys of the county who are anticipating joining the Boys' Corn Club that we are arranging for more prizes than have heretofore been given. The merchants and others are taking great interest and pride in donating prizes.

Boys, harness your mules and prepare your one acre of land now. I shall be ready to announce the prizes in a few days. Up to date 1 have secured in Clanton eighteen prizes ranging in value from 75 cents to $30.00, making a total of $208.50. Boys, let's make Chilton county one of the best corn growing counties in the State.

T. E. WILLIAMS.

A PLEASANT ENTERTAINMENT

On last Friday evening a very pleasant entertainment was given at the school house by the pupils. It was a "jumped up affair," but the children acquitted themselves well. Despite the inclement weather a fairly good sized crowd was present; and a sum of fifteen dollars was raised by the collection of ten cents admission. This will go toward the raising of the last third of the necessary fifteen hundred dollars for securing a trained nurse and expert in school hygiene to work in the county.

The free term of school is now on and the school is badly crowded. At least two hundred children are now in attendance every day, which is more than the teachers can well instruct. This is an evidence of Clanton's growth. It is generally estimated that one-fifth of our population are children of school age. So counting those of the negro school and those not in attendance of school age, our population can safely be estimated at between fifteen hundred and two thousand. You remember the government census of 1910 gave us only eleven hundred and twenty-three.

FARMERS COMMEND

Comment emphatically friendly to the Administration at Washington is appearing in many agricultural newspapers. The passage and signing of the currency legislation was followed by gratifying expressions of commendation from journals devoted to the interests of the farmer. The farmers are especially pleased with what the Administration is doing for rural credits. They have noted the earnest attention with which the President has dwelt on this subject, in his recommendations to Congress, and they are not slow in making their satisfaction known.

They are also well aware that there is immediate prospect that Congress will take up the topic of rural credit legislation with a detailed comprehensiveness which it was not possible to assign to it in a measure of board general application like the currency bill.

Rural credit is a theme which must be handled by itself. The importance which is justly attached to it by the President and the democratic leaders in Congress form a spendid augury for the farmers who know that their welfare is being taken care of and who are showing themselves appreciative of the fact.—National Monthly.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of an execution issued out of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, and State of Alabama, and to me directed, whereby I am commanded to make the amount of a certain judgment recently obtained against W. Therefore, according to said command, I shall expose for sale, at public auction, all the right, title and interest of the above named W. S. Wallace, in and to the above described property, on Saturday, the 28th day of February, 1914, during the legal hours of sale, at the Court House in Clanton, Ala.

Dated at Clanton, Ala., this 12th day of February, 1914.

Purchase Hardware as a Man-to-Man Proposition

When you come in J. M. Dunn's store you meet him face to face. You and him talk it over, you tell him what you want and what you want to use it for. He gives you the benefit of his knowledge of hardware and suggests the best article for the purpose at the price you wish to pay.

The appearance of hardware is deceiving, most articles of hardware look alike; a poor saw looks very much like a good saw, a poor hammer looks very much like a good one. How can you tell what is of good quality and what is not? By the store which sells itto you. "Water seeks its level." A reliable hardware man will never sell you unreliable hardware. I know hardware from A to Z. I only carry the best lines. I have different grades in every kind of hardware, but I see to it that every grade is the best that can be had for the price. Whatever price you pay you get full value for your money.

Our Enterprises

It is apparent to the most casual observer that the average firm, corporation or individual is more progressive than the average city, state or federal government.

The firm, corporation or individual business enterprise will adopt new methods, employ new inventions far in advance of their employment or adoption by the city, state or federal government. This, too, in spite of the fact that the public servant has time and machinery for research and investigation.

The business enterprise will investigate and invest in an automobile truck far in advance of the purchase of an auto-garbage truck, or an auto-police patrol by the city government.

The business enterprise will maintain a school for employees and pay the teachers well and promptly, while many of our counties find schools a scarcity, and the teachers often go long periods before receiving their salaries.

The corporations maintain laboratories and stations for experimental purposes, while the states grant inadequate support to the commendable movement for agricultural schools and colleges.

The individual, firm or corporation works out successfully and makes money for the stockholders, while the city, state and nation is struggling with taxes and tariff.

And yet the average candidate for public office announces that he is a Progressive Democrat, or a Progressive Republican, as the case may be, and makes an appeal for votes on the ground that he has discovered a remedy for all the public ills and has the ability to apply it. He is elected to office, and the same old order of things continues in the same old way, the only explanation being that his efforts to lead the public out of darkness into light is backed by the "reactionary" business enterprises.

The L. & N. is a successful business enterprise. That success was won through constant labor and untiring research in an effort to discover the best methods and devices for properly conducting a railroad and developing the territory through which the road operates.

Instead of devoting its time and energies to picking flaws and finding fault with the politicians, the L. & N. has devoted its time and energies to a careful study and analysis of the methods by which other enterprises succeeded; to improving on those methods, and to applying them to its own business.

The L. & N. has found time—has taken time and spent money and found it to be a good investment—to offer helpful suggestions and render practical assistance to farms and farmers; to manufacturers and dealers; to mines and miners; to industries and industrious individuals.

And yet there are some people who charge the L. & N. with being a reactionary, with being ultra conservative, with blocking progress.

We ask the thoughtful people to give consideration to these things, and urge them to join with the L. & N. in its effort for constructive development along practical and successful lines.

The L. & N. has unexcelled passenger and freight facilities which cannot be utilized to the maximum until the business enterprises in the territory through which its lines operate are developed to the maximum. To co-operate for the speedy consummation of this object is good business, and is the earnest desire of the L. & N.

TALK OF GOETHALS

RUMORS THAT PANAMA CANAL BUILDER WILL BE CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT.

SAID TO BE A PROGRESSIVE

Wilson May Announce Adherence to One Term Principle—Senator Borah Is in the Running for the Republican Nomination.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—Some of the Democratic members of congress, hard-headed politicians a good many of them, think it is not by any means certain that President Wilson will not announce at some later time that he is pledged to the "principle" of one term that was announced in the Democratic platform. It will be remembered that the Democrats at Mr. Bryan's suggestion put into the platform the declaration "and we pledge the candidate of this convention to this principle," the principle being the one-term principle.

Now the political rumor has it that all the men, including, of course, Mr. Wilson, who think that he has a show of being nominated by the Democrats next time, are beginning to fear that he may have George W. Goethals, the chief engineer of the Panama canal and now the zone's governor, as an opponent in the next campaign. Republican leaders from time to time have whispered the name Goethals in their conferences. It is perfectly true that even some of the members of the standpat faction in the Republican party still seem to have some kind of a hope that means will be found to endorse Theodore Roosevelt for the nomination, without compelling the old party to give over the name Republican.

The old party chieftains seem to think that they will be obliged to nominate somebody with a strong personal appeal if there is to be any hope of success, because there has been thus far no sharp evidences that the Democrats are going to make a mess of things and undo themselves.

Think Goethals Has Ambitions.

It has been intimated here and there in Washington that men who know the governor of the Panama canal zone think he has shown some signs of an awakening ambition to be president. Colonel Goethals, judging by what he has done, probably has his share of wisdom and while army and navy officers notoriously have been flounderers when they have entered the swamp of politics, Goethals probably might prove to be an exception. Everybody remembers Admiral Dewey's troubles as soon as he showed a disposition of willingness to think on high civil honors.

While the Republicans have been whispering about Goethals and the possibility of nominating him and trusting to his supposed great personal popularity to pull through, it has been told to them also in whispers that the zone's governor is a Progressive. In the present frame of mind of the Republican leaders the fact that Goethals may be a Progressive perhaps makes little difference, for all they will have to do will be to knock the capital out, spell progressive with a small letter and add Republican with a capital after an inserted hyphen.

Borah in the Running.

It seems as certain as things can seem so far in advance that, unless the Democrats make some awful blunder, the Republican party next time will nominate a man who has been consistently progressive or who can prove that he has become a progressive even if conversion came at a late hour. It did not take Champ Clark's word of prophecy to put William E. Borah into the front rank of runners for the Republican prize. The Goethals matter remains yet to be sounded to its depths.

Within a day or two Senator Borah has declared that he does not consider the third party as a stable organization. He says that as soon as Theodore Roosevelt says the word the third party will crumble. Mr. Borah believes the colonel will say the word, and while the senator will not go as far as this, he probably believes that if the colonel says the word that will dissolve the Progressive party he will also say the word that will make him the candidate of the Republican party.

As for this, one only has to read the colonel's pledge, signed, sealed and delivered just before he went to South America. That pledge probably will stand against any prophesy which the gentleman from Idaho chooses to make, even if it be uttered in the finest spirit of Idaho self-sacrifice.

Colonel Roosevelt will return from his southern speaking, hunting and exploring trip in about four weeks. When he returns Progressives say that he will repeat, if he shall deem it necessary, the pledge which he made before sailing.

Business Men Are Shy.

President Wilson has expressed himself as very much surprised because business men throughout the country have not responded in great numbers to the invitation extended by the administration and by the committees of congress to come to Washington to enter their pleas in abatement of the legislation which is aimed against the trusts.

It seems that Mr. Wilson and the Democratic members of congress expected that the business men would come here in a rush to make themselves heard in the committee rooms before the anti-trust legislation was put to passage. The business men have been conspicuous by their absence. It is charged by the Republicans that the corporations of the country have been lambasted so by the Democrats that the business men do not care to come to Washington even to make themselves heard, and this has led a Republican to compare the present condition to an old time melodrama and what he says perhaps is worth telling, even if people do not agree with him. Here is the Republican's story:

Like Melodrama of Nellie.

"In a melodrama called 'Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model,' the villain meets Nellie, the beautiful one, on the Brooklyn bridge and attempts to throw her over the rail into the East river. She is rescued just in time.

"In the next act the villain seizes the fair Nellie and ties her to the track in the subway. A guard rescues the sweet girl just in time to prevent her from being run down by the express train.

"In the third act the villain meets Nellie on the platform of an elevated railroad station and tries to throw her into the street. Again she is rescued, and the villian is baffled.

"In the next act the villain meets Nellie on the street and she shrinks from him, whereat he inquires: 'Nellie, why do you fear me?'

"If you can find a parallel in this story to the case of the business men who do not want to come to Washington to be heard in anti-trust matters, why find it. I think I found it some time ago"

Wilson and Suffragists.

There has just been another parade of suffragists on Pennsylvania avenue It was by no means as big a parade as that one of March, 1913, but the participants marched in behalf of the same cause—woman suffrage. Everybody probably remembers the trouble which the women had in March last trying to make their way through the crowds of rowdies and worse who insulted them at every turn. The lack of police protection for the women at that time nearly cost several officials their jobs. This time the women marched without interference and under perfect safe-guarding.

The last parade was composed of working women from the industrial centers of many states. The procession formed at the capitol and marched up Pennsylvania avenue to the White House, where the leaders pleaded with President Wilson to give the light of his approval to the cause of suffrage. The president gave the suffragists a verbal expression of welcome and then gave a pantomimic exhibition of sidestepping which was the counterpart of his "step of evasion" on a previous occasion when the women called on him to ask him to urge the house of representatives to authorize the appointment from its membership of a committee on suffrage.

The suffrage organization under whose direction the women were marching and pleading is not entirely removed from the suspicion that it is antagonistic in its spirit to the Democratic order, a spirit moved to resentment because it is the Democratic party, as the organization views it, which is doing what it can to defeat the women's cause.

There are troubles in the suffrage ranks in Washington and the thorns seem to multiply daily. All the women are moving to the same end and their paths are different, but they run close enough together to allow the pilgrims to exchange reproving words and occasionally to reach across and to indulge in a little hair-pulling.

Can't Sidestep Much Longer.

Suffrage, men here say, is bound to come and it makes absolutely no difference about how it is to come. The days of sidestepping everybody seems to believe soon will be numbered. There is too much at stake in 1916, and also, by the way, in 1914, to make it seem wise for men with ambitions to continue to voice disapproval when women already are enfranchised in many places and soon are to be enfranchised in all places.

There are a few curious things to be found in this jumble of troubles which is affecting the women suffrage cause at this time. The congressional union's headquarters are in Washington and as everybody knows, here are also headquarters of the congressional branch of the National Suffrage association. Mrs. Medill McCormick, chairman of the latter organization's branch in Washington, takes the view that the women should work for suffrage and "be antagonistic to candidates for congress no matter to which party they belong provided they are opposed to the 'great cause.'"

Union After the Democrats.

The chief desire of the congressional union just at present seems to be to defeat Democrats. Pretty soon it is expected the charge will be laid against the union that it is working in behalf of the cause of the progressive Republicans, of whom the chieftains today are Bristow, Borah, Cummins and La Follette.

In one of the Washington papers within a day there has appeared an article from the pen of a noted suffragist. She does not like Theodore Roosevelt. She charges that the National Suffrage association through its Washington branch is working first for the Progressive party and second, if at all, for suffrage. So we have it that the congressional union is raging away at the Democrats perhaps in behalf of the progressive Republicans; that the congressional branch of the National Suffrage association is working in behalf of the Progressive party and that both "think as much of the opinion of the thing as they do of the suffrage of the thing."

SENATOR BACON PASSES TO BEYOND

STATE AND NATION IN DEEP MOURNING FOR SENATOR BACON OF GEORGIA.

GEORGIA PAYS HIM HONORS

Passing of Senator Causes President Wilson to Lament and Moves Colleagues Almost to Tears.

Passing of Georgian Lamented by Wilson.

Washington.—When President Wilson heard of Senator Bacon's death, he wrote the following statement:

"All who knew Senator Bacon will sincerely deplore his death. It deprives the senate of one of its oldest and most experienced member; a man who held, with something like reverence, to the traditions of the great body of which he was so long a part, and who sought, in all that he did, to maintain its standards of statesmanship and service. The great state of Georgia will miss her distinguished son and servant. My own association with him had been of the most cordial, and, to me, helpful sort. I particularly profited by his experience in foreign affairs."

Washington.—Senator Bacon is dead. While Washington was wrapped in the white mantle of the first snowstorm of the season, the soul of this great statesman and modest soldier, who had defended Georgia on the battlefield and in the halls of congress, passed away.

AUGUSTUS O. BACON

The end came at Garfield hospital with a suddenness that astounded his physicians, his intimate friends and the world of official Washington. At noon his condition was not thought alarming. Shortly afterwards he had a sinking spell, and at ten minutes after two he was gone. An infected clot of blood, which reached the heart, caused his sudden death.

President Wilson issued a statement expressing his deep regret. Vice President Marshall, members of the Georgia delegation and intimate friends in the senate, hastened to the hospital to show their respect and to urge that all the marks of a great nation's honor be accepted by the bereaved relatives.

Following the official funeral, the body was taken to Georgia, accompanied by an honorary escort of senators and representatives. The funeral was in Macon Thursday.

Northeast in Grip of a Blizzard.

New York.—A snowstorm, said to rival in severity the famous blizzard of 1888, raged to the accompaniment of zero weather in the upper Hudson valley, the Mohawk valley and the northern and western parts of New York state, tying up smaller railroad trolley lines and paralysing communication generally. All mails were delayed. Four deaths were caused in New York City by the storm, and the total fatalities due to the cold spell and stormy conditions numbered seventeen.

British Marines in Mexico.

Washington.—A small legation guard of marines and machine guns from a British cruiser at Vera Cruz to the legation in Mexico City was ordered only after the state department had been advised by the British through the American embassy in London. Threats that the British position would be made a particular object of attack in the event of a public uprising led to the precautionary measure and it was intimated at the state department that Mexican authorities not only were willing but anxious for it.

Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, wife of a New York banker, who in company with her husband has just started on the first conjugal cross-country "hike" in the history of the suffragist movement in this country. Mrs. Laidlaw is the chairman of the suffragist movement in Manhattan and has been an indefatigable worker for the cause. During her visit to the western coast she and her husband will attend the annual state convention of the "Suffs" at Reno, and will investigate the alleged attempted intrigue of the antis with the saloon keepers and liquor dealers against the suffragist cause.

EXPLAIN INCOME TAX LAW

RULES TO BE OBSERVED BY INCOME TAX PAYERS OF COUNTRY.

Treasury Officials Issue Booklet to Clear Up Misunderstanding About Law.

Washington.—After weeks of study of the complexities of the income tax law, treasury officials issued a 90-page booklet, christened it "Regulations No. 33," and sent it forth to collectors of internal revenue in the expectation that it will clear up many of the misunderstandings concerning the law which have arisen throughout the country.

It takes twenty-three pages of the book to set forth the law itself, but sixty pages are used in telling how the net income to be taxed is ascertained by the taxpayer, when and where tax must be paid, what penalties will be imposed for non-payment, what exemptions and deductions will be allowed. Many pages are devoted to an explanation of that part of the law imposing a 1 per cent. tax on the income of all corporations, which replaces the old corporation tax.

Although officials are confident that this booklet will prove a guide to taxpayers which will settle many apparently difficult problems, there will be other regulations in the future when new points are raised. The book does not contain a new set of regulations, but is a compilation in compact form of the ones already issued, with explanations of points never before discussed.

Under the law, partnerships are not subject to the tax, but the regulations provide that annual profits from a partnership paid to members shall be included in their returns, and where such profits are undistributed and unpaid they must be ascertained and included in the individual's returns for taxation just the same.

When persons taxable refuse to make the proper list or return or makes false return, the regulaitnos provide that the proper collector of internal revenue shall, after due notice, make the return for such person and the tax shall be assessed on this return, with a 50 or 100 per cent. penalty added. Returns must be verified by oaths or affirmation. Returns shall be sent by collectors to the commissioner of internal revenue in Washington by registered mail. Taxes unpaid after June 30 shall bring a penalty of 5 per cent.

Flirting Banned in Zion City.

Zion City, Ill.—An ordinance for the "promotion of public morals and the regulation of the conduct of citizens" was enacted by the city council. The first section of the ordinance makes it unlawful to do any act, suggest any conduct or say any word that is profane, vulgar or immoral, or that has a tendency to offend public decency. The second section makes it unlawful for any person in a loud or boisterous tone to ask any other to accompany him or her for drive or walk.

$5,000,000 Increase in Postal Measure.

Washington.—Nearly five million dollars has been added to the total of the postoffice appropriation bill as it passed the house when the senate committee completed its work on the measure. It carries $31,250,000, the largest sundum ever appropriated for postal purposes. Maximum salaries for rural mail carriers would be increased $100 and $200 under the bill to $1,000 and $1,200. For this purpose approximately $4,000,000 is added to the bill. Other increases which would be made would affect 14,000 postoffices.

Different Colors of Clouds.

In answer to a subscriber's question concerning the color of clouds, the Nature and Science department of St. Nicholas says:

"White clouds are those which are so thin that sunlight comes through them, or else they are in such a position that the side seen by the observer is lighted by the sunlight. Black clouds are those that are so thick, or dense, that little sunlight passes through them, and at the same time are not illuminated by sunlight on the side seen by the observer. It is these heavy, large clouds that are most likely to produce rain.—St. Nicholas.

Useful—After All.

The waiter was trying to look unconcerned, but at the same time kept an eye on the guest whom he had just served with a portion of stewed steak.

He had sampled that stewed steak himself, and was feeling doubtful about his tip. He was astonished, therefore, when the customer beckoned to him and asked:

"Can you get me two more portions of this steak?"

"Yes, sir! Certainly, sir!" replied the waiter, wondering whether, after all, the man were not an ostrich in disguise. "And some more potatoes, sir?"

"Oh, no, no! I only want that steak to patch my boots!"

SCHOOL TEACHERS.
Also Have Things to Learn.

"For many years I had used coffee and refused to be convinced of its bad effect upon the human system," writes a veteran school teacher.

"Ten years ago I was obliged to give up my much-loved work in the public schools after years of continuous labor. I had developed a well defined case of chronic coffee poisoning.

"The troubles were constipation, flutterings of the heart, a thumping in the top of my head, and various parts of my body, twitching of my limbs, shaking of my head and, at times after exertion, a general "gone" feeling, with a toper's desire for very strong coffee. I was a nervous wreck for years.

"A short time ago friends came to visit us and they brought a package of Postum with them, and urged me to try it. I was prejudiced because some years back I had drunk a cup of weak, tasteless stuff called Postum which I did not like at all.

"This time, however, my friends made the Postum according to directions on the package, and it won me. Soon I found myself improving in a most decided fashion.

"The odor of boiling coffee no longer tempts me. I am so greatly benefited by Postum that if I continue to improve as I am now, I'll begin to think I have found the Fountain of Perpetual Youth. This is no fancy letter but stubborn facts which I am glad to make known."

Name given by Postum Co, Battle Creek, Mich. Write for a copy of "The Road to Wellville."

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum must be well boiled.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

WOULD SIT DOWN COULDN'T GET UP

And This Lady Would Do a Little Work and Have to Go to Bed for an Hour.

Columbia, Tenn.—Mrs. Jessie Sharp, of this town, says: "I was a sufferer from womanly troubles for five years, and it got me down so, I could not do any of my work. Would have to lie in bed nearly all the time. When I would sit down, couldn't get up, without pulling at something to help me.

I would do a little work, and have to go to bed for an hour.

I would have those awful trembly spells, and a swimming in my head. I surely felt that I had rather be dead, than be in my condition.

I finally wrote to the Ladies Advisory Department, of the Chattanooga Medicine Co., and they advised me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, for my troubles. I did and now I am sound and well of all my troubles. The second bottle helped me so much, that I didn't have to go to bed any more.

I certainly feel that Cardui is worth its weight in gold to every suffering woman."

If you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments so common to women, try Cardui.

For more than 50 years, Cardui has been used with entire satisfaction, by hundreds of thousands of weak and ailing women. It will surely help you, too.

Face and Fight Worry.

Realize your worries for what they are worth—for what they really are. Face them—stare them in the face. Leave the future to the future, and all your worrying and anxious wondering will not alter it an atom. All you do is to burden yourself with your exaggerated conception of your worry and to carry it with you upon your back into your future. Face it, realize its limits and fight it.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.—Adv.

The Man Without Folly.

William Dean Howells, apropos of the tercentenary of the birth of La Rochefoucauld, quoted at a dinner in Boston some of the Famous Frenchman's maxims.

"La Rochefoucauld," said Mr. Howells, "wasn't the sorrowful misanthrope some people think, but a gay and gallant figure. His character was best portrayed, indeed, by one of his best maxims:

"'He who is without folly is not so wise as he thinks.'"

DIZZY, HEADACHY, SICK, "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

CORN EXHIBIT FROM SOUTH

Southern Railway Makes Attractive Showing of South's Corn Record At Dallas.

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 12.—An exhibit attracting much favorable comment among visitors to the National Corn Exposition, which was opened in this City February 10, is that made by the Southern Railway, Mobile and Ohio Railroad, Queen and Crescent Route, Georgia Southern and Florida Railway, and Virginia and Southwestern Railway, showing what Southeastern farmers have accomplished in growing corn, and displaying agricultural products from all the nine states in the Southeast along the Southern Railway and allied lines. With a single exception, no other railways in the country are making exhibits at the exposition, and the Southern's exhibit is the only one from most of the Southeastern states, only three or four of which are represented through their state colleges.

The exhibit consists of corn grown along the lines of the various roads and to a great extent by farmers who raised their crops under supervision of field agents of the railway companies' departments of farm improvement work. Grains, grasses, hay, cotton, vegetables and other agricultural products, and apples and other fruits, both fresh and in jars, all grown in the South, are displayed.

A folder containing information about the corn growing record of the South, issued by the land and industrial department of Southern Railway Company, is being handed visitors to the Corn Exposition, and is also being distributed throughout the country for the purpose of attracting desirable settlers to the Southeast.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK BETTER

Spring Buying By Interior Jobbers and Large Retailers Noted at Large Markets.

New York.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade says:

"There has been a shifting of activities in trade and industry, but no apparent abatement of the sanguine sentiment hitherto in evidence. Activity has been chiefly noticeable in the larger primary markets, where good reports as to past business have been and are being confirmed, and in the ranks of final distributors, who have felt the beneficial effects of a full week of cold weather upon retail trade in heavy wearing apparel.

"In iron and steel and in cotton and woolen manufacturing, the effects of good January ordering are now visible in large outputs and increased capacity employed. Then, too, the first wave of spring buying by interior jobbers and large retailers is noted at the larger markets, where, however, buying is chiefly of small lots widely distributed.

"Business failures for the week were 309, which compares with 285 in 1913.

"Wheat exports for the week aggregate 4,092,408 bushels, against 4,354,168 last year."

New York.—Dun's trade review says:

Distribution of seasonable merchandise has been stimulated by zero temperatures which have accelerated the movement of heavy weight apparel and fuel.

Recent stormy weather also broadened the demand for footwear and the general business situation reflects gradual betterment.

It is significant that the leading interests in iron and steel reported a quotable gain in unfilled tons during January, following on year of continuous losses. This obviously means that the great basic industry is recovering from previous depression, notwithstanding the fact that the railroads still confine their purchases to the closest possible limits.

In the matter of prices the general tendency is training upward with producers reluctant to contract for future business except at advance over former levels.

Failures this week numbered 403 in the United States against 320 last year and 51 in Canada, corresponding with 33 a year before.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES.

New York.—Flying in airships is a "hazardous undertaking" from the accident and life insurance companies' point of view, according to an opinion given by the appellate division of the supreme court.

Seattle, Wash.—Richard A. Ballinger, formerly secretary of the interior, was called as a witness for the defense in the trial of Charles F. Munday and Archie W. Shields, charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States of Alaska coal lands.

Baltimore.—Fire destroyed the interior of the government bonded warehouse and new immigration pier of the Pennsylvania railroad at Canton, a suburb, causing a loss estimated at $125,000.

Havana.—Eugenio Trincotas, a Spaniard, editor of the satirical weekly, El Tiburon, was expelled from the country because of attacks on the government. The police placed the editor on board the steamer Xpitanga, which sailed for Spain.

Lima, Peru.—Two candidates for the presidency of Peru, which now has a provisional head as the result of the recent overthrow of President Billinghurst, have been announced. They are Joe Pardo, former President of the republic, and Dr. Arsenio Barand.

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa.—"When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Adv.

After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. A GLASS OF SALTS WILL END KIDNEY-BACKACHE

Says Drugs Excite Kidneys and Recommends Only Salts, Particularly If Bladder Bothers You.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, luster and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Takes this in liquid or tablet form as a tonic and regulator!

Mrs. Ruth D. Richardson, of Bentley, Mason Co., W. Va., says: "I enjoy it a pleasure to testify to the wonderful curative value of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For some years I suffered greatly with weaknesses peculiar to my sex. I was troubled by several physicians, but got practically no relief. One of my friends told me of the good results of your Favorite Prescription. I went to the drug store and got a bottle and began using it, with the 'Pleasant Pellets.' I commenced to get better. I never knew what discouragement was, for I was always sick and complained and made others as well as myself unhappy. So you see what a debt I owe you!"

GIVE THAT PUNY CHILD THIS GUARANTEED REMEDY

If your child is under-weight, listless, ailing, liable to get sick easily, it needs a medicine to build its weight and strength. For this purpose there is nothing else we know of that we can so strongly endorse as Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. The remarkable success of this splendid medicine is due to the fact that it contains ingredients that tone the nerves, enrich the blood and furnish to the entire system the strength, weight and health-building substances it needs. And it does all this without injuring the stomach. In fact, Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is not only pleasant to take, but even the most sensitive stomach is benefitted by it, and the digestion is improved. On the other hand it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs, which most parents object to giving their children. It does its good work by taking hold of the weakness and builds the body up to its natural strength, at the same time making it strong to resist disease.

If Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion doesn't build your child up, feed the stunted, puny muscle, and make the little one lively, strong well, and full of the animal spirits children are meant by nature to have, come back and tell us and get your money back. We don't want you to lose a cent. We think think this is no more than fair, and it leaves you no cause to hesitate. For old people also—for convalescent—for all who are nervous, tired-out, run-down, no matter what the cause—we offer Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion with the same guarantee of entire satisfaction or money back. Sold only at the 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. $1.00.—Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

Probate Judge

Mass Meeting at Court House Friday Night to Discuss Waterworks

A STRONG APPEAL IN FAVOR OF MR. KOLB

Editor Press:

Permit me please, to say a few words as to the gubernatorial race here in our State. I wish to address old Confederate soldiers, especially, and to endeavor to impress upon them the duty we owe to our illustrious comrade, Capt. Reuben F. Kolb.

This is his third race for the office of governor of Alabama, and this is the last time, probably, that we, as Confederates, will have an opportunity to vote for one of our comrades for the highest office within the gift of the people of our state. Captain Kolb served during the civil war in a gallant manner until the close of hostilities in 1865; he has served as a public official in Alabama, and there is not a blemish on his character or administration of duties.

I have known Captain Kolb as a school-mate, as a soldier, as army officer and as a state official and I have never known him to be or countenance anything that was other than pure and elevating.

So, comrades, let us rally to the support of our comrade, enlist under his banner, and on election day snow his opponents under an avalanche of ballots.

W. J. BETHUNE,
Capt. 15th Ala. Infy.

L. R. SAWYER TO THE VOTERS OF CHILTON

Editor Press:

With your permission, I will, through your columns, address the people of Chilton county in behalf of my candidacy for Commissioner from the First District.

In asking for the office of Commissioner I realize fully that I am asking much of the people of my county, still, I feel equal to the task, and I wish to serve the people in that capacity.

All of my life it has been the height of my ambition to render service, and it is for this reason that I appeal to the voters of old Chilton to support me, and thereby give me a chance to prove my worth as a servant of the people regardless of political faith or creed.

With my education, business experience and ability to do things, I feel sure that I can render valuable service in furthering the progress of the county.

My experience, both as a teacher in rural schools and farmer in a rural district has placed me in position to study and know the great needs of the common people.

No class of people are more handicaped than those who till the soil and live in the country; you often hear the cry "back to the farm, boys," such an expression in the face of existing conditions in the country, is, I think, perfectly absurd.

What ambitious boy or girl is going to give up paidted houses, churches, school buildings, social pleasures, and last, but not least, paved and Macadamized thoroughfares for the uncomfortable buildings, muddy roads and bridgeless streams which they have discarded. In my opinion this great problem of repopulating abandoned farms and the closing of new ones will never be accomplished by merely exclaiming "back to the farm, boys." Something radical must be done. We can not remain conservative and accomplish anything that will tend to remove the cause for wanting to give up life in the country. Therefore, it behooves us all to get together and make a hard fight for social betterment and industrial development. When we have shown such enthusiasm we will encourage new settlers, our forests clothed slopes and valleys will be invaded. The peal of the woodman's ax will be heard as he fells the trees clearing fields and building new homes. The more homes, farms and industries we have the greater our revenue, which is an all-important factor in the upbuilding of a country or meeting obligations.

To me, this question of country development is two-fold. We not only attract new comers or settlers, but we add so much to our own pleasure and comfort. Therefore, I am for majority rule, good roads, good schools and keeping the boys and girls in the country: the home of purity.

If I receive the nomination in April, which I hope I will, then I am going to cover Chilton county like the dew covers Dixie and win the fight. Again soliciting your vote, I am, very respectfully,

L. R. SAWYER.

A SOCIAL AFFAIR AT MAPLESVILLE

On Wednesday evening the social set of Maplesville were summoned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. G P. Whitsell, v de- lightful dinner was serv The spacious dining room was ecorated with potted flowers, while in the center of the table stood minature twin trees which made a unique center piece. After the dinner cards and forty-two games were played, and it was not until a late hour did the happy throng adjourn.

Those invited to partake of the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Whitsell were as follows: Mrs. C. F. Smith, of Louisville, Ky.; Messrs. Harting and Saunders, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Northup, Dr. and Mrs. V. B. Potts, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Foshee, Mr. and Mrs. Harvie Wylie, Miss Minnie Branch, Mrs. Hull, Miss Cora Allison, R. P. Richardson, Walter S. Moore, J. P. Foreman and T. D. Woods.

The occasion was, by far, the most enjoyable of the year, and we hope only the beginning of many more.

MR. CHAS. B. COX

HIS FRIENDS ANNOUNCE HIM AS A CANDIDATE FOR COMMISSIONER.

The friends of Mr. Chas. B. Cox, of Beat one, realizing the need of business men on the Board of County Commissioners, have urged that gentleman to enter the race for Commissioner from the First District. Charley Cox, as he is known by his friends, is a man of unquestioned business ability, he has demonstrated that beyond doubt, and his presence on the board would be a guarantee that the funds of the county would be handled in a just and business-like manner: and that the public roads and bridges will receive careful attention. Mr. Cox's experience in building bridges and road work renders him a most excellent man for this important position. Mr. Cox says he will wage a warm campaign and is confident of election.

HON. E. B. DEASON

ANNOUNCES FOR CONGRESS.

In answer to the urgent requests from over the Fourth District, Judge E. B. Deason formally announced for Congress Tuesday night.

All day Tuesday Judge Deason was deluged with letters and telegrams from representative and influential men of the district urging him to make the race.

On Tuesday night at the court house an enthusiastic and rousing meeting was held, attended by a large delegation of prominent citizens from all parts of the district, as well as a large number of Chilton county citizens.

Mr. C. F. Jones presided at the meeting, and after stating its object, called upon members of the visiting delegation for expressions. Several responded with ringing speeches, setting forth Judge Deason's fitness and qualifisations for the office, and the commendatory references to him were received with the greatest enthusiasm, A number of letters were read by Dr. Mc Leod, of Talladega county, from prominent men of the district, expressing the sentiment of a large per cent of the voters.

A committee of five was selected by the chairman to retire with Judge Deason and ascertain if he would consent to be a candidate The committee, after deliberating a few moments. reported to the meeting that he had agreed to make the race. and the Judge was introduced as the next Congressman. Mr. Deason tendered his thanks for the honor, and assured those assembled that he was entering the fight to win, and would wage a vigorous campaign and that he felt confident of being overwhelmingly elected.

Judge Deason, the new candidate, was elected Probate Judge of Chilton in 1910, and, during his incumbency has made a splendid record. He is a good clean man, a high-toned Christian gentleman, highly esteemed by the people of his home county, and it will be a source of gratification to them to rally to his support and do him honor. Mr. Deason will make an ideal representative, one who the people of Chilton county, as well as the entire Fourth district will feel justly proud.

MR. D. BUTLER LOWE FOR SHERIFF

The announcement of this gentleman for the office of Sheriff will be gratifying news to his many friends in Clanton, those among whom he has resided all of his life. Mr. Lowe has always been true to the principles of Democracy—has never been known to scratch a democratic ticket and has done his share in trying to bring Chilton back to the democratic fold. Mr. Lowe is a man whose character is above reproach and is highly esteemed by his host of friends for his strict fidelity to duty and honesty of purpose. Mr. Lowe is not without experience in the Sheriff's office—he was a deputy under former Sheriffs Hayes and Moore, and it is known to all who remember those days as to how well he performed his duties—and if the democrats see fit to make him the nominee, as his friends believe he will be, he will, no doubt, make a splendid executive officer.

PTOMAINE POISONING

ALMOST CAUSES DEATH OF SEVERAL CITIZENS OF CLANTON.

A quantity of hog's head cheese or souse meat, brought to Clanton on Friday last, by a gentleman from the western part of the county and sold to local dealers, came very near costing the lives of a number of citizens. The meat was eaten for supper Friday night and its victims were the families of Dr. T. J. Marcus, Mr. J. P. Gore, Miss Kumie Morgan, sister of Mrs. J. F. Palmer, and five traveling men who were stopping at the Palmer hotel.

A few hours after eating supper those who partook of this favorite delicacy were taken ill with ptomaine poisoning and every physician in town was pressed into service. Drs. Arthur and Sam Johnson were hastily summoned to attend upon the suffering at the Palmer House and Dr. V. J. Gragg was called to the home of Dr. Marcus and Mr. Gore. The physicians were kept busy for some time ministering to the relief of the suffering, and but for their valiant work it is probable that some of the worst affected ones would have lost their lives. Some of the victims suffered less serious consequences from eating the meat than others, this being due to the fact, perhaps, that some having a more particular fondness for souse, ate more than did the others. One of the men at the hotel was in a serious condition for several hours, and only by hard work was his life was saved. Dr. Marcus and Mr. Gore were also more seriously affected than the other members of their families, being unable to go about their duties for three or four days.

Fortunately there were no fatalities, and aside from being left in a weakened and dazed condition the victims are none the worse for their terrible experience.

It is not known what caused the souse to produce ptomaine, as it is said that the proper vessels were used when it was cooked and put up. A specimen of the meat was sent to the State Chemist at Auburn on Monday for examination.

The aftermath of this awful affair is not without its humor, and it is real amusing to hear some relate their terrible experiences. Dr. Marcus, speaking to the Press man says it seems just like a dream, and declares it is the worst thing that ever struck Clanton. Mr. Gore speaks of it in terms equally as strong, and it is a dead cinch that 'Old Heck' will be dead a long time before they eat any more souse.

HON. W. B. CRAIG

QUITS THE RACE FOR CONGRESS

Hon. Wm. B. Craig, who three weeks ago entered the race for Congress against Congressman Blackmon, on Thursday last announced his withdrawal, and, in the following letter to the voters of the Fourth District, gives his reasuns for so doing:

"Four years ago I voluntarily retired from Congress and returned to my law practice, after serving my district for two terms. Several weeks ago it was made to appear to me by reputable citizens of the district, acting from what I believed to be patriotic motives, and in all honesty and sincerity, that it was the desire of the people of the district to again have me represent them in Congress. Upon this, and against my own personal wishes and interests, I consented to enter the race, making it known at the time that I would not consider entering except from a sense of duty, and that I would not consent to be put in the attitude of seeking an office which I voluntarily relinquished.

"Since making my announcement, I have made a trip through some parts of the district and have received many communications on the subject. I find that a large number of the people do desire a change in the administration of the office of Congressman, and in many places my candidacy has met with enthusiasm. However, in other places, and among many people, there is a disposition to treat my candidacy as a matter voluntary and personal to myself, and that such people are either completely apathetic, or entirely satisfied with conditions as they exist.

Embarrass Friends.

"I find also that many men who have been and are my close personal and political friends, and who helped materially in sending me to the Sixtieth and Sixty-first Congresses, will, by reason of my late announcement, be seriously embarrassed by a contest between Mr. Blackmon and me, and that my continuance in the race may be at the expense of putting me in a posltion of ungratefulness to them.

"Having stated that I would not seek the office, and that nothing but an abiding belief that the district at large desired my services. would enduce me to run for Congress, and being now convinced that there is a large element in the district that desire no change, and that in order to prosecute the campaign I shall have assumed the roll of an office seeker, and that, too, at a far greater outlay than I had reason to anticipate in the beginning. I do not feel that there is any duty confronting me which requires that I change my plans of life from that of being a lawyer to that of being an aspirant for public office.

"This decision has not been reached by me except after carefully weighing every phase of the situation with a view of finding out what is my duty and following it, having at all times due regard for the enthusiastic support which has been accorded my candidacy in many places, and for which I am profoundly grateful. I believe that it is more just to myself and more considerate of the friends who were instrumental in my entering the race, and are supporting me, to state that I believe both they and I were in a measure mistaken in our conclusions, than it would be to go on and prosecute a campaign which bids fair to put me, their friend, in the attitude of asking for and seeking as a personal matter, the same political preference which had at a former time been voluntarily relinquished by me, and I do therefore, at this time, and before the campaign has been fairly begun on either side, state that I shall not be a candidate for Congress from this district in the coming primary."

DEATH OF C. C. MESSER

Mr. C. C. Messer, aged 38 years, a prominent and thrifty farmer, died at his home, near Verbena, on Monday after a short illness and was buried on Tuesday by the Masonic fraternity of which he was a consistent member. The deceased was well thought of in this section and his demise comes as a severe shock to his many friends.

A NEW BRICK BUILDING FOR CLANTON

Work was commenced Monday morning on razing the old Johnson building at the southwest corner of the square on Main street, formerly occupied by C. R. Mullins.

Dr. S. E. Johnson, owner of the lot, is now having plans drawn by a Montgomery architect for the erection of a two-story brick building. When the plans have been drawn the contract for the building will be let at once.

The new structure will be 40x80 feet, with press brick sides and solid plate glass front, and strong tile flooring, and will front Second avenue and Seventh street.

The entire lower and upper floor will be rented by the Upchurch Drug Co., who on account of their large increase in business must have larger and more commodious quarters. The upper floor will be used for offices.

The new building when completed will be equipped throughout with the finest and most up-to-date furniture and will be one of our most beautiful business structures. Watch Clanton grow.

P. H. HEADLEY

Mr. P. H. Headley died at his home, near Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama, on the 15th day of February, 1914, age 75 years. He was converted and joined the Methodist church in young manhood and lived an unblemished life. He was a valiant Confederate soldier during the civil war. Mr. Headley was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Headley. He was married twice; Miss Nancie Vines, his first wife, only lived a few years, leaving him the care and responsibility of two small children. Some years after the death of Mrs. Headley he became the husband of Mrs. Sarah Mims, who lived many years, leaving no children. As a Christian grandfather he was faithful and zealous. Even before his conversion he lived up to a high moral standard. He was true to his friends and loved ones, to his church and to his God. His friends were numberless who bare testimony that a good true man had passed away. His last illness was of only a few days duration, but he was sustained by a christian belief, and seemed to have no doubt of his way being clear. He leaves one son, two brothers and numberless relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Yes, we mourn, but the angels of heaven rejoice because another has come home. Why do we mourn departing relatives or shake at death's alarms? 'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends to call them to His arms. Are we not tending upward two, as fast as time can move? Nor should we wish the hours more slow to keep us from our love. Why should we trouble to convey their bodies to the tomb? There once the flesh of Jesus lay and left a long perfume. Thence he arose, ascending high and showed our feet the way up to the Lord, our flesh shall fly at the great rising day. Then let the last loud trumpet sound and bid our kindred rise. Awake ye nations under ground, ye saints ascend the skies."

"LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

No More "Black Broth" for Him.

Among the forgotten dishes of the past was the "black broth of Lacedaemon." "What the ingredients of this sable composition were," says a writer, "we cannot exactly ascertain. Doctor Lister (in 'Apicius') supposed it to have been hog's blood. . . . It could not be a very alluring mess, since a citizen of Sybaris, having tasted it, declared it was no longer a matter of astonishment with him why the Spartans were so fearless of death, since any one in his senses would much rather die than exist on such execrable food."

Wanted—A New Baseball Rule.

Walter Johnson was pitching for the Washington team, and Mr. Jennings who was trying to pump otimism into his despairing players, sent up an ambitious young man to try to make a hit. He acted briefly. After swinging wildly at two of Johnson's offerings, he made a third wild swing, and, entirely by accident, popped up a little fly to first base.

As he loped down toward first, and was called out, he turned to Jennings, let out a stream of emphatic and picturesque language, and wound up with this observation:

"I am a son of a gun if there oughtn't to be a rule making that guy hang lights on the ball!"

Jennings, who got his start in life as a miner, smiled grimly.

JUDGE MERRILL NOTIFIES GOVENOR OF DECISION TO CALL EXTRA SESSION.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

James G. Oakley, former president of the state board of convict inspectors, under indictments by the Shelby county grand jury charging the embezzlement of $3517.80 of state funds and under indictments by the Montgomery county grand jury charging the embezzlement of approximately $74,000 of state funds, will be tried at Columbiana April 7 at a special term of the Shelby circuit court for the alleged irregulatrities in that county.

This announcement was made by Judge Hugh B. Merrill, judge of the Seventh judicial circuit, who communicated with the governor by long distance telephone. Judge Merrill informed the governor that he thought April 7 would be a good time for the trial, allowing both the state and defense ample opportunity for the preparation of the case.

Oakley's trial by the Montgomery city court, under indictments charging the embezzlement of $74,000 of state funds, has been set for March 4, and it is understood that both sides will be ready for trial at that time.

Must Establish Claims.

Every person in Alabama living on sixteenth section lands who does not possess a title to the property must establish continued adverse possession for a period of twenty years prior to the enactment of the code of 1907. The governor has instructed the attorney general's department to bring suit against all persons holding a diverse possession of these lands, thereby forcing them to establish their legal claim.

This action has been taken by the governor in order to ascertain the true status of all sixteenth section lands in the state. There are hundreds of people who have purchased these lands from the state and many others who are entitled to them through continued adverse possession, but it will be necessary for all to establish their title to the property in order to avoid suit.

Under the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Sudie Schmidt case, the state of Alabama has no authority to divest holders of sixteenth section land of their property who have held adverse possession for a period of 20 years.

The court's decision, it is thought, will effect thousands of acres of land in the state, property which has been lost to the state through continued adverse possession, but the governor is determined to make all persons occupying these lands establish their right to hold them by either showing a clear title to the property or by producing proof that they rightfully own them through continued adverse possession.

Cotton Seed Meal Seized.

Eight hundred sacks of cotton seed meal, shipped to a Mr. Hobbie from Memphis, Tenn., were seized here by federal authorities when an examination revealed the fact that the feed stuff did not come up to the analysis printed on the sacks. The meal was refused by Mr. Hobbie who asked for an examination and the meal was claimed by a Mr. E. Mitchell, of Memphis. Mitchell paid the court costs and after agreeing to rebrand the feed to correspond with the analysis, made bond for future disposition of the meal and was discharged.

School Commissioners of Northport.

Governor O'Neal appointed C. R. Hamner and J. L. Hunnicutt of Northport school trustees of that district of Tuscaloosa county to succeed Joseph Shirley, who has declined to serve longer in that capacity, and L. F. Barnes, who has removed from the district.

Feagin Commends Superintendents.

Superintendent of Education William F. Feagin has written a circular letter to the various county superintendents and their assistants commending them for the encouraging nature of the reports which he has received relative to their work. In his letter Superintendent Feagin calls attention to certain significant facts sent out in the reports and closing by urging them to use every possible effort to increase the efficiency of the elementary rural schools.

Oates Asked to Make Address.

Dr. William H. Oates, state prison inspector, has been invited to deliver an address on jails at the meeting of the National Committee of Charities and Corrections, to be held at Memphis, May 8. The invitation came from Amos W. Butler, of Indianapolis, secretary of the committee. Dr. Oates does not know whether he will be able to take part on the program, inasmuch as official business at that time may prevent his attendance at the meeting.

Collector Owes $3,961 in Winston.

Because of his failure to comply with certain Alabama statutes covering monthly settlements with the county treasurer, J. M. Tingle, tax collector of Winston county owes his county $3,931 according to J. T. Gorman, examiner of public accounts, who filed a report with Governor O'Neal covering his examination of the accounts of the Winston county official.

According to the examiner Collector Trimble owes a balance of $219 for 1911, $203 for 1912ñ and $2,554 for taxes reported, but not paid in 1913, and $995 for taxes not reported and paid in 1913.

Collector Tingle failed to comply with sections 2204 and 2200, which require that tax collector's make monthly settlements with the county treasurer and that they make final settlements each year, according to Examiner Gorman. Tingle is one of the few republicans in Alabama that holds a county office.

"It is the duty of tax collectors to pay over all taxes monthly and under section 7099 of thec ode of 1907 they are liable to imprisonment for wilful neglect of duty," according to the report of the examiner.

Improvements At Capitol.

Alabama's two legislative halls are now the principal show rooms of the historic state capitol. They have been completely renovated throughout, new furniture has been installed, the floors have been covered with new linoleum and the walls and ceilings have been painted. The work of repairing and improving these rooms has just been completed, and the rooms have been turned over to the capitol building commission.

Several months were consumed in the numerous improvements which were made. The floor of the house was reinforced, thereby restoring it to its former strength, and numerous other additions were made.

The furniture in the two halls is all veneered mahogany, and was selected with much care

Determine Site Indian Village.

H. P. Tresslar and Walter B. Jones, comprising a committee from the Alabama Anthropological society, will go to the site of the ancient Indian Village known as Huithlewale, located on the Tallapoosa river in Elmore county, where they will definitely establish the site with the aid of a civil engineer. The site was found by the society at a meeting held several weeks ago, but plans will be drawn up and submitted as final.

The remains of the old village are still seen near the river and at the recent meeting held there many souvenirs and curios were found by the society members. The village was one of the stopping places of De Soto when he passed through here in 1540 and has an interesting history.

Purchases Noted Drawing.

Commissioner John H. Wallace, Jr., of the state game and fish department, has purchased a colored reproduction of a drawing of the only living specimen of passenger pigeon in existence, so far as known, which is now in captivity in the Cincinnati zoo. This bird is now 28 years old, and is said to be in perfect health. The colored reproduction of the drawing will be placed on exhibition in the office of Commissioner Wallace. The Cincinnati zoo for several years has had a standing offer of $1,500 for a live passenger pigeon, but no one has earned the reward. More than $5,000 in all is ready to be paid to the person furnishing information which leads to the discovery of a wild pigeon or its nest.

The auvillary of the Masonic lodge raised the funds and made the donation to the grand lodge of Masons last December.

Governor Writes on Roads.

Bulletin No. 5 of the State Highway Department, contains three articles with reference to road building in Alabama, one of which was written by Governor O'Neal. The Governor declared there should be a specific road-building plan before construction work is begun. He spoke of it as "a beginning and an ending." Other articles were written by Prof. G. M. Mitcham, of Auburn, and R. P. Boyd, Assistant State Highway Engineer.

RETIRES FROM RACE FOR GOVERNORSHIP

JOHN H. WALLACE, STATE GAME AND FISH COMMISSIONER, MAKES ANNOUNCEMENT.

DOESN'T THINK HE CAN WIN

It Is Believed That He Will Be a Candidate for Gubernatorial Honors Four Years Hence.

Montgomery.—John H. Wallace, Jr., state game and fish commissioner, announced his retirement from the race for governor. Commissioner Wallace states as his reason for withdrawing from the gubernatorial race that he does not think he can win this time, strongly indicating that he will be a candidate four years hence.

In retiring from the race Mr. Wallace does not make reference to any other candidate, maintaining that "whoever shall be nominated by the great democracy of Alabama will have my active and vigorous support, and when duly elected and installed as governor, so far as within me lies the power, I will labor to make his administration a success and a real blessing to all Alabamians."

Mr. Wallace's retirement leaves four aspirants for gubernatorial honors, Charles Henderson, ex-Governor B. B. Comer, Capt. Reuben F. Kolb and Walter D. Seed.

Mr. Wallace issued the following statement:

"When I announced my candidacy for governor I had strong hopes of securing the nomination in this campaign. While there are thousands of good democrats and true who are loyally supporting me, I do not believe that I can win this time.

"I have laid before the people a platform consisting of constructive principles of government, a program looking to a more advanced civilization, the growth, the powers, the development of the state and its wonderful resources. I have dodged no issue; I have striven to conduct my campaign upon the highest possible plane of honest, courageous, civilized political warfare.

"I realize that the people are not ready to inaugurate the many forward movements that I champion, but since they are fundamentally right, I am confident that in a future campaign they will triumph and eventuate in making Alabama a greater, a happier and a more prosperous state.

"I have met during my canvass thousands of people I never knew bebore; I have formed new friendships that I will always cherish; I have become known to the people in a new way. They have heard me exploit my views on state issues, and I believe that I have effected alliances that will forever remain steadfast.

"Realizing, however, that this is not my time to be elected, in justice to my supporters who will proceed immediately to form new alignments, I announce my retirement fro the race for governor.

"To those who would have honored me by their confidence and their votes, I extend my profoundest gratitude, and assure them that I shall continue to strive for the principles and policies laid down in my platform with the confident belief that, after thinking over them for a few years, the people will wish to see them become a part of the statutes of the state.

"Whoever shall be nominated by the great democracy of Alabama will have my active and vigorous support, and when duly elected and installed as governor, so far as within me lies the power, I will labor to make his administration a success and a real blessing to all Alabamians."

PRESIDENT REVIEWS PARADE.

Crosses Icy Potomac In Storm to Do Honor to the First President.

Washington. — President Wilson crossed the ice-jammed Potomac in the naval yacht Sylph, and for ma glass enclosed stand reviewed a civic and military parade in Alexandria, Va., which marched through a frigid snowstorm in honor of the first President of the United States.

With the exception of brief exercises in the Senate, the national capital turned to Alexandria in the environment where George Washington had lived, for its official celebration of the birthday. Vice President Marshall laid a wreath on the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon, and returning to Alexandria, joined the President, members of the cabinet and Governor Stuart of Virginia, in watching the parade.

Mayor and Congressman At Once.

Washington.—Whether Jas. M. Curley, mayor of Boston, and on the rolls of Congress as a representative from the Twelfth Massachusetts district, shall be permitted to hold both offices was put squarely up to Congress by Republican Leader Mann. A resolution introduced by Mr. Mann set forth that "the offices of mayor and representative in Congress are incompatible and it is impossible for one man to perform the duties of both," and propcsed that Mr. Curley's seat be declared vacant.

Watch Carefully the Child's Diet

Start Them Off Right With a Good Laxative and Then Watch Their Food.

RALPH M. PATTEN

Mothers are often unconsciously very careless about the diet of their children, forcing all to eat the same foods. The fact is that all foods do not agree alike with different persons. Hence, avoid what seems to constipate the child or to give it indigestion, and urge it to take more of what is quickly digested.

If the child shows a tendency to constipation it should immediately be given a mild laxative to help the bowels. By this is not meant a physic or purgative, for these should never be given to children, nor anything like salts, pills, etc. What the child requires is simply a small dose of the gentlest of medicines, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which, in the opinion of thousands of watchful mothers, is the ideal remedy for any child showing a tendency to constipation. So many things can happen to a constipated child that care is necessary. Colds, piles, headaches, sleeplessness, and many other annoyances that children should not have can usually be traced to constipation.

Many of America's foremost families are never without Syrup Pepsin, because one can never tell when some member of the family may need it, and all can use it. Thousands endorse it, among them Mrs. M. E. Patten, Valley Junction, Iowa, who is never without it in the house. Mrs. Patten says that Syrup Pepsin has done wonders for her boy Ralph, who was constipated from birth but is now doing fine. Naturally, she is enthusiastic about it and wants other mothers to use it. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter size being bought by those who already know its value, and it contains proportionately more.

Everyone likes Syrup Pepsin, as it is very pleasant to the taste. It is also mild and non-griping and free from injurious ingredients.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 Wash-Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

SAGE TEA DARKENS GRAY HAIR TO ANY SHADE. TRY IT!

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is of old age, and as we all desire ful and attractive appearance, busy at once with Wyeth's Sage Sulphur and look years younger.—Adv.

S. S. CONVENTION AT MOBILE IN APRIL

PLANS FOR THE ANNUAL STATE MEETING BEING RAPIDLY COMPLETED.

LARGE CROWD EXPECTED

Secretary Palmer Says Greater Interest Manifested This Year Than and Previous Year.

Mobile—Plans for the thirty-first convention of the Alabama Sunday School association to be held in Mobile April 21, 22 and 23, are nearly complete, and the indications now are that this will be by far the strongest and most largely attended of any Sunday School convention ever held in the state.

General Secretary Leon C. Palmer of Montgomery, who has been on a tour extending from extreme South Alabama to extreme North Alabama, reports that the popular interest in the approaching convention is greater than in any previous year. Registration at the last state convention showed 1403 delegates from 15 denominations and representing every county in Alabama except Lamar, Winston, Monroe and Choctaw. It is believed that this year every county will be represented.

The program committee has secured as speakers some of the most prominent Sunday school specialists of North America, and in addition about 40 of the Sunday school leaders from all denominations in Alabama. Among the out of state speakers will be two men of international reputation who have never before attended any similar gathering in this state. Names of the speakers and the full program will be announced later.

One of the attractive features of this convention will be the fact that the music will be led by Prof. E. C. Excell of Chicago, generally considered the leading convention chorus leader of the world today, assisted by Prof. A. W. Roper of Winona Lake, the famous composer and pianist.

The various railroads of the state have granted a reduced rate of about half price for the round trip. In anticipation of the heavy attendance expected from all parts of Alabama, the railroads have already arranged for three special Sunday school trains, instead of one as last year, to carry only delegates to the convention. The possible necessity for a fourth special train is also being considered.

HALEYVILLE MAY HAVE FAIR.

Proposition Discussed at Recent Meeting of the Commercial Club.

Haleyville.—Haleyville Commercial Club held its annual meeting and elected new officers for the coming year. The question of holding a fair in the fall for Winston and Marion counties was discussed, and a strong special committee was appointed to take hold of the matter.

FERTILIZER EXPERIMENTS.

Auburn Experiment Station Urges the Use of the Right Kind.

Auburn.—Are farmers buying the fertilizer needed by their soils? This is the leading agricultural question in the minds of the average farmer at this season of the year. He wishes that a chemical analysis of his soil might be made in the hope that this would inform him what fertilizers to use. Unfortunately, a chemical analysis does not show what fertilizers are needed, for it shows only the total amount of plant food present and does not indicate how much of it is in soluble form.

This question can be answered only by results of field experiments made on similar soils. Recognizing this fact, the Alabama experiment station at Auburn conducts each year in practically every county in the state fertilizer experiments with cotton, as well as numerous fertilizers with other crops.

The results of fertilizer experiments made with cotton in South Alabama in 1913 have just been published as Bulletin No. 174 of the Alabama Experiment Station.

In this bulletin the reader will find that soils vary greatly in their need of fertilizers. For example, in one experiment the largest net profit due to fertilizers, $16.98 per acre, was obtained by the use of acid phosphate alone; on another soil a complete fertilizer, containing nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, was by far the most profitable, affording a net profit of $27.54 per acre, or 453 per cent in the investment in fertilizers. Is any reader applying all three of these, when only two are needed, or is he employing only two of these kinds of plant food on soil that would make much more profitable use of all three of them? A study of this bulletin and of the corresponding bulletin for North Alabama, Bulletin No. 175, will throw light on this question.

These bulletins will be sent free to anyone who may write for either of them to J. F. Duggar, Director Experiment Station, Auburn, Ala.

Alabama City.—J. A. Wade of this city, who won the Andrew Carnegie cup for the best cotton produced in America, is sending to the international show in London some cotton grown in Talladega county by which he expects to win the international cup. He said that he had been cultivating 225 acres of land but that hereafter he did not intend to cultivate but 106 acres. He said that the time had come to plow deep and make the earth produce. He gave it as his opinion that it was impossible to get tthe best results from a large acreage.

QUIT MEAT IF KIDNEYS BOTHER AND USE SALTS

Take a Glass of Salts Before Breakfast If Your Back Is Hurting or Bladder Is Irritated.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Frenchwoman's Cold Cure.

Having been without a cold for 27 years, a French lady, who holds this fortunate record, attributes it to the following process: Each morning after taking a warm bath, she immediately sponges her throat, her face, and the back of her neck and ears with the very coldest water she can get for about two minutes. In cold weather one may feel inclined to shirk, she says, but the result of steady application she has found a plentiful reward.

ECZEMA DISFIGURED FACE

Hampton Springs, Fla.—"I had had eczema on my face and hands for about three years. My face was badly disfigured. The eczema broke out in pimples and itched so very badly I would scratch it all the time. It was the most irritating disease I ever had. It started on my face and hands and it spread all over my body. I had great large sores all over me, caused from the eczema. It bothered me day and night so that I could not rest at all.

"I used three remedies for skin disease and they didn't give relief at all. I was almost terrified until a friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to me. They helped me from the time I started to use them. I only used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and was cured." (Signed) Mrs. E. C. Parker, Dec. 7, 1913.

Sick Women Made Well

Reliable evidence is abundant that women are constantly being restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The many testimonial letters that we are continually publishing in the newspapers—hundreds of them—are all genuine, true and unsolicited expressions of heartfelt gratitude for the freedom from suffering that has come to these women solely through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

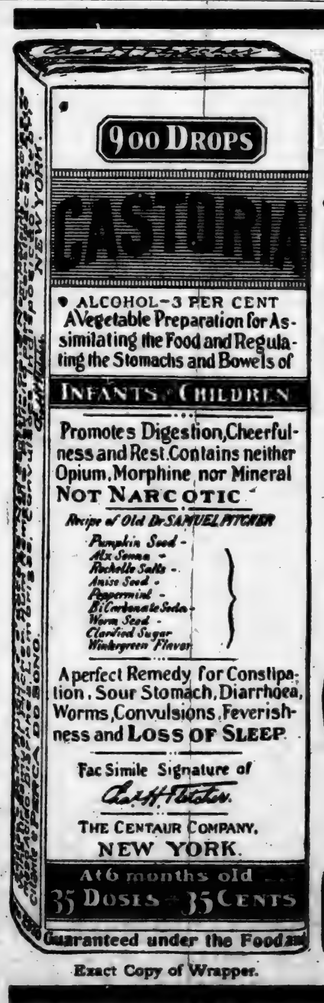
Money could not buy nor any kind of influence obtain such recommendations; you may depend upon it that any testimonial we publish is honest and true—if you have any doubt of this write to the women whose true names and addresses are always given, and learn for yourself.

Read this one from Mrs. Waters:

CAMDEN, N.J.—"I was sick for two years with nervous spells, and my kidneys were affected. I had a doctor all the time and used a galvanic battery, but nothing did me any good. I was not able to go to bed, but spent my time on a couch or in a sleeping-chair, and soon became almost a skeleton. Finally my doctor went away for his health, and my husband heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me some. In two months I got relief and now I am like a new woman and am at my usual weight. I recommend your medicine to every one and so does my husband."—Mrs. TILLIE WATERS, 1135 Knight St., Camden, N.J.

And this one from Mrs. Haddock:

UTICA, OKLA.—"I was weak and nervous, not able to do my work and scarcely able to be on my feet. I had backache, headache, palpitation of the heart, trouble with my bowels, and inflammation. Since taking the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I am better than I have been for twenty years. I think it is a wonderful medicine and I have recommended it to others."—Mrs. MARY ANN HADDOCK, Utica, Oklahoma.



Now answer this question if you can. Why should a woman continue to suffer without first giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? You know that it has saved many others—why should it fail in your case?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Hon. John H. Wallace, Jr., retired from the race for governor on Monday, leaving Henderson, Comer, Seed and Kolb to fight it out.

The trial of Theo. Lacy, in progress at Montgomery, is attracting state-wide attention and its outcome will be watched with the keenest interest.

Remember the election for waterworks takes place next Monday. Let's keep apace with the progressive spirit of the times and give Clanton this much needed utility.

The withdrawal of Wm. B. Craig for Congress and the entry of Judge E. B. Deason puts a new phase on the Congressional situation in the Fourth District, and the contest between Judge Deason and Mr. Blackmon bids fair to be a lively scrap and interest in the senatorial and gubernatorial races will be relegated to the rear insofar as this District is concerned.

This paper is conducted by a very promising young editor, who begun his newspaper career a few months ago as editor of a third class sheet, which was run down at the heel, and in a leaky and very WET condition. He is now editor and sole proprietor of this high class publication, whose purpose it is to help all who read it. Send in your dollar and file all your copies for future reference.

The foregoing is clipped from the 'Progressive Democrat,' a Hobson campaign sheet, published in Wetumpka and edited by the Rev. C. R. Lamar, commonly known in Chilton County as "Hairy Vetch." This slur at the Press would not be noticed by us but for the fact that we desire to call attention to the ingratitude of the reverend gentleman toward the stockholders of the Press and citizens of the county who rallied to his support when he no longer received appointments at the hands of the Methodist Conference and afforded a sustenance for him and his.

We admit that the Press became leaky and somewhat rundown at the heel when it became afflicted with the gentleman's dry and still more tiresome effusions, but we are glad to know that since it has been relieved of the gentleman's editorship it is moving forward with leaps and bounds.

When the reverend Sir left this place he pounced upon the Wetumpka Herald, but in keeping with his habit as a quitter he did not last until the water got hot.

So we predict with the "Progressive Democrat," and when the evening sun has shed its last flickering rays on the eve of April 6th, and the brave and intelligent electorate and unterrified democracy of Alabama has proclaimed that peerless statesman, Oscar W. Underwood as their next Senator, we may expect to see this gentleman's usual stereotyped valedictory; the "Progressive Democrat" will be but a humorous memory, and its editor will wrap his clerical coat about him and pass over the river to rest in the shade of hairy vetch.

Methodist Minister Recommends Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Rev. James A. Lewis, Milaca, Minn., writes: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been a needed and welcome guest in our home for a number of years. I highly recommend it to my fellows as being a medicine worthy of trial in cases of colds, coughs and croup." Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a trial and we are confident you will find it very effectual and continue to use it as occasion requires for years to come, as many others have done. We Promise You Relief from All Stomach Troubles— Or Your Money Back

We honestly believe we have the best remedy in the world for indigestion and dyspepsia. We urge you to try it at our risk. If it doesn't relieve you—as we feel sure it will—we'll give back your money without a word. You know us—your family druggist. You know we wouldn't dare recommend anything we didn't know about, nor dare to break a promise. Therefore, when we recommend any remedy it is because we believe it to be better than any other to relieve the ailment for which it is made, and when we prove our faith in it and our sincerity toward you by promising to give back your money if it doesn't relieve you and in every way satisfy you, you have no possible excuse for doubt or hesitation.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets

are, we honestly believe, the best remedy made for Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all other Stomach Ills

We Know They're Good

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, in addition to other ingredients, contain Pepsin and Bismuth, two great digestive aids used by the entire medical profession. They soothe the inflamed stomach, check the heartburn and distress, stimulate a healthy secretion of the gastric juice, aid in rapid and comfortable digestion of the food and help to quickly convert it into rich red blood, and thereby into flesh, bone and muscle. They relieve stomach distress promptly, and, used regularly for a short time, tend to restore the stomach to a comfortable, easy-acting, healthy state. They aid greatly to promote regular bowel action.

Delays Are Dangerous

Don't neglect indigestion, for it frequently leads to all sorts of ills and complications. The pain and discomfort is not the most unfortunate part. The fact that when the stomach is not acting right, the material needed to repair the wastes that are constantly taking place in the body is not being given to the blood either in the proper condition or fast enough is far more serious. Nothing will cause more trouble than an unhealthy stomach. The blues, debility, lack of strength and energy, constipation, biliousness, headaches and scores of other serious ailments result from the failure of the stomach to properly do its work.

You Risk No Money

Our willingness to have you use Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets entirely at our risk proves our faith in them. We always sell them this way, and it is because we know that they have greatly benefited scores of sufferers to whom we have sold them. There's no red tape about our guarantee. It means just what it says. We'll ask you no questions. You needn't sign anything. Your word is enough for us. We know that when they help you you will consider it money well spent even if they had cost you ten times as much. If they don't help you, the money you paid for them is yours, and we want you to have it.

Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores—the World's Greatest Drug Stores. In convenient boxes—three sizes: 25c, 50c, $1.00

SEVILLE STILL HAS CARMENS

Thousands of the Picturesque and Charming Cigarette Girls Are Employed There.

The most astonishing building in the Calle de San Fernando is the immense two story baroque edifice that covers more ground than the cathedral plus the court of oranges, and serves the purpose of a tobacco factory. The portal is adorned with busts of Columbus and Fernando Cortes, and I wish very much that we had had time to go inside and see these many cigarette girls at their work. As we passed I thought again of Carmen and the story of Bizet's fantastic Sevillian opera, for about 5,000 Carmens, or "cigareras," like Carmen, are employed in this factory, and attire themselves today in gay gowns and fascinating mantillas, with flowers tucked under their ears and coquettishly placed in their hair, very much like the heroine of the opera. Like the opera, also, adjoining the factory are the artillery barracks, and one imagines it to be quite possible that some impressionable Don Jose should be fascinated by some of these piquant and Pretty Carmens.—From "Royal Spain of Today," by Mrs. Tryphosa Bates-Batcheller.

See Value of Exercise.

There is no doubt but that exercise is a good thing for those who do not get it, but to many the daily use of dumb-bells, weights and similar apparatus grows irksome, the reason being a lack of stimulation owing to the fact that the person taking the exercise sees nothing accomplished as the result of the work and time spent. Gladstone preferred to work at the woodpile, and here and there was the constantly maintained interest of seeing the pile increase after each period of action. The same has been accomplished in a real up-to-the-moment manner by a French inventor who has taken an exercising machine which is rather familiar in the shape of a bicycle on a permanent stand, and he has combined this with a storage battery. When the various members of the family are taking their daily exercise on this machine they are storing up current to be used in the form of illuminant after nightfall.

Architects Held to Account.

It is unusual for a house, however small, to be erected in France without the service of an architect, who not only draws the plans, but actually superintends the work. Usually it is he who orders the building material and assures himself that its quality is up to specifications and requirements. The contractor and his workmen perform their duties in conformity with the architect's orders, and the latter, who is usually a man of capital, advances the funds required in order that the contractor need not wait for payment until the building is completed. Moreover, the French law imposes on the architect a serious responsibility, since he, as well as the contractor, is responsible for all defects of construction during a period of ten years.

MUCH HAPPIER THAN 10 YEARS AGO

Bradyville Lady Tells Why She Is So Much Happier Now Than Ten Years Ago.

Bradyville, Tenn.—Mrs. Mattie Spry, of this place, makes the following statement: "Ten years ago, I was a great sufferer from womanly troubles, and was in bed nearly all the time, for about two years. I tried many treatments, but they did not seem to do me any good.

I read in the Ladies' Birthday Almanac about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I quit all other treatments, and began taking it. I took 8 bottles, and was cured.

That has been ten years ago, and since then I have been in better health and spirits, than for 20 years.

My oldest daughter was very puny at the age of 16. I gave her Cardui, and she was soon all right, and now enjoys the best of health.

I am so thankful that I know of a true medicine that I can give my girls, or take myself, and that I know what medicine to send for, when I need a tonic.

I am very much alive now, and certainly enjoy telling my friends, when they ask me what I found at last to help me so much, about Cardui. I can never praise it enough."

You, too, can surely depend on Cardui helping you.

Begin taking it today.

The Harsh Judge.

A judge was recently at a private dinner defending a harsh sentence. "I believe," he said, "that it is better for law and order that sentences should err on the side of harshness rather than on the side of lenity.

"Look at nature, the great judge of us all. Was there ever a harsher, severer judge, than nature, who sentences each and every one of us to hard labor for life?"

"CASCARETS" FOR LIVER; BOWELS

No sick headache, biliousness, bad taste or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box.

Are you keeping your bowels, liver, and stomach clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cents a box from your store. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipation. Adv.

GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT, BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Make It Thick, Glossy, Wavy, Luxuriant and Remove Dandruff—Real Surprise for You.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it, surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store and just try it. Adv.

WHAT COMER PROMISES

THAT HE WILL PERFORM

AN ALABAMA DOLLAR SHOULD BUY AS MUCH AS A GEORGIA DOLLAR.

The L. & N. Railroad denies this. Its Georgia rate on bale of cotton is 85 cents, Alabama rate $1.78.

Georgia rate on ton of fertilizer 99 cents, Alabama rate $1.40.

Georgia rate on car of brick $9.00, Alabama rate $24.00.

Georgia rate on car cotton seed hulls $9.00, Alabama rate $16.80.

Georgia rate on lumber $11.25, Alabama rate $21.00.

Georgia rate on car potatoes $18.00, Alabama rate $50.40.

Georgia rate on cotton ties $9.00, Alabama rate $21.00.

Georgia rate on bagging $31.20, Alabama rate 50.40.

Georgia rate on wagons and plows $10.00, Alabama rate $21.00.

Georgia rate on watermelons $10.00, Alabama rate $50.40.

Comer is the only candidate for governor who is fighting these tremendous wrongs, or whose election holds out any hope of righting them.

It is Comer and anti-Comer, four against one. The railroads and allied interests are for any one of the four to beat Comer. WHY? Echo answers WHY?

PRE-ELECTION PLEDGES.

The enemies of Comer agree with the friends of Comer on one thing and only one thing—What he promises before election he will perform after election.

Comer's election means no backward step in education, but progress along all lines. He has preached always the doctrine that the State's best asset is its boys and girls and the State's first duty is to give adequate public school facilities for every one of them. As he believes in helping the rising generation, he would also smooth the last years of the old Confederate soldier.

Here is the record:

During the four years (1907-1911) of the Comer Administration, the State Appropriations were increased:

To the public school fund	$2,893,893.52
To school buildings	1,118,000.00
To the pension fund	1,763,621.95
Total increase for education and old soldiers	$5,775,515.47

Every dollar was given back to the people where it rightly belonged.

Comer doesn't ask the people to take him on trust. He has already saved them millions in railroad taxes and increased their public school facilities by the million dollars worth.

When he says he will do all in mortal power to release the railroad embargo on rivers and harbors, and carry forward the great business of public road buildings, the people know he will do it.

He didn't increase the tax rates, either.

THAT EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING.

Before the advent of Governor Comer, the L. & N. Railroad and allied interests ran the politics of Alabama and controlled its legislatures. Comer broke their strangle hold and restored the people to power at Montgomery.

In three years the L. & N Railroad and allied interests have renewed their grip on the Democratic Party, elected to the chairmanship of the State Committee their most subservient attorney, elected a full majority of the committee from among their followers and servants

Here, is how ex-near-Senator Glass, the journalistic mouthpiece and agent of the railroads, and Governor O'Neal, managed the Democratic State Committee at Montgomery, as told by Hon. Gardner Greene, a member of the committee, who could neither be cajoled nor coerced.

"On the evening before the meeting of the committee, when there was reasonable doubt as to whether or not the majority plan would be successful, Col. John Moffatt, recording secretary of the Governor, informed me that the Governor wanted to speak with me. I was directed to rooms 514-515.

"When I entered room 514 I found the Governor, Frank P. Glass, an editor, strongly opposed to Mr. Comer, and others. The Governor wanted to know if it was true that I favored the plurality plan.

"When I told him that his information was correct, he replied:

"'Then you are for old Comer.'

"I answered in the negative. When he pressed me to give a reason, I told him that in my opinion the success of the effort aimed at Mr. Comer would give substance to the cry already ringing throughout the State in regard to 'ring' politics, and that the success of the plan would tend undeservedly to hurt the cause of Oscar Underwood.

"The Governor, whereupon exclaimed, 'What to h—ll has Oscar Underwood to do with it,' or 'To h—ll with Underwood,' or words to that effect."

THE CRY OF ECONOMY.

Parrot-like, the Anti-Comer candidates for Governor go up and down the State preaching that Comer wrecked the Treasury; that the great issue of the campaign is economy with the $6,000,000 of taxes raised by the State. They are silent wit hone accord about the $40,000,000 of taxes in freight rates and passenger fares which the railroads are collecting every year from the people. Why? Because not one of them dares to say a word against the railroads and the allied interests whose support is the hope to which every one of them is clinging. It is Comer and anti-Comer. Comer contends for economy in the $40,000,000 fund as well as the $6,000,000 fund. None of the quartet can see the $40,000,000 tax fund of the railroads, or the discrimination practiced in its collection.

It is not true that Comer wrecked the treasury. He did not even embarrass it. Here is the record:

TRUTH ABOUT BALANCE IN TREASURY.

At the expiration of the Comer administration (January 16, 1911), the incoming legislature appointed a joint committee of the House and Senate to examine and report on the condition of the treasury. This committee reported as follows:

"The amount of money received by the present treasurer (who entered upon the duties of his office on January 18, 1911), from his predecessor was $975,237.23." See House Journal, Vol. I, page 1466.

The records further show that it was not necessary for the State to borrow money until after the end of the fiscal year succeeding the Comer administration.

PLANKS FROM COMER'S PLATFORM.

"THE ONLY MASTER I know is the people. I want it understood that I am as much opposed to the Liquor Boss as to the Railroad Boss."

"The tune, 'LISTEN TO THE MASTER'S VOICE,' will never be played while I am Governor."

"The majority of the Democratic Executive Committee at their recent meeting would not let you have a convention, so as to write a progressive platform. Charles Lewis wrote the last platform and they won't let you change it. It's up to you. What do you want?"

The National Democratic Party is destroying the INTER-LOCKING DIRECTORATES. The most dangerous inter-locking directorates is whose the railroads and other allied interests inter-lock with the State Government, controlling same."

"In three years, with an expenditure of less than $100,000, we saved the shippers and passengers of Alabama more than $6,000,000. We will PUT THOSE RATES BACK, or there will be the biggest scrap in Alabama."

"When you use money for educational purposes, you don't spend it, YOU INVEST IT."

"You don't have to trace what we spent by an INVESTIGATING BOARD—they say we spent the money—they never said we took it."

LET'S TAKE A BROOM AND SWEEP OUT THIS GANG which is endeavoring to control our State, not in the name and for the good of the people, but for those interests which control for the purpose of using and taxing."

"THE LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE Railroad Company spent $142,285.25 to defeat me for President of the Railroad Commission, and are again hard at work to defeat me for Governor."

"IT'S COMER AND ANTI-COMER. Comer stands for the proposition that the L. & N. should get out and stay out of Alabama politics; that we can never have good government or equitable freight rates as long as they boss and control."

"REMEMBER that more than half the roads have had the rates in for six years—freight and passenger—and prospered; that other roads have had them in for three years and prospered, and that our neighboring States have had them in for many years and prospered."

"THE ALABAMA SHIPPER'S MONEY should buy as much freight rate as the Georgia shipper's or the Carolina or Virginia shipper's money. To maintain the contrary is nonsense."

COMER AND THE FEDERAL COURTS.

When the next Legislature enacts laws to compel justice and fair dealing for Alabama shippers, Judge Jones cannot step in and enjoin them and threaten the people of Alabama with fines and jail sentences. The iniquitous sight of a single inferior Federal judge setting aside at will the laws of a State led to the passage of a law by Congress requiring three judges to sit on all cases involving the validity of a State law. For this great service Mr. Comer earned the gratitude of all the people of all the States.

FINANCES AND THE RURAL DISTRICTS.

Adequate eleemosynary and educational systems, without which the people cannot progress, must be financed by the State. Many counties and all the rural districts are now receiving for these causes more money than they pay into the State Treasury.

If those who attack the Comer appropriations should be successful at the polls they would be bound to repeal them. Thus would those counties and all rural districts lose what they have gained. The schools, the roads and the old soldiers would pay the penalty of reduced appropriations.

Four of the candidates for Governor are fighting side by side with the allied interests to defeat the policies of the Democratic Administration at Washington, to tie the hands of President Wilson, to turn back the hands on the dial plate of freedom and to block the President and the party's way to further reforms. Comer stands with Wilson and finds in these great utterances of the President, "words that breathe and thoughts that burn."

WHAT PRESIDENT WILSON SAYS ABOUT IT.

"Our government has been for the past two years under the control of heads of great allied corporations with special interests."

"It is an intolerable thing that the government of the Republic should have got so far out of the hands of the people."

"An invisible empire has been set above the forms of Democracy."

"Why do we continue to permit these things? Isn't it about time that we grew up and took charge of our own affairs?"

"Are Americans ready to ask the trusts to give us in pity what we ought, in justice, to take?"

"Well, we have started at all events. The procession is under way. The stand-patter doesnt know there is a procession. He is asleep in the back part of the house."

"Americans are not yet cowards. True, their self-reliance has been sapped by years of submission to the doctrine that prosperity is something that benevolent magnates provide for them with the aid of the government."

"The American people are not naturally stand-patters. Progress is the word that charms their ears and stirs their hearts."

"We have seen many of our governments under these influences cease to be representative governments and become governments representative of special interests controlled by machines."

"Honest American industry has always thriven, when it has thriven at all, on freedom; it has never thriven on monopoly. It is a great deal better to shift for yourselves than to be taken care of by a great combination of capital. I, for my part, do not want to be taken care of. I would rather starve a free man than to be fed a mere thing at the caprice of those who are organizing American industry as they please to organize it."

"We wanted to regulate our public service corporations so that we could get the proper service from them and on reasonable terms."

THE NEAR-SENATOR'S LEADERSHIP.

Comer is absolutely and unalterably opposed to such demagogic leadership as ex-near-Senator Glass, made so by the grace of Governor O'Neal, is undertaking in Alabama. The ex-near-senator, posing as the exponent of the National Democracy in Alabama, is fighting at home against the vital principles of that government which protects the common people and for which President Wilson is making a winning fight at Washington. This principle is that no power must be greater than the government, that no power shall control the government, and that the law shall protect the people.

Governor Comer would make it forever impossible that there should be another scene in Alabama like that recently enacted at Montgomery, where Charles Lewis, Tyler Goodwyn, Geo. Jones, Frank Glass and Emmet O'Neal manipulated the Democratic State committee at their own sweet will, with the sole purpose, as they unblushingly avowed, "To beat old Comer."

It is of utmost importance to every citizen of Alabama that on April 6th the rule of the allied interests should be forever abolished in Alabama.

Result of Weird Will.

A little over two years ago the eccentric Russian, Countess Austrigildski, died and left a bequest of $1,300 a year for life to any person who will shut himself up in a tomb at Pere Lachaise for 12 months and a day. The first man to attempt this torture has become a raving lunatic. The one who undertakes this is offered lodging in a stone cell built over the Countess Austrigildski's vault, and he must never leave the abode day or night for a year and a day. He may not communicate with any person in the outside world save the person who brings his food morning and evening. And he may never have a light. A dismal prospect even at the thought of a yearly income of $1,300! Who will the next martyr to gold be?

Can Photograph on Clay.

Prof. J. Hammond Smith of the University of Pittsburgh, has perfected an invention which he calls a stereometricon, by which human features may be reproduced in clay with photographic accuracy.

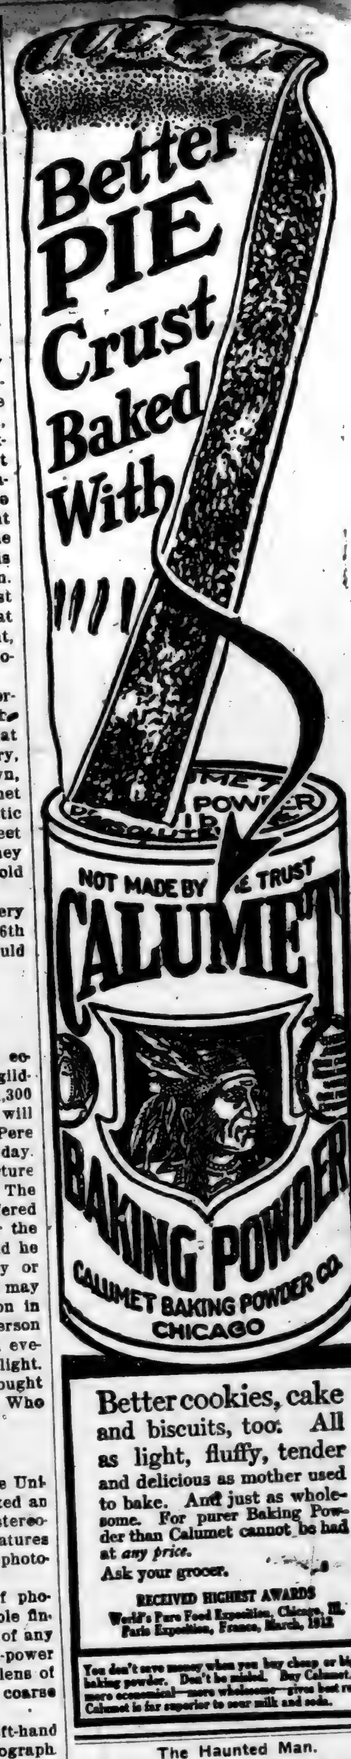
One with some knowledge of photography and having fairly nimble fingers may make a bust or statue of any member of his family. Two high-power cameras are used. Behind the lens of the right-hand camera is a coarse screen.

The picture taken with the left-hand camera is called a record photograph. A lump of clay is placed on a pedestal where the subject previously had been. Lines thrown on it by the camera indicate how to manipulate the clay.

New Idea in Moving Pictures.

Powerful arc lights combined with newly designed moving picture apparatus are used at the Scala theater in London to produce some wonderful effects, for the persons are seen in life size moving about without the use of any visible screen, so that they appear to act upon a real theater scene which is lighted as is customary in such cases. This remarkable result is brought about by optical combinations which have as yet not been made public. The illusion is heightened by electric devices of an improved kind for working a phonograph together with the moving picture machine so that it always keeps in step, and the words or music are reproduced at exactly the same time as the gestures. It is said that the new apparatus does this with great perfection.

"White Gold" a New Alloy.



Owing to the increased price of platinum new alloys of gold called "white gold" and "palladium gold" have lately come into use as a substitute for platinum in the manufacture of jewelry, the London Globe states. To avoid the confusion of these alloys with pure platinum work three new stamps, or hallmarks, have been created by a recent decree in France for use in marking jewelry that is composed entirely or in part of platinum. One of the new hallmarks, a dog's head, is used in stamp work of home manufacture which is to be sold in the country; another, the head of a young girl, denotes work of home manufacture intended for exportation, and a mask designates imported goods. In combinations of platinum and white gold the proper stamps must be used to indicate the various metals.

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

ILLUSTRATIONS by LAUREN STOUT

COPYRIGHT BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. An old negro tells Shirley's fortune and predicts great trouble for her on account of a man.

CHAPTER VIII.

What Happened Thirty Years Ago.

When Shirley came across the lawn at Rosewood, Major Montague Bristow sat under the arbor talking to her mother.

The major was massive-framed, with a strong jaw and a rubicund complexion—the sort that might be supposed to have attained the utmost benefit to be conferred by a consistent indulgence in mint-juleps. His blue eyes were piercing and arched with brows like sable rainbows, at variance with his heavy iron-gray hair and imperial. His head was leonine and he looked like a king who has humbled his enemy. It may be added that his linen was fine and immaculate, his black string-tie precisely tied and a pair of gold-rimmed eye-glasses swung by a flat black cord against his white waistcoat.

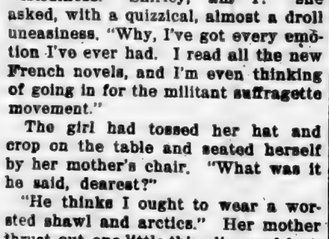
"Shirley," said her mother, "the major's brutal, and he shan't have his mint-julep."

"What has he been doing?" asked the other, her brows wrinkling in a delightful way she had.

"He has reminded me that I'm growing old."

Shirley looked at the major skeptically, for his chivalry was undoubted. During a long career in law and legislature it had been said of him that he could neither speak on the tariff question nor defend a man for murder, without first paying a tribute to "the women of the South, sah."

"Nothing of the sort," he rumbled.



Mrs. Dandridge's face softened to wistfulness. "Shirley, am I?" she asked, with a quizzical, almost a droll uneasiness. "Why, I've got every emotion I've ever had. I read all the new French novels, and I'm even thinking of going in for the militant suffragette movement."

The girl had tossed her hat and crop on the table and seated herself by her mother's chair. "What was it he said, dearest?"

"He thinks I ought to wear a worsted shawl and arctics." Her mother thrust out one little thin-slippered foot, with its slender ankle gleaming through its open-work stocking like mother-of-pearl. "Imagine! In May. And he knows I'm vain of my feet! Major, if you had ever had a wife, you would have learned wisdom. But you mean well, and I'll take back what I said about the julep. You mix it, Shirley. Yours is even better than Ranston's."

"She makes me one every day, Monty," she continued, as Shirley went into the house. "And when she isn't looking, I pour it into the bush there."

Major Bristow laughed as he bit the end off a cigar. "All the same," he said in his big rumbling voice, "you need 'em, I reckon. You need more than mint-juleps, too. You leave the whiskey to me and the doctor, and you take Shirley and pull out for Italy. Why not? A year there would do you a heap of good."

"Shirley," Said Her Mother, "The Major's Brutal."

She shook her head. "No, Monty. It isn't what you think. It's—here." She lifted her hand and touched her heart. "It's been so for a long time. But it may—it can't go on forever, you see. Nothing can."

The major had leaned forward in his chair. "Judith!" he said, and his hand twitched, "it isn't true!" And then, "How do you know?"

She smiled at him. "You remember when that big surgeon from Vienna came to see the doctor last year? Well, the doctor brought him to me. I'd known it before in a way, but it had gone farther than I thought. No one can tell just how long it may be. It may be years, of course, but I'm not taking any sea trips, Monty."

He cleared his throat and his voice was husky when he spoke. "Shirley doesn't know?"

"Certainly not. She mustn't." And then, in sudden sharpness: "You shan't tell her, Monty. You wouldn't dare!"

"No, indeed," he assured her quickly. "Of course not."

"It's just among us three, Doctor Southall and you and me. We three have had our secrets before, eh, Monty?"

"Yes, Judith, we have."

She bent toward him, her hands tightening on the cane. "After all, it's true. Today I am getting old. I may look only fifty, but I feel sixty and I'll admit to seventy-five. It's joy that keeps us young, and I didn't get my fair share of that, Monty. For just one little week my heart had it all—all—and then—well, then it was finished. It was finished long before I married Tom Dandridge. It isn't that I'm empty-headed. It's that I've been an empty-hearted woman, Monty—as empty and dusty and desolate as the old house over yonder on the ridge."

"I know, Judith, I know."

"You've been empty in a way, too," she said. "But it's been a different way. You were never in love—really in love, I mean. Certainly not with me, Monty, though you tried to make me think so once upon a time, before Sassoon came along, and—Beauty Valiant."

The major blinked, suddenly startled. It was out, the one name neither had spoken to the other for thirty years! He looked at her a little guiltily; but her eyes had turned away. "Everything changed then," she continued dreamily, "everything."

The major's fingers strayed across his waistcoat, fumbling uncertainly for his eye-glasses. For an instant he, too, was back in the long-ago past, when he and Valiant had been comrades. It had been a curious three sided affair—he, and Valiant and Sassoon. Sassoon with his dissipated flair and ungovernable temper and strange fits of recklessness; clean, high-idealed, straight-away Valiant; and he—a Bristow, neither better nor worse than the rest of his name. He remembered that mad strained season when he had grimly recognized his own cause as hopeless, and with burning eyes had watched Sassoon and Valiant racing abreast. He remembered that glittering prodigal dance when he had come upon Valiant and Judith standing in the shrubbery, the candle-light from some open door engoldening their faces: hers smiling, a little flippant perhaps, and conscious of her spell; his grave and earnest, yet wistful.

"You promise, John?"

"I give my sacred word. Whatever the provocation, I will not lift my hand against him. Never, never!" Then the same voice, vibrant, appealing. "Judith! It isn't because—because—you care for him?"

He had plunged away in the darkness before her answer came. What had it mattered then to him what she had replied? And that very night had befallen the fatal quarrel!

The major started. How that name had blown away the dust! "That's a long time ago, Judith."

"Thirty years ago tomorrow they fought," she said softly, "Valiant and Sassoon. Every woman has her one anniversary, I suppose, and tomorrow's mine. Do you know what I do, every fourteenth of May, Monty? I keep my room and spend the day always the same way. There's a little book I read. And there's an old haircloth trunk that I've had since I was a girl. Down in the bottom of it are some—things, that I take out and set round the room * * * and there is a handful of old letters I go over from first to last. They're almost worn out now, but I could repeat them all with my eyes shut. Then there's a tiny old straw basket with a yellow wisp in it that once was a bunch of cape jessamines. I wore them to that last ball—the night before it happened. The fourteenth of May used to be sad, but now, do you know, I look forward to it! I always have a lot of jessamines that particular day—I'll have Shirley get me some tomorrow—and in the evening, when I go downstairs, the house is full of the scent of them. All summer long it's roses, but on the fourteenth of May it has to be jessamines. Shirley must think me a whimsical old woman, but I insist on being humored."

He smiled, a little bleakly, and cleared his throat.

"Isn't it strange for me to be talking this way now!" she said presently. "Another proof that I'm getting old. But the date brings it very close; it seems, somehow, closer than ever this year.—Monty, weren't you tremendously surprised when I married Tom Dandridge?"

"I certainly was."

"I'll tell you a secret. I was, too. I suppose I did it because of a sneaking feeling that some people were feeling sorry for me, which I never could stand. Well, he was a man any one might honor. I've always thought a woman ought to have two husbands: one to love and cherish, and the other to honor and obey. I had the latter, at any rate."

"And you've lived, Judith," he said.

"Yes," she agreed, with a little sigh, "I've lived. I've had Shirley, and she's twenty and adorable. And I've had people enough, and books to read, and plenty of pretty things to look at, and old lace to wear, and I've kept my figure and my vanity—I'm not too old yet to thank the Lord for that! So don't talk to me about worsted shawls and horrible arctics. For I won't wear 'em. Not if I know myself! Here comes Shirley. She's made two juleps, and if you're a gentleman, you'll distract her attention till I've got rid of mine in my usual way."

* * * * * * * * *

The major, at the foot of the cherry-bordered lane, looked back across the box-hedge to where the two figures sat under the rose-arbor, the mother's face turned lovingly down to Shirley's at her knee. He stood a moment watching them from under his slouched hat-brim.

"You never looked at me that way, Judith, did you!" he sighed to himself. "It's been a long time, too, since I began to want you to—'most forty years. When it came to the showdown, I wasn't even as fit as Tom Dandridge!"

CHAPTER IX.

Damory Court.

"Dar's Dam'ry Co'ot smack-dab ahaid, suh."

John Valiant looked up. Facing them at an elbow of the broad road, was an old gateway of time-nicked stone, clasping an iron gate that was quaint and heavy and red with rust. He put out his hand.

"Wait a moment," he said in a low voice, and as the creaking conveyance stopped, he turned and looked about him.

Facing the entrance the land fell away sharply to a miniature valley through which rambled a willow-bordered brook, in whose shallows short-horned cows stood lazily. Beyond, whither wound the Red Road, he could see a drowsy village, with a spire and a cupolaed court-house; and farther yet a yellow gorge with a wisp of white smoke curling above it marked the course of a crawling far-away railway.

"Et's er moughty fine ol' place, suh, mid dat big revenue ob trees," said Uncle Jefferson. "But Ah reck'n et ain' got none ob de modern conniv-ances."

As Valiant jumped down he was possessed by an odd sensation of old acquaintance—as if he had seen those tall white columns before—an illusory half-vision into some shadowy, fourth-dimensional landscape that belonged to his subconscious self, or that, glimpsed in some immaterial dream-picture, had left a faint-etched memory. Then, on a sudden, the vista vibrated and widened, the white columns expanded and shot up into the clouds, and from every bush seemed to peer a friendly black savage with woolly white hair!

"Wishing-House!" he whispered. The hidden country which his father's thoughts, sadly recurring, had painted to the little child that once he was, in the guise of an endless wonder-tale! His eyes misted over, and it seemed to him that moment that his father was very near.

Leaving the negro to unload his belongings, he traversed an overgrown path of mossed gravel, between box-rows frowsled like the manes of lions gone mad and smothered in an accumulation of matted roots and debris of rotting foliage, and presently, the bulldog at his heels, found himself in the rear of the house.

"Mine!" he said aloud with a rueful pride. "And for general run-downness, it's up to the advertisement." He looked musingly at the piteous wreck and ruin, his gaze sweeping down across the bared fields and unkempt forest. "Mine!" he repeated. "All that, I suppose, for it has the same earmarks of neglect. Between those cultivated stretches it looks like a wedge of Sahara gone astray." His gaze returned to the house. "Yet what a place it must have been in its time!" He went slowly back to where his conductor sat on the lichened horse-block.

"We's heah," called Uncle Jefferson cheerfully. "Whut we gwinter do nex', suh? Reck'n Ah better go ovah ter Miss Dandridge's place fer er crowbah. Lawd!" he added, "ef he ain' got de key! Whut yo' think ob dat now?"

John Valiant was looking closely at the big key; for there were words, which he had not noted before engraved in the massive flange. "Friends all hours." He smiled. The sentiment sent a warm current of pleasure to his finger-tips. Here was the very text of hospitality!

A Lilliputian spider-web was stretched over the preempted keyhole, and he fetched a grass-stem and poked out its tiny gray-striped denizen before he inserted the key in the rusted lock. He turned it with a curious sense of timidity. All the strength of his fingers was necessary before the massive door swung open and the leveling sun sent its late red rays into the gloomy interior.

He stood in a spacious hall, his nostrils filled with a curious but not unpleasant aromatic odor with which the place was strongly impregnated. The hall ran the full length of the building, and in its center a wide, balustraded double staircase led to upper darkness. The floor, where his footprints had disturbed the even gray film of dust, was of fine close parquetry and had been generously strewn everywhere with a mica-like powder. He stooped and took up a pinch in his fingers, noting that it gave forth the curious spicy scent. Dim paintings in tarnished frames hung on the walls. From a niche on the break of the stairway looked down the face of a tall Dutch clock, and on one side protruded a huge bulging something draped with a yellowed linen sheet. From its shape he guessed this to be an elk's head. Dust, undisturbed, lay thickly on everything, ghostly floating cobwebs crawled across his face, and a bat flitted out of a fireplace and vanished squeaking over his head. With Uncle Jefferson's help he opened the rear doors and windows, knocked up the rusted bolts of the shutters and flung them wide.

But for the dust and cobwebs and the strange odor, mingled with the faint musty smell that pervades a sunless interior, the former owner of the house might have deserted it a week ago. On a wall-rack lay two walking-sticks and a gold-mounted hunting-crop, and on a great carved chest below it had been flung an opened book bound in tooled leather. John Valiant picked this up curiously. It was "Lucile." He noted that here and there passages were marked with penciled lines—some light and femininely delicate, some heavier, as though two had been reading it together, noting their individual preferences.

He laid it back musingly, and opening a door, entered the large room it disclosed. This had been the dining-room. At one end stood a crystal-knobbed mahogany sideboard, holding glass candlesticks in the shape of Ionic columns—above it a quaint portrait of a lady in hoops and love-curls—and at the other end was a huge fireplace with rust-red fire-dogs and tarnished brass fender. All these, with the round centipede table and the Chippendale chairs set in order against the walls, were dimmed and grayed with a thick powdering of dust.

The next room that he entered was big and wide, a place of dark colors, nobly smutched of time. It had been at once library and living-room. A great leather settee was drawn near the desk and beside this stood a reading-stand with a small china dog and a squat bronze lamp upon it. In contrast to the orderly dining-room there was about this chamber a sense of untouched disorder—a desk-drawer jerked half-open, a yellowed newspaper torn across and flung into a corner, books tossed on desk and lounge, and in the fireplace a little heap of whitened ashes in which charred fragments told of letters and papers burned in haste.

Suddenly he lifted his eyes. Above the desk hung a life-size portrait of a man, in the high soft stock and velvet collar of half a century before. The right eye, strangely, had been cut from the canvas. He stood straight and tall, one hand holding an eager hound in leash, his face proud and florid, his single, cold, steel-blue eye staring down through its dusty curtain with a certain malicious arrogance, and his lips set in a sardonic curve that seemed about to sneer. It was for an instant as if the pictured figure confronted the young man who stood there, mutely challenging his entrance into that tomb-like and secret-keeping quiet; and he gazed back as fixedly, repelled by the craft of the face, yet subtly attracted. "I wonder who you were," he said. "You were cruel. Perhaps you were wicked. But you were strong, too."

He returned to the outer hall to find that the negro had carried in his trunk, and he bade him place it, with the portmanteau, in the room he had just left. Dusk was falling.

"Uncle Jefferson," said Valiant abruptly, "have you a family?"

"No, suh. Jes' me en mah ol' 'ooman."

"Can she cook?"

"Cook!" The genial titter again captured his dusky escort. "When she got de fixens, Ah reck'n she de beaten'es cook in his heah county."

"How would you both like to live here with me for a while? She could cook and you could take care of me."

Uncle Jefferson's eyes seemed to turn inward with mingled surprise and introspection. He shifted from one foot to the other, swallowed difficultly several times, and said, "Ah ain' nebbah seed yo' befo', suh."

"Well, I haven't seen you either, have I?"

"Dat's de trufe, suh, 'deed et is! Hyuh, hyuh! Whut Ah means ter say is dat de ol' 'ooman kain' cook no fancy didoes like what dey eats up Norf. She kin jes' cook de Ferginey style."

"That sounds good to me," quoth Valiant. "I'll risk it. Now as to wages—"

"Ah ain' specticulous as ter de wages," said Uncle Jefferson. "Ah knows er gemman when Ah sees one."

"Then it's a bargain," responded Valiant with alacrity. "Can you come at once?"

"Yas, suh, me en Daph gwineter come ovah fus' thing in de mawnin'. Whut yo'-all gwineter do fo' yo' suppah?"

"I'll get along," Valiant assured him cheerfully. "Here is five dollars. You can buy some food and things to cook with, and bring them with you. Do you think there's a stove in the kitchen?"

"Ah reck'n," replied Uncle Jefferson. "En ef dar ain' Daph kin cook er Chris'mus dinnah wid fo' stones en er tin skillet. Yas, suh!"

WOOD OF IMMENSE VALUE

Greenheart, South American Product, Has Most Wonderful Qualities for the Shipbuilder.

Greenheart, the wood which the Isthmian canal commission is desirous of securing for use in the construction of docks and similar works in the Panama canal, because it is said by experts to resist more than any other wood the attacks of marine borers which rapidly destroy piles and other submarine structures, is one of the most valuable of timbers. It is native of South America and the West Indies, and from its bark and fruits is obtained bibirine, which is often used as a febrifuge instead of quinine.

The wood is of a dark green color, sap wood and heart wood being so much alike that they can with difficulty be distinguished from each other. The heart wood is one of the most desirable of all timbers, particularly in the shipbuilding industry. Indisputable records show that the best grades surpass iron and steel in lasting qualities in salt water, submerged logs having remained intact for one hundred years.

In the Kelvingrove museum, Glasgow, there are two pieces of planking which illustrate better than anything else this durable quality. They are both from a wreck which was submerged eighteen years off the west coast of Scotland. The one specimen—greenheart—is merely slightly pitted on the surface, the body of the wood being perfectly sound and untouched, while the other—teak—is almost entirely eaten away.

It is extensively used in shipbuilding for keelsons, beams, engine bearings and planking, and it is also used in the general arts, but its excessive weight unfits it for many purposes for which its other properties would render it eminently suitable.—Below the Rio Grande.

Legend of Aconite.

Aconite is classed by homeopathic authorities as the patriarch of drugs, as far as literature is concerned. It is told how Hercules went down to the lower regions and carried the three-headed hound Cerberus to the upper world. That ferocious beast was raging at this treatment, and the froth that fell to the ground was the origin of aconite, for it grew up from the froth as from seeds. It was on a bleak, windswept hill or mountain, and it is in such regions that the plant grows today. This hill, in Pontica, was known in olden days as 'Aconitos.'

LOCAL WOMEN AGREE WITH STAGE BEAUTIES

Of all women in the world, probably those on the stage are most particular about their personal appearance, and especially in the care of their hair; and when such leading stage beauties as Ethel Barrymore, Elsie Ferguson, Natalie Alt, Louise Dresser, Rose Coghlan, Laurette Taylor, and many others are so enthusiastic about Harmony Hair Beautifier as to write in praise of it, that is certainly evidence that it does just what they say it does—that is, beautifies the hair. There are many women right in this town, and men, too, who regard it as indispensable, because it makes the hair glossier and more silky, easier to dress and make stay in place. Sprinkle a little on your hair each time before dressing it. Contains no oil; will not change color of hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep hair and scalp dandruff free and clean, use HarmonyShampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick, thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Contains nothing that can harm the hair; leaves no harshness or stickiness.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way or your money back. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us.—Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

LARGE PLANS FOR STATE S. S. CONVENTION

The plans for the thirty-first annual convention of the Alabama Sunday School Association, to be held in Mobile, Ala., April 21, 22 dnd 23. are nearly complete, and the indications now are that this will be, by far, the strongest and most largely attended of any Sunday school conventions ever held in the state.

General Secretary Leon C. Palmer, of Montgomery, who has just been on a tour, extending from extreme South Alabama to extreme North Alabama, reports that the popular interest in the approaching convention is greater than in any previous year. Registration at the last State Convention showed 1,403 delegates from fifteen denominations, and representing every county in Alabama, except Lamar, Winston, Montgomery and Choctaw. It is believed that this year every county will be represented.

The Program Committee has secured, as speakers, some of the most prominent Sunday school specialists in North America, and in addition, about forty of the Sunday school leaders from all denominations in Alabama. Among the out-of-state speakers will be two men of international reputation who have never before attended any similar gathering in this state. Names of the speakers and the full program will be announced later.

One of the attractive features of this convention will be the fact that the music will be led by Prof. E. O. Excell, of Chicago, generally considered the leading convention chorus leader of the world today, assisted by Prof. A. W. Roper, of Winona Lake, the famous composer and pianist.

The several railroads of the state have granted a reduced rate of about half price for the round trip. In anticipation of the heavy attendance expected from all parts of Alabama, the railroads have already arranged for three special Sunday school trains, instead of one as last year, to carry only delegotes to the convention. The possible necessity for a fourth special train is also being considered.

Full details as to the arrangements for the Convention will be given out by the State Executive Committee within the next few days.

IS HOBSON A SOCIALIST

Editor Press:

I was talking with a gentleman from Birmingham a few days ago and he was an ardent supporter of Mr. Hobson. He said that it was common talk in Jefferson county that Hobson was a Socialist, but he would not say so because the Socialist were not strong enough to elect him, and if he could get to the Senate now, six years from now Hobson would come out for President on the Socialist ticket. Now, Mr. Editor, such expressions coming from a supporter of Mr. Hobson shows that there is something in it. A DEMOCRAT.

MASS MEETING HELD AT THE COURT HOUSE SATURDAY, AT WHICH CHILTON COUNTY DEMOCRACY PRESENTS STRONG CLAIMS IN SUPPORT OF JUDGE DEASON'S CANDIDACY

Judge Deason a Man Essentially of the People; a Man Who Will Represent the Whole District

Judge E. B. Deason who recently entered the race for Congress from the Fourth District, was born and reared in Chilton county and is well and favorably known, not only to the people of his home county, but has many friends over the district.

He is truly a man of the people, having lived on the farm until after he had reached his majority; he knows the life of the farmer, and is in full sympathy with him and his needs. For several years he taught school in Chilton county and has always been interested in the cause of education. On account of the lack of school advantages which prevailed in the county in his day, he did not have the best of opportunities in the way of schooling, but he was ambitious and had his heart set on becoming a useful citizen, and by continuous and hard study, he succeeded in working out for himself an education. He has for many years been identified with the political and business life of Chilton county. It was he who lead the Democratic hosts when they broke the backbone of Republicanism in the county in 1910, defeating Judge L. H. Reynolds, republican, for the office of Judge of Probate. This was the first victory the party had won in twenty years. As Judge of Probate he has given to the people a wise and conservative administration of the affairs of the county, and during the three years since his election more has been done in the way of building roads in the county than was ever done in all the years before.

He is a good roads enthusiast, and a member of the executive committee of the Alabama Good Roads Association from this District, and if elected to Congress the district will have in him a faithful friend and worker in the interest of good roads. He favors Federal aid in the building of public highways, and in Congress would be found fighting in the ranks of those who are advocating the use of government money to build post roads wherever the mails are carried by the rural free delivery service. This would mean much to Chilton county and the counties comprising the Fourth District, which he now desires to represent in Congress.

The voters of the Fourth District have long felt a desire for some clean and capable man to make the race for Congress against Mr. Blackmon, and at different times Judge Deason has been mentioned as a suitable man, but it was not until a week ago when letters were coming by every mail, telegrams to the number of fifty or more, were received, and a large delegation of men representing every county and locality of the District came to Clanton to urge him to announce himself a candidate and promising him their support, that Judge Deason thought seriously of the matter and yielded.

Mass Meeting at Court House

Judge E. B. Deason was formally presented to the people of the Fourth District for Congress by an enthusiastic mass meeting of Chilton County democrats, last Saturday, held in the Court House.

The meeting was called hurriedly, and the day was one of the worst of this winter, yet a more zealous political gathering would be hard to find. Mr. C. Fenn Jones, acting chairman, stated the purpose of the meeting.

After several ardent talks, Mr; Guy Higgins introduced and moved to adopt the resolution as printed below. Mr. O. E. Latham warmly seconded the motion, and the same was adopted unanimously:

WHEREAS, Hon. E. B. Deason, in response to the urgent solicitations and demands of a very large number of Democratic voters from the counties of Dallas, Cleburne, Calhoun, Talladega, Shelby, and Chilton has announced his candidacy for the position of Representative in Congress from the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama.

AND WHEREAS, We, the Democrats of Chilton county, know that the Hon. E. B. Deason is a man truly of the people, advised of and in touch with their wants and needs regardless of their line of occupation or profession; And knowing further his record on the farm until twenty-six years of age, his connection and association with the banking affairs of our county, his election and successful administration of the office of Judge of Probate in our county, and the valiant manner in which he, as our standard bearer, led the Democratic party of this county in the last campaign to success.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the Democracy of Chilton County, in mass meeting assembled, that we do hereby endorse and recommend Hon. E. B. Deason to the voters of the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama, as being

A true and tried Democrat, a tireless worker in the ranks, and always alert to the interests of his party.

A man in touch with the interests of his constituents, and who has never proven truant to their confidence.

A man of irreproachable character, whose public and private life is without blemish or regrets.

A man of sterling integrity, one who has never abused the confidence of friend or foe.

A man of capacity and ability, well qualified to represent and protect the interests of the voters of our District in the Halls of Congress.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That it is with pleasure, pride and confidence that we endorse the candidacy of Hon. E. B. Deason, and bespeak for him the unqualified confidence and support of the Democracy of the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama.

The outline of the campaign was mapped out in detail and every one left the meeting filled with the feeling that Deason is going to win.

Campaign Committee Selected.

At a meeting of some of the friends of Judge E. B. Deason for the purpose of organizing and mapping out the work of his campaign, Mr. E. M. Pinckard was elected Chairman of the Campaign Committee, and Mr. W. L Mullins Vice-Chairman.

A campaign committee was selected from all over the county, but on account of the list of names being so long we are unable to get it in this issue of the paper, and will have to defer publication of it until next week.

Messrs. Pinckard and Mullins with a corps of assistants and stenographers have entered actively upon the work of the campaign with headquarters on the second floor of the Wilson Building.

Mr. T. B. Rainwater, a prosperous farmer of Plantersville was in Clanton on business Monday.

PROGRESSIVE CLANTON.

Mayor E. A. Matthews, inspired by the overwhelming victory for waterworks at Monday's election, contributes the following poem:

Clanton was, a year ago,
A sure 'nuff country town;
It had no water main that run
Way down beneath the ground;
It had no sewerage system there,
To take the filth away,
In fact you never dreamed t'would be
The town it is today.

We'll have beneath this noble soil
A water main complete—
The bonds we'll issue from our town
Accomplish this great feat,
And make it possible to have
Pure water in our home.
We are glad to know the infant days
Of Clanton will soon be gone.

We'll have a sewerage system here
That covers a very large scope,
It'll carry off its million germs
To regions quite remote,
And help preserve our health, of which
We should always be proud
That Clanton will no longer dwell
Beneath a threatening cloud.

We'll have a plant up on the hill
In which we'll take much pride,
Built of brick and finished up
Of spotless white inside;
We'll have two engines, either
Will light the town alone—
Should we see fit to run them both
They'd light a thousand homes.

The work of tank construction
Will soon go on quite fast—
We'll have our fire protection, which
We've not had in the past;
Our well is being dug today
By experts on the ground—
And soon pure water can be run
To every home in town.

PROPOSED BUSINESS COLLEGE FOR THE CITY OF CLANTON

F. L. Heaton, Field Manager of the Southern Business College, of Mobile, Alabama, is here arranging for the opening of a branch of that splendid institution.

This College will be a strong factor in the development and upbuilding of our city, and its establishment here will mean a line of progress from which every citizen and business man will be personally and financially benefited. The College will give our young people a greater opportunity to acquire a practical business education which they can turn into money in the business world. A complete equipment for the thorough instruction of the students will be installed.

Mr. Heaton says he is very much encouraged with the manner in which the College idea has been received in this locality, being evidence of interest in things that stand for progress and make for the building up of a community.

Mr. Heaton will remain in this field until the Clanton College is well under way. He will devote his time to securing enrollments, which he feels he will be able to accomplish without any great effort, as he is firmly of the belief that the people of Clanton and surrounding territory fully appreciate the importance of having a Branch of this institution for the successful training of young men and young women in the science of bookkeeping, banking, commercial arithmetic, stenography, English, penmanship, commercial papers, etc., situated right in their midst, which will give them the same advantages that the largest Business Colleges in the world, located in Mobile, Atlanta, Nashville or any other large city will offer them.

It is to the Mayor of our city, Dr. E. A. Matthews and Dr. E. E. Upchurch that credit must be given for having directed the attention of the Southern Business College people to Clanton as a desirable location for a Branch College. This enterprise should be given

LANDSLIDE FOR WATERWORKS

Proposition Carries By Almost Unanimous Vote

Survey of the Town Will Be Made at Once and as Soon as the Bonds Have Been Sold Work of Installing System Will Commence.

The election Monday resulted in an overwhelming victory for water works improvement for the Town of Clanton. 144 votes was the total number cast, 130 for and 14 against.

For several months this important move for the the town's upbuilding has been agitated, two elections having been ordered to submit the proposition to the voters of the town for their rejection or approval. However, at both times the question did not seem to meet with favor with some of our citizens, and the City Council rather than have the measure defeated wisely decided to postpone the election till the citizens could have opportunity to study the question and become awakened to the great necessity of water works.

On Friday night last at the Court House Mr. Cook representing the J. B. McCrary & Co., explained the question to the satisfaction of the voters, and when the election took place on Monday the vote was almost unanimous, the opposition being about as strong as punch at a W. C. T. U. Social.

This is indeed a great step for the advancement of our prosperous town, and shows that the citizens are fully alive to every question that effects our material welfare, and the citizenship is to be congratulated upon their verdict at the polls.

A survey will at once be made, and preparations commenced to begin the work of installing the system, and when completed, we are informed that it will be one of the most up-to-date systems to be found in any town this size in the South. There are already a number of prospective buyers for the bonds, including firms from Birmingham, Memphis and Atlanta.

CONGRATULATIONS FROM ATLANTA

Mayor Matthews received the following congratulatory letter from the J. B. McCrary Company:

ATLANTA, March 3rd, 1914.

Hon. E. A. Matthews, Mayor,
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:

We want to congratulate you on the result of the election, which is very flattering in view of some of the opposition we had been lead to believe existed.

You are certainly to be congratulated on so successfully overcoming all opposition and having them back you up so unanimously by this solid vote.

Mr. Cook was much relieved when the telegram came in just before he left the office, and before leaving we arranged for our Mr. Ford, field engineer to proceed direct from Florida to Clanton, and have wired him. After Mr. Ford gets up this map and local data our Chief Engineer, Mr. Cook's brother, will come over with Mr. Cook and help you decide on all the details of the plans. We will push the work to a rapid conclusion, and suggest that while you receive bids for your bonds that you not close the sale of these to anyone as we are quite sure we will be able to pay you more money than any one else and handle the issue without a lot of technical delays such as most towns experience with bond people. You will of course want to arrange to push the work to get the benefit of it this summer, and we give you this suggestion in the light of our experience as the proper financing must come ahead of everything else. Very truly yours,

W. M. HAMBROUGH,
Vice Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

Settling Siberia.

Omsk, Siberia, has become the outfitting point for an extraordinary migration, estimated at 2,000,000 people annually, which pours into the country bordering on Mongolia. Nothing in Europe or Asia has ever been quite so like the springing up of the great cities of the American middle west as is the growth today of new towns in Siberia. Except that the tide is moving east instead of west the movement has many parallels to the wonderful migration which won the west for America. There are, however, two striking differences. The first is that the pioneering is comparatively luxurious compared to the American movement, while the natives, instead of being swept aside, are being absorbed by intermarriage with the settlers. The ten-day joruney up the Irtish river from Omsk into the promised land is made by steamboats which are the last word in the luxury and convenience of river traffic.

NO GUSHER

But Tells Facts About Postum.

A Wis. lady found an easy and safe way out of the ills caused by coffee. She says:

"We quit coffee and have used Postum for the past eight years, and drink it nearly every meal. We never tire of it.

"For several years previous to quitting coffee I could scarcely eat anything on account of dyspepsia, bloating after meals, palpitation, sick headache—in fact was in such misery and distress I tried living on hot water and toast.

"Hearing of Postum I began drinking it and found it delicious. My ailments disappeared, and now I can eat anything I want without trouble.

"My parents and husband had about the same experience. Mother would often suffer after eating, while yet drinking coffee. My husband was a great coffee drinker and suffered from indigestion and headache.

"After he stopped coffee and began Postum both ailments left him. He will not drink anything else now and we have it three times a day. I could write more but am no gusher—only state plain facts."

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

Recalling the Bloody War of the Broken Egg

WASHINGTON.—The subject of eggs came up at luncheon time in the senate restaurant. The proposition of efficient economy was under discussion when Senator Carroll S. Page made the startling statement that in the discussion of tariff and currency, one important element of cost and loss had been overlooked. He referred to the report from the secretary of agriculture, declared that in one year over 1,500,000 eggs were destroyed in transportation to New York city. This loss represented 9 per cent. of the total supply. With a twinkle in his eye, Senator Page suggested that some one might acquire fame and fortune by inventing a safe and sane egg-carrier that would avert the smashing of 10 per cent. of the eggs laid by the American hen. The farmer's boy of years ago can recall the time when eggs sold at from five to ten cents a dozen, and even under those conditions the smashing of an egg was a real calamity.

The omnipresent egg on the breakfast table recalls the story told by the late Senator Allison of a broken egg that led to an Indian war in Minnesota. In 1862, several Sioux Indians appeared in a farmer's dooryard and saw a nest of eggs with a hen sitting on it, as an industrious hen is wont to do. An Indian picked up one of the eggs, and his companions warned him not to break it as it belonged to a white man. Having a general contempt for all pale-faces, the brave could not resist smashing the egg. He proceeded to break the others in the nest, while another Sioux shot the hen, scared from her nest. A third Sioux, to show his heroism, sent a bullet through the farmer's cow, which brought the farmer to the door, rifle in hand; and a fourth Indian, to show his supreme bravery and his contempt for the white man, shot the farmer dead. This bloody outrage was completed by massacring the farmer's wife and children.

Thus from a bit of mischief started by a broken egg, there followed a revolt at the Indian reservation.

Chance Must Have Been a Little Too Caustic

REPRESENTATIVE ADAMSON wrote to M. O. Chance, chief clerk of the postoffice department, a little while ago in behalf of a clerk, A. E. Moody, a colored man from Georgia. He said to Mr. Chance that the clerk was a pretty good fellow, so "if he has done wrong don't discharge him, but cuss him out a bit."

Well, in a few days along came a letter from Chance to Representative Adamson, saying that the cussing-out process must have been a little to caustic, for the clerk had resigned, leaving a letter informing Mr. Chance that a minister of the gospel had flown from their midst. This is the letter:

"Hon. Mr. Chance, Chief Clerk of the Postoffice Department.—Dear Sir: I do hereby send in my resignation to you. I truly hope that you will received it. Please your honor sir: I am a gospel minister. I have been called a long time ago to preach the gospel by the God of heaven and earth. I cannot do it successful and hold my job in the government services, and I will pray for the blessing of God to rest on the Postmaster General and his cabinet in the Post Office Department. But I may miss the envelope that is handed to me twice a month from the disbursing clerk, Mr. Mooney, but I rather missed that than to miss eternal life. Woe be unto me if I preach not the gospel, for it is the power of God unto salvation unto every man that believe. I know that my white friends of Newnan, Ga., my home, will be surprised when they hear of this. Mr. Hon. William C Adamson, the Congressman of said district and Mr. Hon. M. Bell of Georgia. By their influence I came in the services. They have stood by me because they have my record from Newnan, Ga., as a negro, but I must go and preach the gospel in fall. REV. BLANK."

After which Representative Adamson wrote "Brother" Chance:

"I have your favor of the 4th instant, inclosing copy of a letter from Rev. Blank. I was not aware of the fact that he was a minister, nor do I know whether he has verified his call to the ministry or not. If he has correct advice in his credentials from on high you people in the postoffice department are in a bad fix."

Saddest Plaint One Ever Hears in Washington

WORKING for Uncle Sam, which at first is a vocation, oftentimes becomes a disease, and an incurable one. The saddest plaint one ever hears in Washington—sadder than the wail of the rejected office seeker—is that of the helpless and hopeless government clerk lamenting his unhappy lot. He realizes that he is "in bad," and yearns for one more chance to right himself. He is in the net and cannot escape. He would like to extricate himself, but that is impossible. Perhaps his head has whitened and his hands have palsied in the service, and his years of steady employment are unrepresented by a dollar saved. His fate is sealed.

Gloomily he trods his weary way. Perhaps he is a man yet capable of throwing off his government harness and hitching himself to something better outside the cramping, grinding world of clerical slavery under official tryranny, but he has a family and cannot afford to take a chance. He has certain fixed expenses, and his income must be uninterrupted. He has not saved a penny, because his salary, which looked quite sufficient when he was a single man, now is woefully inadequate under the added strain of the obligations of a family.

He could fill satisfactorily most any position requiring clerical ability and experience, but he cannot let go his government job to find something even equally as remunerative. He is afraid to take the chance.—National Magazine.

As Everybody Knows, "Findings Is Keepings"

A FIERCE winter's wind went tangoing down the avenue the other day, with a derby hat dancing along. But it wasn't a "hesitation" dance. It romped and danced and rolled onward for three whirlwindy squares, until the man who had been sprinting after it gave up the chase.

And as he gasped and wheezed—red and wind blown—this is what a batch of fellow men heard him yell—every last man of them chuckling at the poor chap—which is the way of man, except when he's chasing a hat of his own:

"You can keep it up to Jericho, if you want to. I'm done—you unholy roller, you." He shook himself with the disgusted emphasis which dear Darwin could have told him he had inherited from some prehistoric web hen, and then turned and plodded back.

The hat, however, had no notion of taking a trip to Jericho. It stopped the instant its owner turned, and slid into a sheltered curb ledge, where it lay until another man came along and picked it up.

He was undoubtedly an honest man, for he looked about for a claimant, but the owner was already merged in the crowd, and, as everybody knows, findings is keepings.

The finder brushed the hat with his sleeve, now tried it on his own head, a derby, with the latest kink in ribbon bands, and—judging by the grin, as he looked inside—just his own size.

PUZZLING UNCLE SAM'S SECRETARIES

WEST IS NAMED SENATOR

APPOINTEE ONE OF BEST KNOWN MEN OF SOUTHERN GEORGIA.

Has Been Prominently Identified With Politics in the State for Many Years.

Atlanta.—Governor Slaton appointed William Stanley West of Valdosta, one of the best known men in the state, to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator A. O. Bacon, whose death occurred in Washington, February 14.

Governor Slaton did not write any formal announcement. He merely walked out into the reception room, saw that the newspapers were all represented and spoke one word:

"West!"

In an instant the news traveled throughout the capitol and was flashed to all parts of the city and state.

Commenting on the appointment, Governor Slaton said:

"It was only a moment ago that I came to a definite decision. Any time up to five minutes ago I was free to change my mind. I had told no one of my intention."

When seen after the statement had been made at the capitol that the governor had appointed him, Mr. West said:

"I have been in Atlanta for several days, but I have not obtruded myself upon the governor. After the burial of Senator Bacon my friends not only from all parts of south Georgia, but throughout the state, notified me that they would present my claims to the governor. Many of them asked me to meet them in Atlanta for a conference on the situation and I have been here for a few days with that end in view.

William Stanley West, the oldest surviving son of James and Mary A. West, is a leading member of the Lowndes county bar, with residence and office in the city of Valdosta. He was born in Marion county, Georgia, August 23, 1849; was educated in Mercer university, where he graduated with the degree of bachelor of arts, subsequently receiving the degree of master of arts from the same institution, completing his education when he was 33 years of age. While a student there he was honored with the presidency of the Ciceronian Literary society and was anniversarian of that society in 1880.

From 1892 to 1897 he served as a member of the lower house of the state legislature, and in 1898-99 was a member of the state senate. In 1900 he declined a return to the lower house, but was elected to that body in 1902 and served until 1904. In 1905-06 he was again returned to the state senate without opposition, and was then elected president of that body. In 1908 he was sent as a delegate at large from the state of Georgia to the national Democratic convention, held at Denver, Col.

Snow Throughout the South.

Atlanta.—Atlanta was in the grip of the most persistent snowstorm she has had in years. The snow was by no means confined to Atlanta, but on the contrary Atlanta was one of the last cities which the blizzard visited. Snow fell in Charleston, Savannah and the cities of the mountain sections before it began to fall in Atlanta. The snow stretched its blanket over the entire south all the way from Richmond to New Orleans, leaving out only a small part of Florida and possibly a few isolated spots here and yonder.

Canadian Pacific Won't Use Canal.

Washington.—Assurances that the Canadian Pacific railroad has no intention of attempting to evade the provision of the Panama canal act barring railroad-owned ships from the canal, reached Washington through official channels. With this assurance came a further declaration that the Canadian Pacific would not send its boats through the canal even if there were no question about the right to do so, because the company's officials could see no advantage in diverting ocean traffic.

BECKER MAY BE FREED

COURT DECISION PROBABLY MEANS BECKER CASE WILL BE DISMISSED.

Decision Alleges That Goff Was Unfair in His Treatment of Becker.

New York.—The conviction of Former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker of the murder of the gambler, Herman Rosenthal, was annulled by the courts of appeals at Albany, the highest court in the state. He is entitled to a new trial, but it seemed probable that he might go free without facing a second ordeal. It was made known that District Attorney Charles S. Whitman believes that under the prevailing opinion handed down by the court, conviction a second time will be impossible.

Appeals taken by the four gunmen, "Whitey" Lewis, "Lefty Louie," "Gyp the Blood" and "Dago Frank," convicted as actual murderers of Rosenthal, and whom Becker was accused of having instigated to commit the crime, were not sustained and they will have to die in the electric chair, probably in March, except in the event of executive clemency.

Ossining, N. Y.—"It's a long lane that has no turning," Charles Becker said in the "death house" of Sing Sing prison, when he received news of the court's decision.

WOMEN BRAVE SNOW TO VOTE

Thousands of Them Took Part in Primaries at Chicago.

Chicago.—Thousands of Chicago women had their first real experience in Chicago with the ballot box and took part in the actual nomination of candidates for the city council. In wards in which women candidates were running in opposition to men for places in the city council, the women candidates toured the wards and hustled for votes in approved political fashion.

A snowstorm early in the day delayed many voters, and a movement fostered by many suffrage leaders, who believed that women should not formally ally themselves with any specific party, kept hundreds rfom voting at the primaries.

Forced to Remove Head Dress.

Washington.—Miss Maud McLure Kelly of Birmingham, Ala., was admitted to practice before the Supreme court on motion of Secretary Bryan, but to do so she had to take off her head dress. Miss Kelly was anxious to wear her academic cap and gown upon being admitted. The court marshal gently reminded her, however, that members of the bar must remove their hats in addressing the court and that the rule applied alike to men and women.

Jim Conley Is Convicted.

Atlanta.—Jim Conley begins the serving of a year's sentence on the chaingang following the verdict of a jury in his case, which reported against the former pencil factory sweeper, charged with being accessory after the fact in the murder of Mary Phagan by Leo Frank. Conley took his sentence stoically. He smiled when he was told by his attorney that he "had got off light." The second day's developments in the sordid trial proceedings in which Conley was principal were not sensational.

Eyes of Slain Girl Photographed.

Aurora, Ill.—Yielding to persons who have faith in ages old superstition, the authorities here have photographed the eyes of Theresa Hollander. State's Attorney Tyler admitted this, saying that it was the belief of many that the retina of a murdered person retains the image of the murderer. But whether the negative held by the authorities showed anything of this nature was not revealed by the state's attorney. Neither did he say whether it would be introduced as evidence in efforts to fasten the guilt of Miss Hollander's

WHEN KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE GLASS OF SALTS

Eat Less Meat If Kidneys Hurt or You Have Backache or Bladder Misery —Meat Forms Uric Acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF HAIR STOPS FALLING

Girls! Try This! Makes Hair Thick, Glossy, Fluffy, Beautiful—No More Itching Scalp.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Adv.

MOST DESTRUCTIVE STORM SINCE 1888

TRAFFIC IS PARALYZED OVER NEW ENGLAND—MANY PERISH.

PROPERTY LOSS IS HEAVY

Reports From Various Cities Show Widespread Damage From Wind and Snow.

New York.—With temperatures rising and fair weather promised, New York and vicinity began to emerge from the storm which railroad and telegraph companies declare has been the most destructive in this section of the country since the memorable blizzard of 1888.

Reports from other cities showed the damage caused by wind, snow, rain and sleet to be widespread. From Cleveland on the west and Baltimore on the south, to the Canadian and Nova Scotian borders, the storm has been general. In New England further damage is expected from rivers and streams swollen by melting ice and snow. In and near New York 11 persons perished, and several fatalities were reported elsewhere.

Except by roundabout routes and with the aid of a few wires running underground, commercial New York still remained cut off from telegraph communication with the west and south. The public service corporations reached Philadelphia by way of Montreal, and had a few wires to Washington, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Scranton, Wilmington, Richmond and Reading. For the most part these were telephone circuits. Hope was expressed for better conditions, although it will be at least a week, it was said, before service can be restored to normal.

Telegraph company officials said they could not estimate at this time the cost of making repairs. The loss to one company alone was placed at $200,000 for New York and vicinity.

Citing the lesson taught at the time Washington was cut off from communication on the day of the Taft inauguration, telephone company officials declared that at at no time has telephone service to the national capital been cut off completely. After the experience in 1909 wires to Washington were placed underground.

The fallen telegraph poles which interrupted wire service continued to delay trains for many hours. Trains are "lost" on many roads in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and other states. The Pennsylvania railroad announced that it had resumed sending out regular trains from the local terminal after 25 hours interrupted service. On some roads trains sent out from New York and New Jersey stations were stocked with double rations and were marked "subject to delay."

Recovering From Gale.

Philadelphia—Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware and Southern New Jersey are gradually recovering from the effects of the blizzard. Thirteen deaths due to the storm were reported from this city and nearby sections.

INTERVENTION POSSIBLE.

President Wilson Fully Realizes Gravity of Situation.

Washington.—President Wilson revealed to those who discussed Mexican affairs with him that he fully realized the gravity of the situation resulting from the killing of William S. Benton, a British subject, the reported murder of Gustav Rauch and Clemente Vergara, American citizens, and General Carranza's denial of the right of the United States to look after the interests of foreigners generally in Mexico.

The President spoke deploringly of armed intervention, but at the same time pointedly referred to the size and power of a country like the United States as being sufficient warrant for a calm and patient course while compliance with the American demands were being sought.

TO REDUCE RATES IN KENTUCKY.

Will Equalize Rates in That State, Alabama and Tennessee.

Louisville.—The Louisville and Nashville Railroad company has announced its intention to voluntarily reduce passenger fares in Kentucky to 2 1-2 cents per mile before May 1. This action is taken, it is announced, in order to equalize rates in Kentucky with rates in Alabama and Tennessee and is voluntary.

Wife to Petition Husband's Recall.

San Francisco.—In addition to having brought divorce proceedings against Frederick S. Eggers, sheriff of San Francisco county, his wife announced in a signed statement that she would circulate a petition for his recall from office. They have lived together 38 years. "This is not spite work," said Mrs. Eggers. "I simply do not believe that Sheriff Eggers is a fit man to be in a public office." In her statement Mrs. Eggers outlines testimony which she has given before the grand jury.

SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR DARKENS YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Every body uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. —Adv.

DEEP CRACKS ON JOINTS

P. O. Box 378, El Paso, Texas.—"My trouble began December, 1911. It commenced on me by causing a scurf-like skin and my toe joints, finger joints and lips commenced to crack and split open. My finger cracks would bleed all day long; the cracks were very deep and my thumb seemed to be cracked to the bone. My hands were so bad that I had to sleep with gloves on. The cracks in my lips would bleed often during the day and I used to put adhesive plaster across them to try to keep them closed. My toes would bleed, and I would find blood in my socks when the day's work was done. The skin around the cracks was red and inflamed. I wore shoes one size too large on account of my feet being so sore. I used to become frantic with pain at times. My hands and feet used to smart.

"I suffered agony for four months. I went to town and got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment. From the time I commenced with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment until completely cured was just nineteen days." (Signed) Jack Harrison, Nov. 19, 1912.

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Feel All Used Up?

Ever feel that you can go no further—that you must have rest for that lame and aching back—relief from that constant, dead-tired feeling?

Have you suspected your kidneys?

Kidney disease shows itself in backache, nervous troubles and disorders of the kidney secretions. If tired, worried, lame, rheumatic, dizzy and nervous don't let a possible weakness of the kidneys escape attention until it turns into a case of gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease.

Sick kidneys go from bad to worse. Their useful work of filtering the blood is only partly done. Poisons that should be passed out with the kidney secretions are held in the blood, circulating freely, attacking muscles, nerves and vital organs. The kidneys inflame, swell and throb, and that is the cause of sharp pains in the back, or that dull, constant heavy ache.

For quick help use Doan's Kidney Pills. No other kidney remedy is used and recommended so generally. Take them when you feel the first bad backache, or see the first disturbance of the kidney secretions. Doan's have brought new life and strength to thousands of despairing men and women, and there is nothing in the remedy to cause any harm or start a pill-taking habit.

"What will help my back?"

Here's the best of proof—testimony from a grateful user.

GIVEN UP TO DIE

Kidney Disease Brought on a Complete Collapse.

Oliver Chappell, R. F. D. No. 3, Horseheads, N. Y., says: "Kidney trouble came on me suddenly and I didn't realize its seriousness until I collapsed. Four doctors treated me but none of their medicines did me the least bit of good. I was so bad that all one summer I had to sleep out doors in a hammock, bolstered up with pillows. I had to get up about twenty times at night to pass the kidney secretions. When I was well, I weighed one hundred seventy pounds, but the illness brought me down to one hundred pounds. My hands were numb and I couldn't do a bit of work. The doctors gave me up to die and I lost hope myself. I was in constant pain. My sister told me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and the first box helped me. I wasn't so nervous and I felt better. As I kept on taking the remedy, I got back my weight and I felt like a different man. Doan's Kidney Pills put me on my feet so that I could work; they saved my life."

DRUG HOUSE ENJOINED BY FEDERAL COURT

Judge Jeremiah Neterer, of the United States district court, to-day granted a permanent injunction in behalf of the Centaur Company of New York, the manufacturers of Fletcher's Castoria, against the Stewart & Holmes Drug Company of this city.

The controversy arose from the simulating of the labels of this well-known preparation, and from the evidence filed in the case it was shown that the infringing label was first discovered on sale in Honolulu, and was traced to its origin here in Seattle.

The defendant company is one of the oldest and largest concerns of its kind in the Northwest.

The decree carries with it an order that the Stewart & Holmes Company recall the goods which are on the market under the infringing label, and to pay all costs in the suit and damages assessed at $400.—Seattle, Wash., "Times."—Adv.

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

The man who turned the Republicans out of Chilton is one well qualified to make the race for Congress from the Fourth District. Deason is that man, and his District is for him and will elect him on April 6th.

While Judge Deason is away in the interest of his candidacy, the Probate office is in charge of the efficient and courteous Chief Clerk Thomas Pyron.

Hon. T. A. Curry left Tuesday morning for North Alabama to spend several days in the interest of his candidacy for Lieutenant Governor. The Senator is making an aggreesive campaign and we believe he is going to be an easy winner.

The people of the Fourth District should congratulate themselves upon the fact that they now have a candidate of the "Common People" to vote for to represent them in the Sixty-sixth Congress. Judge Deason is absolutely unhampered by any special interest, faction, clique or plan. He is capable, fearless and energetic in the discharge of every duty, and can be depended upon to do everything possible for the best interests of his constituents. Vote for him and you will make no mistake.

Judge E. B. Deason returned on Sunday last from Selma, where he spent a few days in the interest of his candidacy for Congress. The Judge met many prominent democrats of Dallas who assured him that their county would be found in the Deason column on April 6th by a large majority. Judge Deason left Tuesday for a trip to Calhoun and Cleburne counties.

The mass meeting held at the Court House Saturday to launch the campaign of Hon. E. B. Deason for Congress attests the high esteem in which he is held by the democrats of his home county, those who have known him for a long number of years and is a fitting tribute to the qualifications he possesses for the important office he seeks. Judge Deason is the candidate of no particular clique or faction, and if elected to Congress (and there is not any doubt in our mind but that he will be triumphantly elected) he will be the representative of the masses as against those arrayed with the special interests.

WILL ERADICATE CATTLE TICK

Southern Cattlemen Organize to Conduct Active Campaign for More and Better Live Stock in the South.

WILL IMPROVE THE BREEDS

Cattle Tick the Greatest Hindrance to Stock Growing in South—Pest Costs Over $100,000,000 Annually —Prominent Men at Convention Discuss Best Plans— Tick Must Go.

The Southern Cattlemen's association was organized at Montgomery, Ala., July 9, 1913. A hundred or more cattle growers and shippers, national and state live stock officials and representatives of the stock yards and railroad interests were present and took an active interest in the organization of the association.

The avowed object of the association are as follows:

1. The eradication of the cattle tick.
2. The development of a profitable cattle industry in the south.
3. The promotion of effective and uniform national and state live stock sanitary legislation.

The means which have been suggested for the accomplishment of these objects are in part as follows: 1. The holding of meetings for the discussion of live stock problems and the dissemination of live stock information. 2. The organization of local or county associations which will promote the work of tick eradication and the improvement of the cattle of the locality by the introduction of pure bred bulls. 3. By assisting the small live stock producer in marketing his products.

It has been suggested that an active field agent may be employed by the association to assist local cattlemen in the attainment of these purposes.

At Memphis, Tenn., on December 10th and 11th, 1913, the first regular meeting was held and a constitution and by-laws adopted fixing the annual membership dues at $2.00 per annum. At that meeting a large number of cattlemen were in attendance from all the southern states, from Kentucky to Florida and from Virginia to New Mexico, and enthusiasm ran high. Every southern cattleman owes it as his duty to join this association, and bankers, professional men and merchants can well afford to give it encouragement and assistance.

The initial work of the association will be directed toward the eradication of the cattle tick.

The work will be carried on in cooperation with the government, the Cattle Growers associations of the southern states, and many other organizations, together with prominent stock men and farmers of the south.

Some of the things advocated at the convention are:

1. That the railroads put cheaper rates on breeding cattle.
2. That the government stop all interstate shipment of tick-infested cattle. This includes cattle on the way to market for immediate slaughter as well as animals being used for stocking purposes.

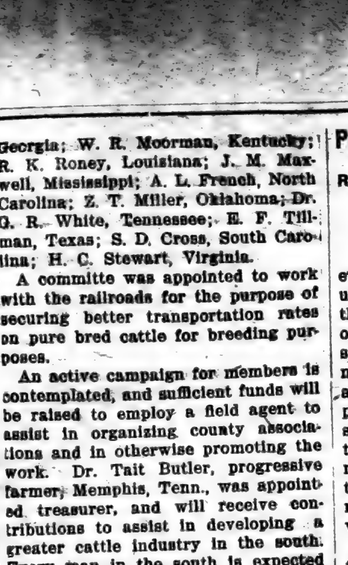
Resolutions were passed soliciting the co-operation of the oil mills of the south in building up the cattle industry and suggesting to the bankers of the south the importance of making cattle a basis of credit.

Professor Holden, director of Agricultural Extension Department of the International Harvester Company of New Jersey, addressed the convention. He considered the organization of the southern cattlemen the beginning of successful live stock growing on a large scale and the opening gun for the intelligent diversification of crops in the cotton belt. He was very enthusiastic in his remarks, relative to the future of the south, and offered to assist the people in every way possible to carry out the objects of the association.

Officers elected are:

D. S. Combs, Hickory Valley, Tenn., president.

Dr. Tait Butler, Memphis, Tenn., secretary.



The vice-presidents are:

Dr. C. A. Cary, Alabama; McQueen Chaires, Florida; Dr. [illegible] Robinson, Georgia; W. R. Moorman, Kentucky; R. K. Roney, Louisiana; J. M. Maxwell, Mississippi; A. L. French, North Carolina; Z. T. Miller, Oklahoma; Dr. O. R. White, Tennessee; E. F. Tillman, Texas; S. D. Cross, South Carolina; H. C. Stewart, Virginia.

A committe was appointed to work with the railroads for the purpose of securing better transportation rates on pure bred cattle for breeding purposes.

An active campaign for members is contemplated, and sufficient funds will be raised to employ a field agent to assist in organizing county associations and in otherwise promoting the work. Dr. Tait Butler, progressive farmer, Memphis, Tenn., was appointed treasurer, and will receive contributions to assist in developing a greater cattle industry in the south. Every man in the south is expected to encourage and assist this organization in its great work, especially every cattleman and business man.

Representatives of the St. Louis packers offered to assist the organization in a substantial manner.

D. S. Combs, Hickory Valley, Tenn., President Southern Cattlemen's Association, Prominent Factor in Cattle Tick Fight.

GROW MORE CATTLE.

Prominent Cattle Grower Urges Southern Farmers to Raise Cattle— Conserve Soil Fertility, by Growing Grass and Feeding Cattle.

By A. L. FRENCH, Prominent Cattle Grower, Cascade, Va.

As our country grows older other problems besides securing the present dollar thrust themselves upon the man who handles the soil, and to the thinking men of the south, soil conservation stands in a class by itself as our most pressing problem and practical means looking to this end demands from year to year an ever increasing proportion of our thought.

The crop that is indigenous to a country is not always the crop that continues to be held in the highest esteem by the leading thinking men of that section. For instance, in the finest blue grass section of Indiana I know a leading live stock raiser and feeder who is discarding blue grass very largely for timothy, herds grass and sapling clover as pasture crops, because of the greater amount of feed the new pasture crops are producing. So while the grass has not been much in evidence upon the farms over much of the south up to this time the change of sentiment that is everywhere present among our people regarding the care of the soil leads us to believe that the matter will be tried out in a large way during the next ten years.

Grow More Grass.

And where the trial is intelligently made grass will surely follow, for abundant rainfall, much sunshine, a fair quality of soil and lime makes grass growing. We have the rainfall and sunshine ever with us, the skeleton of a good soil is ours yet and a million or two tons of lime are within our borders awaiting our awakening.

PAYS TO SHOW APPRECIATION

Results of Experiments Made in Broad-Minded Way Have Been More Than Gratifying.

The pride that most men of whatever station take in their work can be utilized by making each worker feel that he is an efficiency engineer in his own sphere. If he is made to understand that the problem of efficiency is not a matter of abstruse calculation and lengthy red tape, but a simple process of obtaining the greatest results with the least effort, he is bound to be interested. If the expert poses, not as a dictator, but rather as a teacher—and proves his ability for the role—the men, nine times out of ten, will respond.

Another feature of this get-together type of proceeding that is important, is the giving of credit for good ideas to the originator. I recall a case in point, where the problem happened to be the designing of a simple system of cards to cover a complicated series of operations. A shipping clerk, whose interest had been aroused, offered a suggestion which resulted in cutting down the number of cards to be made out for one department two-thirds. It was customary to print in small letters on all the forms "Designed by the B. V. Co." On these particular cards the man in charge of the work substituted "Designed by A. N. K."—the initials of the shipping clerk. The latter, greatly pleased by this evidence of appreciation, at once set to work evolving other ideas, many of which were sound and well worth adopting. Naturally, the incident became noised about in the shop and served to convince the men of the broad-minded attitude of the expert.—Engineering Magazine.

TRAINING AS POWER EXPERT

Subject That In America Has Not Been Given the Attention That It Deserves.

Power is one of the greatest factors in modern-day work. The thousand and one branches of it offer admirable fields for conquests by vigor and brains. In the field of power a few concerns have assisted men to obtain vocational training. From the boiler room have risen men by successive stages to positions of grave responsibility. In an issue of Power neglect in this branch of vocational training in the United States is commented upon as follows:

"'Power is a factor in all the important affairs of modern life,' says a writer and thinker, and necessarily the engineer, who makes that power, is also a factor in that the whole purpose is not merely to 'make the wheels go 'round,' but to turn them at a profit. Furthermore, electricity, the steam turbine and the waterwheel have made the engineer's vocation even more difficult, demanding a degree of operating skill that is well-nigh impossible to acquire in some cases without special training.

"We are told that of all the great nations, ours is the most deficient in vocational development. Germany forty years ago saw its need and met it; England, Scotland, France, Austria Switzerland, Norway, Sweden and Denmark are all paying heed to it. If we would successfully compete in our own chosen field with the large immigration yearly coming to our shores we must find the means to equally educate our own people in their vocations."

Fortunes in Sausages.

Westphalia, in Prussia, is the home of the sausage. There, it is said, a trader will name no fewer than 400 different kinds of sausage. A sausage exhibition was held recently in Germany, at which 1,000 varieties of sausages were shown.

In this connection the story is told of a young Prussian who, though he had received an expensive training as a chemist, shut himself up in his laboratory, and instead of devising a new dye, safety match, motor engine, explosive, aeroplane or photographic lens, took pork, veal, olives, pepper, fennel, old wine, cheese, apples, cinnamon and herrings' roe and from them evolved a wonderful and totally original "wurst," the best of its kind. He has amassed a considerable fortune from its sale.

More Tractable as He Grows Older.

"I find myself mellerin' up as the years pass by," confessed Hod Durnitt. "Formerly I would go into a frenzy over 'most any unimportant thing, but when the 'Mona Lisa' was stolen I didn't care a jam, and now that it has been recovered I still don't care a jam. It used to be that when anything occurred that I didn't approve of I forthwith swept a place and had a furious fit; but nowadays it has to be something of consequence and some of my business before I rend my raiment and throw dust in the air. Without doubt old age is creeping on me apace, as the feller said."—Kansas City Star.

Versatile Da Vinci.

When Leonardo Da Vinci was not painting Mona Lisa or modeling great equestrian statues or inventing cannon, catapults, flutes, mechanical lions, patent pumps or scaling ladders he would amuse himself by little excursions into anatomy, astronomy physics, chemistry, philosophy, dietetics, the philosophy of dress or city planning.

If all these activities are not enough Da Vinci was also an author of treatises on painting and other subjects and even on many an ocasion extemporized verses.

CAN LEARN FROM THE PAST

Poultry Breeders of Today Might Profit by a Study of Methods Used by the Egyptians.

The announcement is made by a British scientist that he has discovered how the ancient Egyptians incubated chickens to the number of 120,000,000 a year. He has found incubators which he declares were used in Egypt 5,000 years ago.

The secret has been well guarded, but it is laid bare at last. They had no oil stoves or gas or electric heated incubators, but they had ovens which worked much better, even though they required more constant tending. Each oven was calculated to hold 7,000 eggs, and the fuel by which it was heated consisted of chopped straw and dung, but for the last ten days of the hatching the energy was supplied altogether by the chickens themselves.

It is the commonest error of those operating our modern incubators to use too much heat, especially toward the end of the period, and now we may learn from the old Egyptians how not to do things as well as how to do them. The use of the straw and other light fuel shows that the Egyptians were most careful to avoid too intense heat at any stage. We thought that we were the first to use incubators, but we are fifty centuries behind the times.

Your Brains

You hear with your brains, you feel with your brains, you see with your brains, you smell with your brains and you taste with your brains.

You have at times felt dimly conscious that some one was talking to you. You did not hear although your ears were in position, because your brain was occupied with something else.

You have at times looked directly at an object without seeing it, because some mental picture was between your brains and the object at which your eyes were directed.

Everything is done with the brain. The fingers and hands are but nerve centers, tools with which the brain works. The eyes are but lenses which contain the optic nerves that photograph the picture on the brain. The palate in your throat is the nerve center which conveys the sense of taste to the brain.

The more care you exercise in the cultivation of your brain the greater is your capacity for hearing, feeling, seeing, smelling, tasting.

You cannot take a step, or stretch out your hand, or open your mouth without the consent of your brain. If the nerves which lead from your hand to your brain become incapacitated, paralysis sets in and the hand hangs helpless at your side, without feeling or action.

It is therefore extremely desirable that you cultivate your brain by exercise, by which we mean thinking. Thinking is to the brain what physical exercise is to the body.

The L. & N. writes of these things because the success of the L. & N. depends on cultivated brains, by which we mean right thinking.

Right thinking means fair thinking, just thinking, followed by fair and just treatment, provided you carry out the dictates of your brain.

One of the best mental exercises we know is for the people to think about the relation of the L. & N. to the people of the state, and how inseparable is the success of the one from the other.

If by seeing and hearing you feel that the L. & N. is doing a good work for the development and upbuilding of the territory, we ask that you co-operate and lend a helping hand.

But, above all, we ask that you think carefully before you act; think of what the L. & N. has done, of what it is doing, of the service it renders, of the equipment it offers, of the constructive policy it pursues.

We are content to rest our present and future welfare with the thinking, fair minded people, because we have faith in the judgment of the just individual.

THE VOTERS' GUIDE

WHEN YOU GO TO MARK YOUR BALLOT APRIL 6TH It Is Proper You Should Know About the Candidates

ROMAINE BOYD, who is a candidate for the Supreme Court for one of the two full terms, is the head of the Legal Department of Greater Birmingham. His election as City Attorney of Birmingham, by the people in 1910, marked the beginning of the passing of the old Birmingham city organization, which had not met defeat before in nearly fifteen years.

CAPTAIN BOYD was born in Selma in 1873 and was educated in the public schools of Selma and Talladega. He is a graduate of the Law School of the University of Alabama.

His father was William G. Boyd of Selma, who was a member of the Fourth Alabama Infantry from First Manassas to the battle of Knoxville, and thereafter, until the close of the war, a member of Russell's Fourth Alabama Cavalry.

ROMAINE BOYD raised and commanded a company of Alabama volunteers in the war with Spain and, upon the muster-out of his regiment, located in Birmingham, where he formed a law partnership with the late James B. Head, ex-justice of the Supreme Court, under the firm name of Head & Boyd. He was attorney for the City of Ensley for a number of years and has been City Attorney of Greater Birmingham since 1910, and by reason of his exacting official duties he has been compelled to do most of his campaign work at night.

From 1893 to 1897 he was a citizen of Mobile.

NOTE—ROMAINE BOYD is a candidate on his fitness and qualifications, supported by his plea for a fairer geographical distribution of the Supreme Court judgeships.

UNDERWOOD FARMER'S FRIEND

Declares High Authority of the Farmer's Union of America.

AUTHOR OF THE CURRENCY BILL

Also Testifies as to Mr. Underwood's Aid in Passage of Measure Affecting Farm Credits.

"The report has been made from several counties that agents of Captain Hobson are continuing the misrepresentations of Captain Hobson and Mr G. T. McElderry with reference to Mr Underwood's attitude on questions affecting the farmer. Their original attack was made as to Mr. Underwood's not free-listing 'cotton bagging and ties.' This invention was persisted in despite the fact that Mr. Underwood put bagging and ties on the free list which was vetoed by Mr. Taft—despite the fact that he included them on the free list when the tariff bill was introduced at the special session called by President Wilson—and it died only when I secured vigorous assertion from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mr Hamlin, that cotton bagging and ties have been admitted free without question since the act went into effect Mr. McElderry notified me, in substance, that he intended to continue to damn Mr. Underwood for not making bagging free—or more free—but as that would involve the payment of a bounty, I pass him on to the Republicans.

Farm Credits.

"The same gentlemen continue their lament as to Mr. Underwood's attitude toward the farmer in the consideration, in caucus, of the currency bill.

"In his telegram to me of January 30th, Mr. Hobson admitted his endorsement of McElderry's notoriously inaccurate remarks. Referring to McElderry he said:

"He cited Mr. Underwood as opposing provision for national banks to accept improved farm property as basis for credit. I agree with him in this."

"The assertion of Mr. Hobson has been reverberated by him all over the state, and is being persisted in during his present tour through the remote districts.

"Of the same brand of statement is the Hobson-McElderry assertion that Mr. Underwood opposed legislation to prevent cotton gambling, notwithstanding the fact that both Hobson and McElderry knew that the amendment introduced by Mr. Underwood on that subject was received from and introduced at the instance of the President himself.

The Final Proof.

"Like the assertion as to cotton bagging and ties, it is necessary to nail these misrepresentations by securing a statement from a source of final authority.

"The responsible author of the currency bill is Representative Carter Glass of Virginia. I invited an expression from him as to Mr. Underwood's attitude. It will gratify Alabamians to read the generous appreciation with which he recognises Mr Underwood's efficiency, and the humiliating repudiation with which he crushes the misrepresentation now being circulated by Mr. Hobson and G. T McElderry. The letter from the Honorable Carter Glass, Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, is as follows:

House of Representatives,
Committee on Banking and Currency.
Washington, February 9, 1914.

Mr. Ferney Johnston,
Birmingham, Alabama.

My Dear Sir:—

Concerning the inquiry made about the attitude of Hon. Oscar W. Underwood toward the farm credit provisions of the new Federal Reserve Act, I desire to state that there is not one word of truth in the suggestion that Mr. Underwood antagonized any proposed amendments relating to agricultural credits. As a matter of fact Mr. Underwood, more than any single man in the House, was actively instrumental in settling the only real controversy on the subject. This had reference to the rediscount provision of the bill, and the difficulty arose over a proposition to clarify the meaning of this provision so as to make it plain that no discrimination against farming interests was intended. To my personal knowledge it was very largely due to Mr. Underwood's sensible advice that the whole dispute was cleared up to the satisfaction of the entire membership of the Democratic caucus, minus about a half dozen malcontents.

I may add that the Federal Reserve Act, as passed by Congress and approved by the President, which was strongly endorsed by Mr. Underwood affords immensely increased credit facilities to the farmers of the country if you will get the February issue of the Country Gentleman and read the analysis of the bill by Mr. Charles A. Conant, a currency expert of wide reputation, you will note how abundantly this new currency law takes care of farm credits. We did not complicate the currency bill with the other question of co-operative rural credits for the reason that the President advised against such a course, and the Banking and Currency Committees of both the House and the Senate were almost unanimously opposed to the delay that would necessarily have ensued had we pursued a different course. Should the expert investigation now being conducted on this latter question warrant action, there will very likely be supplemental legislation at this session of Congress.

Sincerely yours,

The Farmers' Union.

"On the general subject of Mr. Underwood's attitude to the farmer, I respectively refer to the following letter, written by the General Counsel of the Farmers' Educatonal and Co-Operative Union, of which Mr. Barrett, of Georgia, is President. Mr. Patten is their representative in Washington, is thoroughly familiar with the real views and efficiency of the Congressmen, and this letter was written in response to a letter directed to him by a citizen of Clarke county, and not at the instance of anyone representing Mr. Underwood. The letter follows:

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America.
J. H. Patten,
General Counsel,
204 Second St., S. E.,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 5, 1914.

Mr. David M. Spinks,
P. O. Box 181,
Thomasville, Alabama.

Dear Sir:—

I have your good letter of the 5th instant inquiring about Congressman Underwood's attitude toward cotton bagging and ties, and other legislation in which the farmers have a direct interest.

To Underwood, more than any other man in the House, belongs the credit for placing bagging and ties on the free list. He put them on the free list in his famous Farmers' Free List Bill that he put through Congress two years ago, only to be vetoed by Taft, and put them there in the Tariff Bill which he introduced at the beginning of this Congress, and which, although modified by congressional committees, the House and Senate, became law with bagging and ties made free.

He has been equally active and effective furthering every one of the legislative demands of the Farmers' Union and other farmers' organizations. For instance, twice he has made speeches for and helped pass by his presence and votes the Scott Bill aimed at gambling in cotton; three times he has worked for, argued for, and voted for the immigration legislation the farmers have urged; he was very active in securing postal savings banks; he has stood strong for more liberal appropriations for agricultural purposes; he and Shackleford of Missouri are given credit largely for having created the present Road Committee of the House which has brought in a splendid road bill that will soon pass; etc.

His attitude is well illustrated by the splendid part he has just taken in working, voting, and arguing for the passage of the splendid 58-page immigration bill that passed the House yesterday. It took five legislative days to get the bill to a final vote, and the fight was one of the fiercest known, the big interests and influences in opposition being desperate. As you know the cotton gamblers, the mill men, and certain other selfish interests have been endeavoring to flood the south with any and all kinds of foreigners in order to increase the cotton acreage and keep down the price of the staple. A car load of them came on from New Orleans, and many were here from other points, including the agents and attorneys of the foreign steamship companies and other corporations, button-holeing congressmen to vote against this needed legislation demanded by people and the farmers in particular. When the fight in the House was at a white heat Underwood took the floor and ably argued for the legislation, and settled its fate, if there was ever any doubt about it Every congressman from Alabama, except Richardson, who is fatally ill, and could not be present to work and vote for this bill as he did previously, Blackmon, who has been confined to his rooms with serious blood poisoning, and Hobson who was present in the House the last two days of the fight, but who would not say a word or take part in any of the voting, followed Underwood and Burnett in their patriotic and successful effort to put this needed legislation through the House.

The attitudes of Underwood and Hobson upon this occasion is quite typical of the attitude of each toward legislation demanded by and in the interest of the farmers. Underwood is always on the job, doing what he can to get our bills out of the committee and through Congress, while Hobson never seems to take any interest in or active part in furthering our legislative demands. He is seldom present when our measures come up and if he is he is apt to do as he did yesterday and the day before, fail to say a word in their behalf, fail to vote on the division and teller's votes which can be done even though paired, and then be recorded as "Not Voting" on the final votes, having a "general" pair with Fairchild of New York. He might have at least been paired sincerely for the bill. But more important he might have voted for the bill, because a pair does not apply where both parties would vote the same way, and the question is non-partisan.

Some time ago President C. S. Barrett of the Farmers' Union said something in one of his speeches to the brethren that seems to me to be very appropriate in this connection:

"If you want your congressman to be what he really wants to be—your friend, your defender, your advocate—you should prove your loyalty to him for his devotion to your cause, if he proves himself worthy, and stand by him in every conflict. This will give him courage. It will make him determined. And it will encourage young men, who really want to do something for their fellowmen, to enter politics and be among those who were described by the poet as

"'Large brained, clear eyed, of such as he Shall freedom's young apostles be.'"

Trusting that this will give you my opinion of Congressman Underwood's legislative record on matters of particular interest to the organized farmers, and assuring you of my readiness to answer further in detail any questions pertaining either to his or the record of Congressman Hobson, or any other member of the House or Senate, I am, with fraternal greetings,

Sincerely yours,
J. H. PATTEN.

P. S. I am personally much interested in the passage of the Webb-Kenyon bill. Living in South Carolina a part of the year I know the need of such legislation, and other similar laws to keep liquor away from the negro in particular. On that occasion Underwood was a tower of strength, as was Hobson, also, but if it had not been for Underwood's assistance and his great influence the fate of that bill over the veto might have been different in the House, in my opinion.

Satchel-Toters Desperate.

The closing days of the campaign promise to become lurid with Hobson's frenzy. His secretary, Monette, who showed his democracy some time ago by writing a letter stating how he had rejoiced at Taft's election over his great Democratic opponent, W. J. Bryan, announces that he intended to return to Alabama and make charges. He is now in the state for that purpose and Hobson's paper, the Advance, has begun to give circulation to a list of imaginary instances of Mr. Underwood's derelictions. The time will soon arrive when many persons who are giving utterance to these desperate charges will blush to be reminded of them, and the common sense Democrats of the state should resent this effort on part of Hobson's satchel toters to discredit an Alabamian of the fine character and overwhelming national efficiency of Mr. Underwood.

"FORNEY JOHNSTON,
"Chairman Underwood State Campaign Committee."

The telegram from the Treasury Department referred to in the foregoing is as follows:

"Washington, D. C., Jan. 29.

GET SUGAR FROM SAWDUST

Chemically Prepared Material Found by Scientists to Be Valuable Food for Animals.

In the course of a paper read before the London Royal Society of Arts, A. Zimmerman described a process by which sugar might be manufactured from sawdust.

In its natural state, he pointed out, says London Tit-Bits, wood contains no sugar, but when subjected in closed retorts to digestion with a weak sulphurous acid solution under pressure of six to seven atmospheres a very remarkable transmutation takes place, as much as 25 per cent. of the material being converted into sugar. In this Mr. Zimmerman claims that we have a valuable feeding stuff for horses, cattle and sheep.

Draft horses in whose daily ration four pounds of "cacchulose-molasses" were substituted for four pounds of oats were kept under observation for seven months and were all found to have increased in weight, while a colt which was in so weak a condition that veterinary surgeons advised its destruction put on 260 pounds in six months and is now in excellent condition.

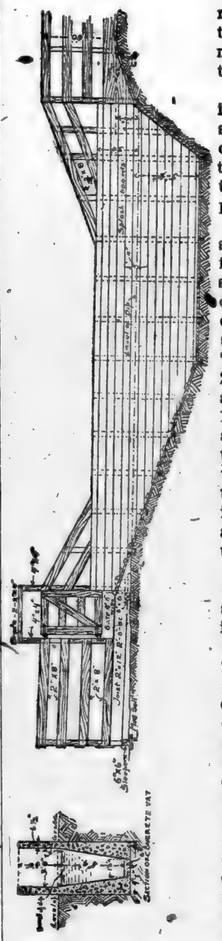
Then He Didn't Want Them.

Dejectedly twirling his thumbs the clerk sat in the box office of the Frivolity theater. A depressing air of failure hung over the theater, and it looked as though the piece would have to be withdrawn very shortly.

Suddenly he perked up as a countrified man and his wife came in, followed by their three daughters and two sons.

"Have you got seven seats in the middle of the second row for tonight?" asked paterfamilias.

The box office man made a pretense of examining the plan of seats.



"Yes, I find they are vacant, sir," said he, trying to regress his excitement. "Shall I book them for you, sir?"

"No—no, I think not," said the man from the country. "If you've got those seats on your hands it seems to me the play can't be up to much. Good morning!"

The arsenical solution in a concrete dipping vat has proved to be the most effective remedy for the extermination of cattle ticks.

The following are the specifications for the construction of a dipping vat:

The walls and floor should be 6 inches thick. The wooden frames should be constructed of 2x4-inch braces, on the outside of which 1-inch boards are tacked. After the concrete has set, take out frame and plaster inside of vat with a mixture of 1 part cement and 2 parts sand. The walls of the vat should be built one foot above the surface of the ground. The slide where the cattle go into the vat should be three feet long with a fall of two feet. The concrete should be made as follows: Cement, 1 part; sand, 2½ parts; gravel or broken rock, 5 parts, all thoroughly mixed.

The dipping vat should be covered with a shed and provided with convenient pens, chute and dipping pen.

The Arsenical Solution.

The following formula is most commonly used:

The latter consists in permitting the cattle and other animals to continue on the infested pasture and dipping them at regular intervals in the arsenical solution and thus preventing engorged females from dropping and reinfesting the pasture.

AUTHOR OF THE CURRENCY BILL

Also Testifies as to Mr. Underwood's Aid in Passage of Measure Affecting Farm Credits.

"The report has been made from several counties that agents of Captain Hobson are continuing the misrepresentations of Captain Hobson and Mr G. T. McElderry with reference to Mr. Underwood's attitude on questions affecting the farmer. Their original attack was made as to Mr. Underwood's not free-listing 'cotton bagging and ties.' This invention was persisted in despite the fact that Mr. Underwood put bagging and ties on the free list which was vetoed by Mr. Taft—despite the fact that he included them on the free list when the tariff bill was introduced at the special session called by President Wilson—and it died only when I secured vigorous assertion from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Hamlin, that cotton bagging and ties have been admitted free without question since the act went into effect Mr. McElderry notified me, in substance, that he intended to continue to damn Mr. Underwood for not making bagging free—or more free—but as that would involve the payment of a bounty, I pass him on to the Republicans.

Farm Credits.

"The same gentlemen continue their lament as to Mr. Underwood's attitude toward the farmer in the consideration, in caucus, of the currency bill.

"In his telegram to me of January 30th, Mr. Hobson admitted his endorsement of McElderry's notoriously inaccurate remarks. Referring to McElderry he said:

"He cited Mr. Underwood as opposing provision for national banks to accept improved farm property as basis for credit. I agree with him in this."

"The assertion of Mr. Hobson has been reverberated by him all over the state, and is being persisted in during his present tour through the remote districts.

"Of the same brand of statement is the Hobson-McElderry assertion that Mr. Underwood opposed legislation to prevent cotton gambling, notwithstanding the fact that both Hobson and McElderry knew that the amendment introduced by Mr. Underwood on that subject was received from and introduced at the instance of the President himself.

The Final Proof.

"Like the assertion as to cotton bagging and ties, it is necessary to nail these misrepresentations by securing a statement from a source of final authority.

"The responsible author of the currency bill is Representative Carter Glass of Virginia. I invited an expression from him as to Mr. Underwood's attitude. It will gratify Alabamians to read the generous appreciation with which he recognizes Mr Underwood's efficiency, and the humiliating repudiation with which he crushes the misrepresentation now being circulated by Mr. Hobson and G. Much time and thought have been devoted to the preparation of this material. The charts and slides are the results of thousands of experiments conducted at the experiment stations under many conditions with soils, farm crops, dairying, stock feeding, poultry, weeds and insects. This new work undertaken by the Extension Department is distinctly educational, there being no advertising feature connected with it in any way. The charts will be free, except for a small charge to cover cost of shipment or possible damage caused by breakage. Address Extension Dept., Harvester Bldg., Chicago.

LACY CONVICTED OF EMBEZZLING

SENTENCE FIXED BY STATUTES OF ONE TO TEN YEARS IMPRISONMENT.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings in and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Theodore Lacy, former chief clerk of the state convict department, was found guilty by a Montgomery county jury of embezzling $50,000 of state funds.

His sentence, fixed by statutes from one to ten years, will be announced by Judge Armstead Brown.

Lacy was declared guilty of embezzling the state's money after a trial of five days' duration, during which time his able lawyers had resorted to every technicality in the Alabama status to clear the defendant.

Lacy's case was submitted to the jury following a lengthy charge by the presiding judge. For five days the jury had heard evidence which tended to show the defendant's guilt, and for five days they had sat patiently in their seats in the jury box. They returned their verdict of guilty in 47 minutes after retiring from the court room.

The defense raised every point of law or technicality which might serve to aid the defendant, but the state's case was too strong. Lacy was believed to be guilty long before the case was submitted to the jury.

The jury's verdict was not a surprise. It was evident from the moment the trial began that the defense had an uphill fight. The state had evidence that Lacy had secured the money. The defense relied on the fact that the state had not proved that Lacy had not released his ownership of this property. The defense maintained that Lacy was responsible to J. G. Oakley, former president of the convict bureau, rather than to the state, and the lawyers representing that side based their entire hopes of acquittal on that ground.

On the other hand, the state had introduced a strong chain of evidence. It was proved that Lacy had received $72,000 of state funds in his possession and that this money had never reached the state treasury.

The principal theory of the defense, therefore, was that the state would be unable to establish the ownership of the property alleged to have been embezzled.

Must Report Connections.

Railroads of Alabama have been ordered to show cause why a general order should not be promulgated requiring conductors to report passengers for connections at junction points and requiring all lines to hold local trains at least 30 minutes for connections to be made by passengers.

The March meeting of the commission was the heaviest in months. The Selma coal rate case was up again. Petitions from the Business Men's League of Dothan, the Business Men's League of Montgomery, and the Alexander City Cotton mill, asking for reduced coal rates, were also billed for hearing.

The complaint of the city of Tuscumbia against the Southern railway, alleging unjust and unreasonable passenger department facilities, was called. Other cases scheduled were: Gadsden Chamber of Commerce vs. the Louisville and Nashville railroad, two cases, one asking a reduction of coal rates from Altoona; the other demanding lower coke rates from Yolande to Gadsden. J. P. Carnes et al. vs. the Southern railway, petition for a combination freight and passenger depot at the present site of the freight depot at Fruithurt. Petition of Southern Express company to close agency at Sanis. Hays Cooperage company vs. the Alabama Great Southern and others, complaint regarding unreasonable rate on wood. The town of Heflin vs. the Southern railway, petition for further passenger train service.

Evergreen Militia to Be Dropped.

For inefficiency shown at the recent inspection which was made by Adjutant General Scully and Capt. William P. Screws, U. S. Army, the adjutant general issued an order calling for the mustering out of Company K, First infantry, of Evergreen. The military company at Evergreen failed to measure up to the requirements, both as to efficiency and to numerical strength, and it will be dropped from the Alabama National Guard immediately.

Street Tax Thrown Out.

There will be no street tax levied upon the citizens of Montgomery in 1914, according to a decision of the city commission. The street tax proposition has been under consideration for several weeks. Commissioner Walter Brassell introduced a resolution annulling street tax this year and the resolution was adopted. Street taxes have been collected here for a number of years and each year there has been a strenuous protest by certain citizens against paying them.

Who Will Run for Short Term?

Just who will offer themselves as candidates to fill the short unexpired term of United States Senator Johnston, who died last year, in the coming primary, the date of which was set at a meeting of the state democratic executive committee, is worrying the political prophets and followers of Alabama. No candidate has yet come forward with the exception of Capt. Frank S. White, who stated recently that he would announce his candidacy for the short term as soon as the date of the primary would be set.

Many "Possibilities" have been advanced by Alabama politicians for the short term. Much interest has been aroused in the matter, snice the winner of the race between Hobson and Underwood will not begin his term until 1915, which will leave nearly a year's political pie to be disposed of by some Alabamian.

Another Sensation.

News has been received by the governor of the embezzlement of approximately $10,000 of state and county funds by J. M. Tingle, tax collector of Winston county. Tingle is said to have disappeared, taking with him more than $5000 in cash, which he had received from tax collections. The remaining shortage was reported by Examiner of Public Accounts J. T. Gorman, who examined his books several days ago.

The governor several weeks ago sent Mr. Gorman to examine Tingle's books and the examiner reported a shortage of about $4000, which Tingle's sureties promised to make good. In the meantime, before making an additional bond, Tingle, it is alleged, proceeded to collect a large sum in taxes, aggregating more than $5000 and at the opportune time he disappeared. Tingle is a republican. The governor will probably employ a special detective on the case.

Will Head Agricultural Experts.

An address by Dr. C. G. Hopkins of the University of Illinois on "Soil Fertility, the Basis of Live Stock Farming," with stereopticon illustrations, was the feature of the session of the Association of Southern Agricultural Workers, in fifteenth annual convention in Montgomery.

Dr. Hopkins spoke along scientific lines, and his address was interesting and instructive throughout. He touched upon the enrichment of the soil and gave comparative illustrations of the growth of corn and alfalfa and hay on lands that had been fertilized by the commercial product and some that had undergone the treatment by old-time farming methods.

Before the close of the session the following officers were elected to serve the association for the coming yea:.

President, E. R. Kone, state agricultural commissioner of Texas; first vice president, B. W. Kilgore of Raleigh, N. C.; second vice president, J. T Duggar, of Alabama; secretary, Dan T. Gray of Raleigh, N. C.

State Committee Meets.

Members of the state democratic executive committee met in Birmingham March 3 for the purpose of taking steps to provide a nominee for the short term of senatorial vacancy, and to settle the question of the qualification of voters participating in the primary on April 6.

Regarding the first business to come before the committee, Chairman Goodwyn states that it can adopt one of two methods, the first allowing the nominee for the long term to hold office for the short term, and the second to provide for the selection of a candidate by the democratic voters in the April primary.

Mr. Goodwyn states that a number of county committees have decided to let down the bars with reference to the qualification of voters, allowing both republicans and democrats to vote, and he believes the state committee should take a firm stand against such a proposition.

Chairman Goodwyn further calls attention to the fact that the senatorial vacancy can be filled in two ways, the first by legislative authority to the governor to fill the vacancy by appointment and the second by a special election.

Appointments by the Governor.

Governor O'Neal has appointed S. E. Elliott of Harpersville, a member of the jury commission of Shelby county. He also has issued a commission to M. H. Day of Tyler as a member of the board of registrars of Dallas county.

Enforce License Tax.

The State tax commission is taking action looking to the enforcement of section 33D of the revenue bill passed by the recent legislature, exacting an excise tax or license of 3 per cent of their gross incomes from freight lines or equipment companies. This is the first time that the commission has sought to enforce the provision and it is thought that thousands of dollars of revenue to the State will be accrued from this source. About 500 notices are being sent out to the companies affected.

ALABAMA BREVITIES

The sixteenth semi-annual convention of the Eleventh district, Knights of Pythias, was held at Altoona March 3.

After working her convicts on the roads about a month Barbour has now leased them to a coal company.

T. E. Tibbs of Eutaw makes his announcement for representative of Greene county in the next legislature.

COAL LAND LEASES ARE NOT TAXABLE

STATE TAX COMMISSION IS AGAIN OVERRULED BY DECISION IN BIBB COURT.

DECISION ONE OF INTEREST

All Mines Operated on Leased Property in the State Affected By Decision.

Birmingham.—Announcement was made here that a jury in the circuit court of Bibb county held that a lessee of coal lands was not taxable and in the decision reversed the state tax commission, which body had started out to tax the mine leases in this state. The decision by a jury was in the case of the Red Feather Coal company and the Roden company, which concerns were raised $1,500,000 each for the reason that the state tax commission claimed that the leases held by the two companies were taxable.

It was learned in Birmingham that the jury held that the leases on coal lands did not constitute property; that the leases were not taxable. It will be recalled that a few weeks ago a jury in the circuit court of Bibb county held the same as in this case wherein other defendants were involved. However, the chairman of the state tax commission gave out a statement in which he said that the fight was only begun.

The decision in the Bibb county case is of great interest here inasmuch as it is presumed the state tax commission was under the impression that if they raised the taxes on leases in Bibb county they could go over this state and increase the taxes of every coal mine property in the state provided the company in question operated mines on leased property.

FIRST PRIMARY ELECTION.

Clarke County Judge, Solicitor and Representative Chosen.

Thomasville.—The first primary election for Clarke county was held for the offices of county judge, county solicitor, sheriff and representatives. There were three candidates for county judge, J. W. Davis, the incumbent; W. D. Dunn, and A. S. Johnson, former representative from this county. Johnson was elected by an overwhelming majority and there will be no need of a second primary.

For sheriff there were seven candidates and S. C. Garrett and Alfred Bounds will be in the runoff. Garrett is leading with about 100 votes.

For representatives, John S. Graham, J. D. Doyle and Isaac Pugh were the contestants. Doyle and Pugh were elected. These gentlemen have both been former representatives from this county. Despite weather conditions, which were very unfavorable, a large vote was polled, there being over 1500. T. J. Bedsole was elected county solicitor without opposition.

MAKE OWN PLATFORM.

Farmers' Union of Etowah County Wants Beneficial Legislation.

Gadsden—The Etowah County Farmers' Union has made up a platform on which candidates for the legislature are expected to be able to stand if they want the vote of the members. The platform provides for legislation that is expected to be beneficial to the farmers in general. The principal provisions are:

Compulsory education and local taxation for the schools; the appropriation of the tax fund to the rural schools; provision for teaching all grades in the public schools; the application of more money by the state legislature in order to lengthen the term and provide better pay for teachers; the abolition of the fee system and the paying of officials a stated salary; the removal of convicts from the mines and placing them on the roads; an eight hour day for working the public roads; a provision that railroads deliver car load shipments to farmers at the same rate as shipments of a similar character are made to corporations; provision for the registration of land titles.

JUDGE PRICE WILLIAMS DEAD.

Was Judge of Probate Court and Confederate Veteran.

Mobile.—Judge Price Williams, Jr., one of the best known men in this city and state, died at his home here. Judge Williams had been ill for some time following an operation on the neck for a cancer.

It was predicted here that Gov. O'Neal will appoint Price Williams, Jr., No. 2, at the present time clerk of the probate court, to succeed his father.

DEASON ENTERS RACE.

Will Be Candidate Against Congressman Blackmon.

Selma.—The announcement that Judge B. E. Deason of Chilton county had entered the Fourth district congressional race against Fred L. Blackmon of Anniston was received here with interest. While it had been reported that Judge Deason would enter the race, the announcement proved something of a surprise.

FRUIT GROWING IN BUTLER.

County Preparing to Take High Place in State In This Line.

Greenville.—Butler county is preparing to take a high place in Alabama in the fruit tree line. For the past several years pecans have been planted here in large quantities and recently more than 10 acres of pecans and five more acres have been put in fig trees. The latter will be used in an extensive packing and preserving business that is assuming large proportions here.

Fruit tree agents and experts have been in Greenville for several months and are selling numbers of these trees to farmers in all the county contiguous to Greenville.

$20,000 FIRE AT HARTSELLE.

Editor Wiggins Leads List With $8,000 Burned By Flames.

Hartselle.—Nine persons and firms sustained losses in the fire which visited the downtown district of this place. M. D. Wiggins, editor and publisher of the Hartselle Enquirer, a weekly paper, was the heaviest loser, his loss reaching $8,000. Others dam-

Randolph county has had a serious epidemic of measles.

Wild turkeys are reported plentiful in Winston county.

Jasper Knight has built a water system for his place at Haynesville.

Foundations of the express and depot buildings at Cullman are finished.

Fair grounds, buildings and race track are being put in order for the Albertville fair.

There has been an epidemic of jail breaking in the state.

Etowah county reports twice as many births as deaths.

Twenty-five Etowah girls have joined the canning clubs.

State aid road between Berry and Fayette is being completed.

Dekalb county collected $3345 in poll taxes. Only one man paid for the full time of the constitution.

The Mothers' Club and 200 others have petitioned the city council to close the picture shows of Cullman on Sunday afternoons.

Three hundred and forty alarms were answered by the Birmingham fire department in January, with a loss of $76,216.09 to buildings and contents. Of this loss, $58,332.25 was covered by insurance.

The grand jury for the spring term of the circuit court of Bibb county made its final report. The report, while somewhat lengthy, was not sensational. The grand jury returned 101 indictments, many of which were for violation of the prohibition law of the county. Only two indictments for murder were returned.

WILL ENLARGE FACILITIES

$15,000,000 to Be Spent by Southern Railway on Improvements and New Equipments.

Washington, D. C.—Fairfax Harrison, president of the Southern Railway Company, said:

"Southern Railway Company, believing in the continued prosperity and growth of the territory it serves, and, recognizing the necessity of enlarging its facilities to keep pace with that growth, has, pending the improvement of the market for long term securities, sold ten million dollars of five per cent. three-year notes secured by the pledge of development and general mortgage four per cent. bonds of the company, which for some time past have been held in the treasury of the company available for sale.

"This new capital is to be applied by Southern Railway Company in carrying through to completion plans for improvements and betterments to and upon the property of Southern Railway Company, which were included in the general plan for the future of the railroad made at the time the development and general mortgage was created in 1906. The particular improvements now to be undertaken are chiefly additional and enlarged shops, yards and other freight terminals which have been greatly desired, and have been earnestly recommended for several years past to facilitate economical operation and to enlarge the opportunity of the company for securing competitive freight traffic as well as for taking care of local business. These improvements will be undertaken at once and pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

"In addition to the improvements provided for, as above stated, Southern Railway Company has also arranged to finance, through a ten-year equipment trust, the acquisition of additional modern rolling stock, largely of steel construction, representing an aggregate cost of more than five million dollars. Bids for this additional rolling stock are now being received from manufacturers and the orders for immediate construction will be placed promptly."

MUST PAY DEATH PENALTY.

Mrs. Buffum Found Guilty of Murder in First Degree.

Little Valley, N. Y.—Mrs. Cynthia Buffum was found guilty of poisoning her husband, Willis Buffum, who died on his farm near here on August 24. The jury, after five hours' deliberation, returned a verdict of verdict of guilty of first degree murder with a recommendation for mercy. It is said a majority of the jurors voted for conviction from the first ballot. Four were for conviction for murder in lesser degree. The jury returned for instructions once.

"We wish to know," asked a juror, "whether we can find a verdict for anything other than murder, first degree?"

Judge Brown referred them to his charge outlining what the law required. That did not satisfy them.

"There is one point on which we have grave doubt," the juror continued. "We have doubts about the methods used to get the confession."

"May I ask the court to charge," said Attorney Patrick S. Collins, counsel for Mrs. Buffum, "that if the statement obtained at Niagara Falls were vitiated by illegal means, the presumption of law is that the subsequent confession would have the same taint unless the contrary clearly appeared."

The court so charged.

Justice Brown immediately pronounced the death sentence upon Mrs. Buffum, fixing the week of April 5 for her execution in the electric chair at Auburn.

Signs Will With Cross.

New York.—In a will, signed with a cross, because he never had learned to read or write, Matthew J. McIntyre, who made nearly a million dollars raising hogs, left the bulk of his estate to St. Patrick's church in Long Island City, to be used for the support of the parochial school, so that the children of his parish might have the education he was denied. Nine nephews and nieces contested the will on the ground that McIntyre was incompetent when he affixed his mark to it, a year ago. The surrogate of Queens county overruled their contest and admitted the will to probate.

Snowfall Cost New York $1,000,000.

New York.—The recent heavy snowfall already has cost New York City nearly $1,000,000 and were it not for the probability that rain and warmer weather will help out, the city's bill would reach approximately $2,500,000, figuring on the contract price of removal. John T. Fetherstone, street cleaning commissioner, told the board of estimate that the department was praying for rain. "Keep on praying," replied the mayor.

To Refund Patron's Money.

Memphis.—Payment in full to depositors whose individual accounts are less than $1,000 and the refunding of 75 per cent of their deposits to those whose claims are in excess of that amount, is proposed in a plan formulated by directors of suspended Mercantile Bank of this city, who have offered to contribute $300,000 to a fund to be added to the assets held by the bank. The plan has been approved by the state superintendent of banks, J. L. Hatton.

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sassoon were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

He trudged away into the shadows, but presently as the new master of Damory Court stood in the gloomy hall, he heard the shambling step again behind him. "Ah done neglected ter ax yo' name, suh. Ah did, fo' er fac'."

"My name is Valiant. John Valiant."

Uncle Jefferson's eyes turned upward and rolled out of orbit. "Mah Lawd!" he ejaculated soundlessly. And with his wide lips still framed about the last word, he backed out of the doorway and disappeared.

Alone in the ebbing twilight, John Valiant found his hamper, spread a napkin on the broad stone steps and took out a glass, a spoon and part of a loaf of bread. The thermos flask was filled with milk. It was not a splendid banquet, yet he ate it with great content as the bulldog at his feet gnawed his share of the crust. He broke his bread into the milk as he had not done since he was a child, and ate the luscious pulp with a keen relish bred of the long outdoor day.

It was almost dark when the meal was done and, depleted hamper in hand, he reentered the empty echoing house. He went into the library, lighted the great brass lamp from the motor and began to rummage. The drawers of the dining-room sideboard yielded nothing; on a shelf of the butler's pantry, however, was a tin box which proved to be half full of wax candles, perfectly preserved.

"The very thing!" he said triumphantly. Carrying them back, he fixed several in the glass candlesticks and set them, lighted, all about the somber room till the soft glow flooded its every corner. "There," he said, "that is as it should be. No big blatant search-light here! And no glare of modern electricity would suit that old wainscoting, either."

He dragged the leather settee to the porch and by the light of the motor-lamp dusted it thoroughly, and wheeling it back, set it under the portrait which had so attracted him. He washed the glass from which he had dined and filled it at the cup of the garden fountain, put into it the rose from his hat and set it on the reading-stand. The small china dog caught his eye and he picked it up casually. The head came off in his hands. It had been a bon-bon box and was empty save for a narrow strip of yellowed paper, on which were written some meaningless figures: 17-28-94-0. He pondered this a moment, then thrust it into one of the empty pigeonholes of the desk. On the latter stood an old-fashioned leaf-calendar; the date it exposed was May 14th. Curiously enough the same date would recur tomorrow. The page bore a quotation: "Every man carries his fate on a riband about his neck." The line had been quoted in his father's letter. May 14th—how much that date and that motto may have meant for him!

He rose to push the shutter wider and in the movement his elbow sent a shallow case of morocco leather that had lain on the desk crashing to the floor. It opened and a heavy metallic object rolled almost to his feet. He saw at a glance that it was an old-fashioned rusted dueling-pistol.

The box had originally held two pistols. He shuddered as he stooped to pick up the weapon, and with the crawling repugnance mingled a pang-ing anger and humiliation. From his very babyhood it had always been so—that unconquerable aversion to the touch of firearms. There had been moments in his youth when this unreasoning shrinking had filled him with a blind fury, had driven him to strange self-tests of courage. He had never been able to overcome it. Analysation had told him that his peculiar abhorrence was no mere outgrowth of this. It lay far deeper. He had rarely, of recent years, met the test. Now, as he stood in these unaccustomed surroundings, with the cold touch of the metal the old shuddering held him, and the sweat broke in beads on his forehead. Setting his teeth hard, he crossed the room, slipped the box with its pistol between the volumes of the bookcase, and returned to his seat.

The bulldog, aroused from a nap, thrust a warm muzzle between his knees. "It's uncanny, Chum!" he said, as his hand caressed the velvety head. "Why should the touch of that fool thing chill my spine and make my flesh tiptoe over my bones? Why should I hate a pistol? Do you suppose I was shot in one of my previous existences?"

For a long while he sat there, his pipe dead, his eyes on the moonlighted out-of-doors. The eery feeling that had gripped him had gone as quickly as it had come. At last he rose, stretching himself with a great boyish yawn, put out all save one of the candles and taking a bath-robe, sandals and a huge fuzzy towel from the steamer-trunk, stripped leisurely. He donned the bath-robe and sandals and went out through the window to the garden and down to where lay the little lake ruffling silverly under the moon. On its brink he stopped, and tossing back his head, tried to imitate one of the bird-calls but was unsuccessful. With a rueful laugh he threw off the bath-robe and stood an instant glistening, poised in the moonlight like a marble faun, before he dove, straight down out of sight.

Five minutes later he pulled himself up over the edge, his flesh tingling with the chill of the water, and threw the robe about his cool white shoulders. Then he thrust his feet into his sandals and sped quickly back. He rubbed himself to a glow, and blowing out the remaining candle, stretched himself luxuriously between the warm blankets on the couch. The dog sniffed inquiringly at his hand, then leaped up and snuggled down close to his feet.

John Valiant's thoughts had fled a thousand miles away, to the tall girl who all his life had seemed to stand out from his world, aloof and unsurpassed—Katharine Fargo. He tried to picture her, a perfect chatelaine, graceful and gracious as a tall, white, splendid lily, in this dead house that seemed still to throb with living passions. But the picture subtly eluded him and he stirred uneasily under the blanket.

After a time his hands stretched out to the reading-stand and drew the glass with its vivid blossom nearer, till, in his nostrils, its musky odor mingled with the dew-wet scent of the honeysuckle from the garden. At last his eyes closed. "Every man carries his fate * * * on a riband about his neck," he muttered drowsily, and then, "Roses * * * red roses * * * "

And so he fell asleep.

CHAPTER X.

The Hunt.

He awoke to a musical twittering and chirping, to find the sun pouring into the dusty room in a very glory. He rolled from the blanket and stood upright, filling his lungs with a long deep breath of satisfaction. He felt singularly light-hearted and alive. The bulldog came bounding through the window, dirty from the weeds, and flung himself upon his master in a canine rapture.

"Get out!" quoth the latter, laughing. "Stop licking my feet! How the dickens do you suppose I'm to get into my clothes with your ridiculous antics going on? Down, I say! Hark!" He broke off and listened. "Who's that singing?"

The sound drew nearer—a lugubrious chant, with the weirdest minor reflections, faintly suggestive of the rag-time ditties of the music-halls, yet with a plaintive cadence.

"Good morning, Uncle Jefferson."

The singer broke off, set down the twig-broom that he had been wielding and came toward him. "Mawnin', suh. Mawnin'," he said. "Hopes yo'-all slep' good. Ah reck'n dem ar birds woke yo' up; dey's makin' seh er 'miration."

"Thank you. Never slept better in my life. Am I laboring under a delusion when I imagine I smell coffee?"

Just then there came a voice from the open door of the kitchen: "Calls yo'se'f er man, yo' trifflin' reconstructed niggah! W'en marstah gwineter git he brekfus' wid' yo' ramshackle-lin' 'eroun' wid dat dwag 'all dis-lin' 'eroun' wid dat dwag 'all dis-lin' 'eroun' wid dat dwag 'all dis

MR. KILLGORE AND THE SHERIFF'S OFFICE

Editor Press:

Permit me in this issue of the Press a few lines of space. I want to ask my friends not to announce my name as a candidate for Sheriff. while a man should serve his friends, and I am made up of that kind of material, but listen, I am very much interested in the election of Charles Henderson, which is as certain as the sun shines in the east, and I know that it isn't popular for a candidate to take an active part in any certain candidate. So friends you will please excuse me from making the race this time, for I had rather fail to get an office than to hurt Mr. Henderson's candidacy. We need a man in the executive chair that is possessed of business qualifications other than that of political ambition, and, for that reason alone.

Please excuse me this time.
Yours for good government,
MOSES A. KILLGORE.

LESS DYSPEPSIA NOW, HERE'S THE REASON

The fact that there is less dyspepsia and indigestion in this community than there use to be is largely, we believe, due to the extensive use of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, hundreds of packages of which we have sold. No wonder we have faith in them. No wonder we are willing to offer them to you for trial entirely at our risk.

Among other things, they contain Pepsin and Bismuth, two of the greatest digestive aids known to medical science. They soothe the inflamed stomach, allay pain, check heartburn and distress, help to diegst the food, and tend to quickly restore the stomach to its natural, comfortable, healthy state.

There is no red tape about our guarantee. It means just what it says. We'll ask you no questions. Your word is enough for us. If Rexall Dyspepsia Tabiets don't restore your stomach to health and make your digestion easy and comfortable, we want you to come back for your money. They are sold only at the 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. Three sizes, 25c, 50c, and $1.00.—Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

YOU CAN'T EARN MONEY WHEN YOUR'E LAID UP

There are a lot of people in this town who cannot afford to be sick. Perhaps none of you feel that you can, but certainly some of you can't, for as soon as you are sick, your wages stop and worry and debts pile up. The sensible thing for you to do, as soon as you feel run-down and worn out, no matter what the cause, is to take something just as quick as you can to build up strength and health. Make yourself more comfortable and provide against serious sickness.

We don't believe there is any other medicine made that will do as much towards saving your health and thus helping you save your money as Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. It is a medicine that gets right at the trouble and relieves it by toning up the nerves, enriching the blood, and giving new strength and health to the whole body. It doesn't do this by means of alcohol or habit-forming drugs, because it contains none. Its strength and health-giving power is due to pure Olive Oil and the Hypophosphites, long endorsed by successful physicians, the one for its food value, the other for its tonic value. Here, for the first time, they are combined, and the result is a real nerve, blood and body-building medicine—a real strengthener that we are proud to tell you about. You don't need to hesitate using it, because if it doesn't do all we say it will and satisfy you in every way, it will cost you nothing. If it doesn't make you strong and well again, come back and get your money. It will be given to you without word or question. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. $1.00—Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

Chronic Stomach Trouble Cure

There is nothing more discouraging than a chronic disorder of the stomach. Is it not surprising that many suffer for years with such an ailment when a permanent cure is within their reach and may be had for a trifle? "About one year ago," says P. H. Peak, of Wakelee, Mich., "I bought a package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and since using them I have felt perfectly well. I had previously used any number of different medicines, but none of them were of any lasting benefit. For sale by Alred Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

A BLAZE AT THE MT. CREEK POST OFFICE.

Early Monday morning the roof of the Mountain Creek Post Office building was seen to be on fire, and an alarm was given. The business men responded, buckets procured and the fight against the fierce flames commenced while Postmaster Gray gave directions as to where the men should concentrate their efforts.

T. J. Henderson procured a 20-foot ladder which was leaning against Merchant Baxley's building, and with willing hands it was seized and on strong backs carried to the scene, hoisted to the eaves, climbed by young men who had taken off their shoes, water in buckets passed up the ladder, and, then, the fight against the fire fiend was on in earnest.

Very soon the water put out the blaze, and, with the building and mails safe work was resumed in its usual tranquil manner.

LOCAL WOMAN NOW A BIG ADVERTISER

When one of our woman customers recently bought five bottles of Harmony Hair Beautifier to give to her friends for Christmas, she started all by herself a mighty big advertising campaign, because not only does each one of the women to whom she gave a bottle of the Beautifier now consider it indispensable for the proper care of the hair, but each of them has been the means of getting several of her friends to use it. As a consequence, if things keep on in this way for a few months longer, we will be selling more of it than of all other hair preparations combined. JUDGE DEASON IN CALHOUN

Judge E. B. Deason of Clanton, Chilton county, candidate for Congress from the Fourth District in opposition to Congressman Fred L. Blackmon, made a running canvass through the county Saturday from Anniston to Jacksonville and Piedmont. Judge Deason spent Friday in Cleburne county, launching his campaign, and it is said met with much encouragement. He spent most of the forenoon of Saturday in Anniston, meeting the people, and about noon left for Jacksonville and Piedmont. At all the places he was given substantial assurance of very earnest support by a number of citizens. He expects to return to Calhoun county in a short time to make a more thorough canvass and to meet more of the voters.—Anniston Star.

Upon arrival in Clanton he was remanded to jail to await a preliminary trial which takes place next Saturday before Justice of the Peace J. W. E. Gulledge.

Messrs. Smith & Gerald have been retained to defend the negro.

JOHN W. STANFIELD

HE WITHDRAWS FROM THE RACE

Clanton, Ala., March 10, '14.

Editor Press:

I have decided not to make the race for Representative on account of my stand in the Senatorial contest. Being a supporter of Hobson, I understand some of the Underwood people are fighting me, and as I do not care to get into a scrap for the place I have decided to withdraw from the race.

I shall always be found voting for the man who is against whisky as this is in my judgment the paramount issue.

I take this opportunity of thanking my friends who indorsed me and those who had promised me their support.

THE UNDERWOOD MEETING AT MT. CREEK

SENATOR THOMAS A. CURRY ADDRESSES A LARGE AUDIENCE.

The Underwood meeting at the Old Soldier's Home near Mountain Creek on April 9th was a grand success.

Capt. W. J. Bethune, president of the Underwood Club, which has a membership of nearly 100 voters, introduced Senator Curry, who is a candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Alabama.

Mr. Curry delivered a splendid speech, in which he reviewed Mr. Underwood's political and business life in a forcible manner. The speaker indulged in no mud-slinging, but he word-painted Mr. Hobson's inconsistent political conduct and duty-shirking career, coupled with selfish aspirations in polite language and convincing to the listeners that the-sinker-of-the-old Merrimac was not fitted to properly represent the commonwealth of Alabama in the United States Senate, while that peerless Statesman, Oscar W. Underwood, was the man we wanted and the faithful-to-duty statesman we intended on April 6th to, by an overwhelming vote, commission to "stand-up" for Alabama, and, thereby win the respect of associates and the admiration of the people of this and other nations.

Mr. Curry, although a candidate for Lieutenant Governor made no mention during his masterly address to his own candidacy, all of the 60 minutes he occupied the platform he strictly used in telling the old gray-haired heroes of 1861-65 and their friends present as to the faithful stick-to-duty-leader, Oscar W. Underwood, the man on the "firing line" at Washington watchful of our interest, and not here in Alabama—as Hobson is—drawing $25.00 each day of the tax-payers money while he seeks to climb up the political ladder.

Mr. Curry was frequently applauded by the old veterans; he made friends and voters for himself and Mr. Underwood.

Mrs. Curry, the Senator's wife, and Miss Clara Hartt, were present. The ladies called on some of the old veterans at their cottages, and dined with Dr. J. P. Ellsberry, the Home physician.

HON. L. R. SAWYER

TO THE VOTERS OF CHILTON COUNTY.

Editor Press:

I again appeal to you for space in which to address the voters of Chilton county. Loyal supporters and friends, since giving the matter much thought, and, at the solicitation of my many friends, I have withdrawn from the race for County Commissioner and am now a candidate for Representative.

In making this change I have taken many things into consideration and feel sure that I am taking a great step in the right way, and can render better service to the people of Chilton county and the State of Alabama as a member of the next Legislature since more depends upon the vote of that august body at its next sitting which will tend to further our progress and happiness along many lines, than does the office of county commissioner. The time has come in which our country is in need of manly men with the courage to say no, and will no longer tolerate the things which have made our politics corrupt and robbed the tax-payers of hard-earned money which by all means should have been given back to them for the purpose of building roads and maintaining public schools.

If you please, what is a state or county's greatest asset? I answer most assuredly, its people, especially the boys and girls. Then are we going to continue to cross roads and allow our friends to be gobbled up and forever do without the needed improvement which we must have 'ere we can make Alabama, and Mexico, too, bloom as a rose, and give to the boys and girls, as Andrew Jackson would say, 'a fighting chance.' I again answer, no, our young manhood rebells, and will, if given a chance stamp out the evil influence which prevails and help to right the wrongsdone the tax payers of Alabama.

Again, fellow-citizens of Chilton county, if you want better roads, and I know you do, I am the man to represent Chilton county, for I am an ardent believer in good roads, and favor Federal, State and County aid in constructing them. Why not, when the people pay millions of dollars into the several treasuries would it not be just and right to have more of this money appropriated to our roads and schools where it rightly belongs rather than the purchase of a governor's mansion and carpets and rugs with which to cover the floor more valuable than your home, you poor taxpayer, along with other needless expenditures. These are my views, and by them I will stand if I go down in defeat on April the 6th. Though I hope for a bettrr fate, and now pledge myself to wage a vigorous fight and win, and, if possible in November, provided you and the democratic voters honor me with the nomination.

I trust that you and my friends will not feel disappointed, but pleased with my change, for beyond a doubt it is of much importance, and I want to be elected to the office of Representative.

Yours truly,

L. R. SAWYER.

DR. V. B. POTTS

PROMINENT MAPLESVILLE PHYSICIAN DEAD.

Dr. V. B. Potts, one of the most prominent and influential citizens of Maplesville, died in Selma on Saturday last, following an illness of only a few days with pneumonia.

Dr. Potts was in Clanton on Monday, March 5th, having come over to attend to some business matters before the Commissioners Court, but at the time he was complaining of feeling unwell, and soon after reaching his Maplesville home his condition became serious and he was rushed to an infirmary at Selma. Everything known to medical science was done to prolong his life, but the terrible malady had secured such a hold apon him that mediral aid was without avail, and on Saturday his earthly suffurings were ended.

Dr. Potts came to Maplesville about five or six years ago, having removed here from Centreville, and had a wide medical practice; he was the physician for the Twin Tree Lumber Company. The deceased was a public spirited citizen, always taking an active interest in the upbuilding of Maplesville. He was a man possessed of the kindliest deeds and impulses, and was highly esteemed by all of the citizens of the town. His untimely demise is a severe blow to everybody in this community, and his loss will be keenly felt. Dr. Potts was about 37 years of age, and is survived by a widow and two children, who have the sympathy of all in their great bereavement.

The funeral took place at Centreville Sunday.

RETIRES FROM RACE FOR COMMISSIONER AND ANNOUNCES FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

In this week's issue Mr. L R. Sawyer announces his candidacy for Representative in the next General Assembly of Alabama from Chilton county. There will be many measures before the next Legislature that will effect the people of Alabama and of Chilton county and it behooves us to send the best available man. Mr. Sawyer is a young man of recognized business ability, conservative in his views, and is eminently fitted by temperament and environment for this position; born and reared in this county, he knows what the people needi nt he way of remedia legislation, and he will always be found advocating those measures that will best promote their well fare. Then the Apparatus Is in Demand.

A visitor was being shown through a lid-lifting "athletic" club. The chief attraction seemed to be the liquid gymnastic department. However, there was a cheaply equipped gymnasium which showed evidences of disuse. There was dust on the Indian clubs and cobwebs on the dumbells.

"Don't the members ever use this equipment?" the visitor asked.

"Oh, yes, occasionally—when a fight starts," was the reply.

ECZEMA ON HEAD AND FACE

Reedy, W. Va.—"My baby boy when three weeks old took the eczema on the head and face. It broke out in pimples and first they looked like blisters and a yellow water would run from them. His head was perfectly raw and his hair was all gone. Everybody said he would never have any more hair. As the sores spread his hair came out. The breaking out itched so badly that we had to keep gloves on his hands to keep him from scratching his head and face. It caused disfigurement. He couldn't rest at night it burned and itched so badly.

"He was treated for eight months and he got worse all the time. So I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In two months he was completely cured after using the Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) G. A. Dye, Jan. 7, 1913.

Peace in That Family.

A little girl being lost, was taken to the police station, where the officers tried to learn her name. At last, after many vain efforts, one of them asked her:

"Tell me, dear, what names does your mother call your father?"

"She doesn't call him any name," the child answered, innocently. "She likes him."

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

High Hats.

The enormous height of the millinery of 1914 led Jane Cowl to remark:

"I know a man whose wife said to him the other day:

"'Oh, dear, there's that old Christmas tree lying in the back yard over a month now; I don't know what on earth to do with it.'

"'Can't you put it on your new hat?' her husband asked."

MOTHER! LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs"

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

SUPERIOR MANAGEMENT OF SOWS AND PIGS

The Large Hog Was Raised By a Member of the Boys' Pig Club; the Small One Was Raised By the Boy's Father.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

All hog lots should be built where the sun will shine upon some portion of them at all hours of the day, says State Farmers' Bulletin 566, of the department of agriculture. Sunshine is one of the greatest factors for destroying germs and keeping down diseases. A supply of clean, fresh water at all times is essential. The troughs should be kept clean and not so much feed given at one time that it will be left in the trough to become sour and filthy. The troughs should be frequently washed out and placed where the sun will shine in them. This is especially true of troughs used for feeding small pigs. Cleanliness of the feed is essential in this case to prevent scours, which is the cause of death among so many pigs. Avoid sudden changes of feed for the sow just before farrowing or while suckling her pigs. Do not give a sow too much feed at this time. She should have about four pounds of dry feed for each one hundred of live weight.

Some clean, dry straw should be placed in every house for bedding, as it is essential that the sow have a warm, dry bed when she farrows. Many young pigs are lost each year from cold and exposure at farrowing time on every farm where no shelter is provided. The young pigs must be kept warm, dry and have plenty of sunshine until several weeks old in order to do well. Few sows that get plenty of exercise and are not too fat will need help in farrowing, but it is well to be present to give help if necessary and to keep any pigs from being crushed. Clip off the small tusks the day after the pigs are born. Give them the best of care for the first ten days and the death rate will be reduced greatly.

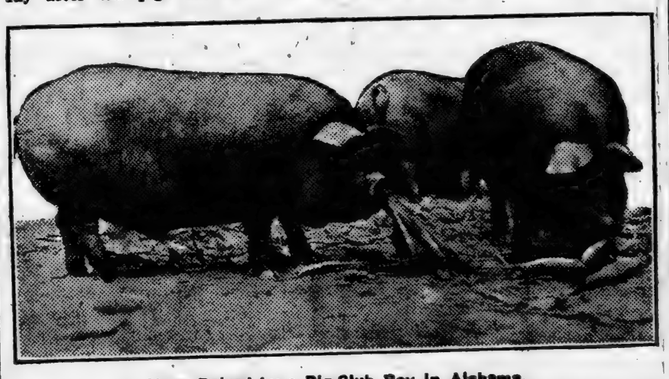
A flat-bottomed trough with sides not over three inches high may be used for feeding the small pigs and the feeding should be started as soon as they will begin to eat, or at about four weeks old.

Remedies for Hog Diseases.

Charcoal, 1 bushel; hardwood ashes, 1 bushel; salt, 8 pounds; air-slaked lime, 8 pounds; sulphur, 4 pounds, and pulverized copperas, 2 pounds, is a good remedy for pigs suffering with scours and hogs affected with worms, according to the animal husbandry division of the bureau of animal industry, department of agriculture.

If the pigs show indications of scouring, keep the charcoal mixture where the sow can eat it at will, or give her 15 grains of copperas in her slop every night and morning until effective. In case of severe scouring with little pigs, each may be given five to ten grains of subnitrate of bismuth after changing the sow's feed and giving her the copperas.

One of the best preventive measures for worms is to keep the mixture where the hogs can eat it at will. Mix the lime, salt and sulphur thoroughly, and then mix with the charcoal and ashes. Dissolve the copperas in two parts of hot water. Store in a barrel under shelter, but keep some of it in a shallow box for the hogs at all times. If hogs are already wormy, turpentine can be given in the slop each morning for three mornings, at the rate of one teaspoonful for each 80 pounds of live weight.



If hogs get plenty of exercise and are fed slop or soft feeds, they will seldom become constipated. In case a pregnant sow becomes very constipated give her one-fourth of a pound of Epsom salts in her slop once daily until her bowels become normal.

Examine the hogs frequently about the ears, neck, flank and the inside of the legs to see if they are lousy. Lice cause nutrition, among pigs of any age, and death among many pigs. To get rid of them wash or dip the hogs in a solution of any of the coal-tar disinfectants. A rubbing post may be made by wrapping some gunny sacks about a stake and wetting the sacks frequently with crude oil, so that the hogs may rub against them. An effective method of cleaning the hogs of lice during the summer months is to pour crude oil on the water in the wallow. A thin layer of oil will get on the hogs and will kill the lice without injuring the hogs.

Every year the loss of little pigs from canker sore mouth is enormous, and might be prevented by a little care. The disease is caused by infection through scratches on the nose or face of the pig, by a germ which is found in the droppings and filth from nearly all hogs. The infection results in swellings on the nose, or in eating canker sores. The small pigs have very sharp little tusks in the sides of their mouths, which scratch or cut the others' cheeks when they fight. The disease may be largely prevented by clipping these small tusks off even with the gums the day after the pigs are born, and by keeping the pens cleaned and bedded with fresh, clean straw. Care must be taken not to lacerate the gums when clipping the teeth and not to pull out the tusks, as infection would probably take place through these wounds more readily than from the scratches made by fighting.

A pair of small bone forceps for clipping the tusks may be bought for 75 cents to $1, and should be kept on every farm where pigs are raised. They should be carefully disinfected, washed and dried after use.

In case infection has already taken place and ulcers developed, the disease may be treated by scraping each ulcer thoroughly and rubbing it with a pencil of lunar caustic. Afterwards swab the sores twice daily with a 5 per cent. solution of potassium permanganate. In mild cases good results have often been secured by dipping the head of the affected pig several times each day in a solution made by dissolving two ounces of potassium permanganate in a gallon of water. If lumps or boils develop on the snout, cut deeply into each with a sharp knife and at once saturate with tincture of iodin. Wash the snout daily thereafter with a solution of potassium permanganate and every day apply tincture of iodin to the ulcers.

TIMELY HINTS FOR DAIRYMAN

Practical Feeder Will Observe Manger Carefully—Cleanliness Is Matter of High Ideals.

Every successful dairyman knows that—

Cows should not be milked with lightning speed, but steadily and gently.

The good feeder will watch the manger, the eye, the coat and the voidings of his animals and soon experience a fascination in his work.

By cleaning the stables, brushing the cows and properly mixing their feed it is possible to milk in comfort.

If a few lazy, dirty dairymen fail to produce a clean product it is the duty of the state and municipal governments to put them out of business.

Cleanliness is not a matter of higher ideals alone but of careful business forethought, nevertheless dairymen should have high ideals and strive for greater perfection.

NAVY IS FAVORED

CONGRESS SEEMS LIKELY TO AUTHORIZE BUILDING OF TWO BATTLESHIPS.

FIGURES ARE INTERESTING

What This Country and Others Are Spending for Fighting Vessels—People Always Approve of the Expenditure.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—Some time ago it was predicted that congress at this session would vote money for the building of two additional dreadnaughts for the American navy. The fact that the house committee on military affairs recently cut down some of the army estimates apparently has made many people think the battleship building program will be foregone. If the country wishes to keep the navy at its present strength the ships must be built and it seems certain today, even in the face of recent events, that congress will approve of the building plan.

The navy is the sister service of the army. Naturally what is done for one sister it is expected will be done for the other. Unless two battleships a year are added to the navy our sea defenses will be weakened. Navy officers want the present strength to be maintained and would like it immensely if the lawmakers could be led to see the virtue of an increase. Two ships this year seem to be assured.

Navies Are Kept Up.

It may be that the world's thought is progressing to a point which will put a full stop to the whole business of war, but until some more definite promise is forthcoming than that which is held out today, war craft will be launched and put to sea, and regiments will be enlisted and sent to the frontiers. Great Britain, Germany, the United States, France, Japan, Russia, Italy and Austria have more or less formidable navies and are keeping at the work of making them more formidable.

Battleship figures, because of their fighting significance, seem to have interest for all people. The battleships in commission or building are: Great Britain, 72; Germany, 39; United States, 36; France, 29; Japan, 19; Italy, 17; Russia, 15, and Austro-Hungary, 10. Of armored cruisers, Great Britain has 45, Germany 16, United States 11, France 20. These are the latest figures and they show the comparative strengths of the great navies of the world as they stand today.

What America Has Spent.

It was not many years ago that the United States began building what is known as the new navy. Up to the present time ships of the new or comparatively new type, have cost the people of the United States for construction alone $477,872,952. The larger part of this money has been spent since the year 1900, though the beginnings of the new navy are to be set back as far as 1890. The people of the country have approved this expenditure. Members of congress always have found that their constituents are perfectly willing that money shall be spent for warships and the further inland the district from which the congressman comes the greater seemingly the willingness that the money should be put into torpedo boats, cruisers or dreadnaughts. Naval appropriations always have been popular and in order to find the reason somebody must get into the inner consciousness of the American people.

Why is it necessary to build new ships every year in order to keep the navy at its present standard of efficiency? Time knocks the battleship out without extending itself to any marked degree. There is now in the list of really serviceable American battleships only one vessel that was built prior to the year 1900. The one exception is the battleship Iowa, which was completed in 1897. The Indiana, Massachusetts and Oregon, built about the same time as the Iowa, are no longer regarded as fighters. They are not included in the total of 36 battleships accredited to the United States, and yet it seems only yesterday that these vessels were carrying the flag at the front of the fighting off Santiago.

Railroads and Canal Tolls.

In certainly one-half of the legislation enacted or proposed for enactment by congress during the last 12 or 15 years, the railroads have entered either as the angelic Little Eva or as the brutalized Legree. The carrier corporations cast themselves as the angel child while some gentlemanly lawmakers with mean dispositions cast them as the slave driver.

If some inspired one could take a pencil and paper, do a little figuring and adduce proof that American coastwise sailing ships can pay tolls through the Panama canal and yet compete with the railroads for traffic East and West, there would be less heard in congress today of the iniquity of repealing the tolls exemption clause.

This railroad matter is entering into the present trouble in congress over the question of the repeal of the tolls exemption clause of the canal act. There are men ready to say that the coaster ships can carry their cargoes from the East coast to the West coast through the Panama canal and beat the railroads on cost and on charges. There are others who say that the real reason for the demand for the repeal of the exemption clause is that it is demanded by the transcontinental railroads. Somebody may have to prove something before this present trouble of the administration is abated. Listen to Senator Chamberlain of Oregon and you are inclined to believe one thing, and then listen to Senator Root and you may be inclined to believe another thing.

Persuaded by Mr. Wilson.

Senator Shively of Indiana is acting chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations. Senator Stone, the senior Democrat of the committee, is still ill and unable to attend to his duties. The toll exemption provision of the canal act was passed by congress only fifteen days after the Democratic convention adjourned. The party was on record in favor of granting what amounts to a subsidy of American vessels sailing north and south. It would be a curious thing if a Democratic house within two weeks of the big gathering at Baltimore had repudiated one of the planks of the platform.

Now some of the Democrats are saying that time has brought a different viewpoint. If "administration" were substituted for "time" the Democratic utterance probably would be nearer the truth. Mr. Wilson desires the repeal of the exemption clause. Probably his party, after having done one thing, will do the reverse thing at his order. It very likely is a righteous proceeding, but it is none the less a curious one.

Position of the Opponents.

Members of congress who are eager for large appropriations for rivers and harbors also are eager that the tolls exemption provision shall stand as it is. This is natural, for the waterway commerce men are proponents of means of communication which act as checks on railway rate extortions, or at any rate are supposed so to do. The rivers and harbors advocates make no secret of their opposition and it is impossible for them to make any secret of the reason for attacking it.

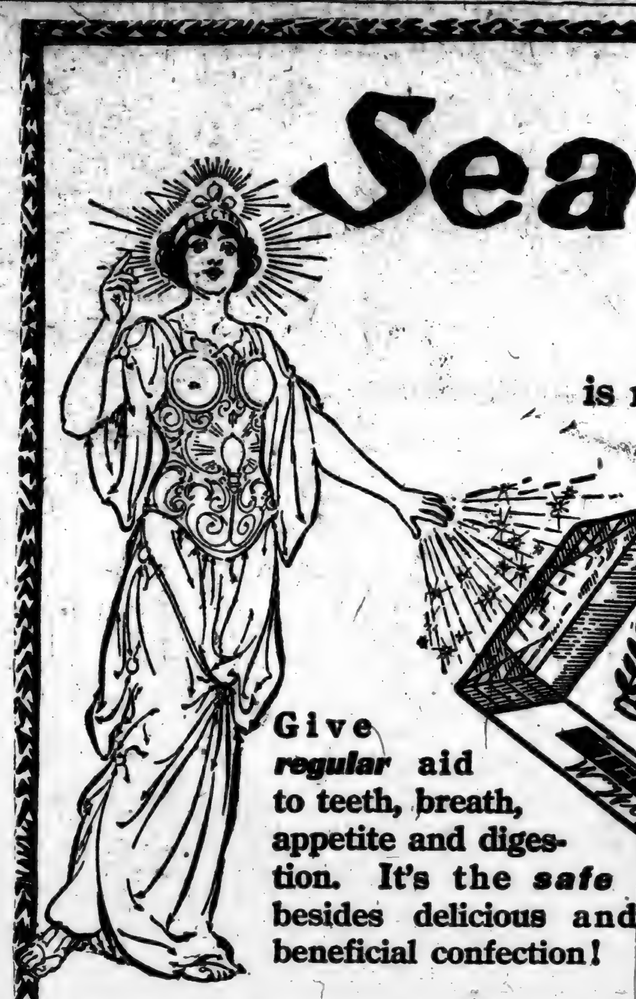
Pinchot Scores a Point.

A compromise has been made between the conservationists who believe in federal control and those who have stood by states' dights. Perhaps it is not right to call it a compromise, for the federal conservationists really won a victory. Secretary of War Garrison struck one of his flags to Gifford Pinchot and did it with the apparent approval of Woodrow Wilson.

A few days ago President Pinchot of the National Conservation association, who, as everybody knows, was once chief forester of the government, and one of the center figures in the Ballinger-Pinchot trouble which occurred during the Taft administration, wrote a letter attacking a bill which was introduced by Senator Martin of Virginia, chairman of the senate committee on appropriations. Secretary of War Garrison gave his approval to Senator Martin's bill, which was known as the Roanoke river dam bill. Concerning this bill Mr. Pinchot wrote:

"The enactment into law of the Roanoke river dam bill, now on the calendar and likely to be acted upon in the senate within the next few days, threatens to be the most serious blow the conservation policy has received since it first became a national question. The bill makes no provision for payment to the public in return for the great values it turns over to private hands. It provides no safeguards against either monopoly or extortionate charges to the consumer. Since 1907 the fight for water power has been the heart of the conservation fight, and that is true now. It is of critical importance that the Roanoke river dam bill shall not pass."

Garrison Backs Pinchot.



Few such letters as this have appeared in years in open and bold attack on a measure proposed by congress. One has to go back some years to find its counterpart. Pinchot wrote one much like it, or at any rate uttered words much like those in the present letter, at the time that a Republican congress was trying to put through what was called the James river dam bill. The day after Mr. Pinchot's last letter appeared congressmen and the public were amazed by the appearance of a statement from Secretary of War Garrison to the effect that Mr. Pinchot was right in his contention, and that the secretary was led unwittingly to give approval to a bill of whose terms he knew little.

It now appears that Mr. Garrison found on his desk one morning a large amount of material to sign. It is the custom in the department to attach a little red tag to every letter or document which it is of prime importance that the secretary should read before signing. There is a vast amount of routine matter which it is not necessary for a cabinet officer to read, and so the custom has risen to attach the red tag to those things which he must read. Either there was no red tag attached to the Roanoke river dam bill or else the secretary overlooked it and gave his approval without knowledge of its contents.

Wilson's Water Power Policy.

Congress now has before it a water power regulation plan which has the approval of the administration. It is not a bill, probably, with which a majority of the Democratic members of congress feel sympathy.

Briefly, the administration's water power policy will be to keep the control of power sites in government hands. The last word of permission to do this or to do that, must come from the secretary of war. "Those who wish to dam a navigable stream and incidentally create water power must at the present obtain the right to do so from their state, and then must obtain authority from the congress." Under the bill the individual state is given greater authority in the cases than it had before, but checks are provided and Uncle Sam maintains the control and the right to guard the interests of his wards.

TAKE A GLASS OF SALTS WHEN BLADDER BOTHERS

Harmless to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids—Splendid for the System.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.—Adv.

Testing Nephew's Knowledge.

There is a certain old German of Wilkesbarre, Pa., whose pride, like that of many self-made men, leads him at times into a sort of patronizing condescension toward those things he did not "have time for" when he was making his way in life.

Upon the occasion of the graduation of a nephew, he asked:

"Vell, Wilhelm, vot did dey teach you up there?"

"Greek and Latin," said the boy, "and German and algebra."

"So, so!" murmured the old German. "And vot's der algebra for potatoes, now?"—Youth's Companion.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy. We suggest that it is now time to consider the question of the election of a poet laureate for the town of Clanton.

Little Scotty Chesnutt, born and reared in Chilton county, but now a resident of Jefferson county, is a candidate for Lieutenant Governor! And they do say he is running in the interest of Kilby! Mr. Stanfield states in his letter fo withdrawal in another place in this issue his reasons for quitting the race.

OUR HOME WOMEN HAVE BEAUTIFUL HAIR.

Next time you go to theater or to the "movies" just notice, if you please, how many of our home ladies have beautiful hair—glossy, lustrous, and well-dressed. Then if you will pick out five or ten of those whose hair seems to be particularly pretty and will ask them what they used on it, we feel sure that at least more than half of them will say "Harmony Hair Beautifier." It is fast becoming the rage with both men and women who are particular about the appearance of their hair.

Sprinkle a little Harmony Hair Beautifier on your hair each time before brushing it. Contains no oil; will not change color of hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick, thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Contains nothing that can harm the hair; leaves no harshness or stickiness—just a sweet cleanliness.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us.—Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

WE HAVE FAITH IN THIS STOMACH REMEDY

A woman customer said to us the other day, "Say, you ought to tell every one in town about Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. I would myself if I could." That set us to thinking. So many people have used them and have so enthusiastically sounded their praises both to us and their friends, that we had an idea you all knew about them. But, in the chance that some of you who suffer from indigestion, heartburn, dyspepsia, or some other stomach complaint, don't know about them—we are writing this.

They contain Bismuth and Pepsin, two of the greatest digestive acids known to medical science. They soothe and comfort the stomach, promote the secretion of gastric juice, help to quickly digest the food and convert it into rich, red blood, and improve the action of the bowels. We believe them to be the best remedy made for indigestion and dyspepsia. We certainly wouldn't offer them to you entirely at our risk unless we felt sure they would do you a lot of good. If Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets do not relieve your indigestion, check the heartburn, and make it possible for you to eat what you like whenever you like, come back and get your money.

Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only at our store. Three sizes, 25c, 50c, and $1.00.—Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

BARBOUR DIVISION IS BEING AGITATED

COUNTY AT PRESENT CONTAINS NINE HUNDRED AND THIRTY SQUARE MILES.

A DOUBLE GOVERNMENT

County Maintains Two Courthouses and Expenses of Administration Is About Double.

Eufaula.—The division of Barbour county into two parts is still being agitated in many quarters by those who believe that the change would redound much to the benefit of these two component parts. The county, containing 930 square miles, almost twice the number required by the constitution, is held to be unwieldly by those favoring the change, who claim that the development of several parts of the county is being held back by the present system.

In many ways, it is stated, the county now has a double government. The circuit court meets both at Eufaula and Clayton; the probate court has an office at both places; the chancery court has its office here; the county maintains two courthouses, and the expense of administration is practically doubled in every item.

It would require a constitutional amendment reducing the minimum number of square miles for a county from 600 to at least 450 square miles, which would enable Barbour to make the change without securing any additional territory from neighboring counties, which would probably oppose such a move as far as they are directly concerned. In view of the probable results many are willing to make the campaign, however.

SUFFRAGE LEADERS MEET.

Distinguished Women Discuss American Movement for Feminine Enfranchisement.

Birmingham.—An epoch in the short and brilliant career of the woman's movement in the city and state was the meeting of the executive board of the National Woman's Suffrage Association held here March 9 and 10. This was the first meeting ever held in the south by an executive board of the national association and the importance of the occasion enlisted the co-operation of practically all citizens in giving a welcome to this distinguished body of women of international fame.

Every member of the board is a national figure in the equal suffrage world, women of splendid courage, mental equipment and ability, among them Dr. Anna Shaw, Miss Jane Addams, Mrs. Madeline Clay Breckenridge, Miss Caroline Runtz Rees, Mrs. Standley McCormack, Mrs. Joseph Tilton Bowen, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett, Mrs. Susan Walker Fitzgerald, who are known and honored the world over for their work for the cause.

A telegram from Dr. Shaw before the opening of the meeting announced that owing to a recent accident, the effects from which she has not yet fully recovered, she would be unable to attend.

Following is the program, in part:

March 9—Mass meeting at the Jefferson Theatre at 8 p. m. This was perhaps the most brilliant gathering of the conference, as a large number of people invited to come here to attend the meeting were in attendance.

The sole social function of the meeting was held on March 10 in the afternoon at 1 o'clock, when a subscription luncheon was given at the Country Club, with the committee as the guests of honor. Following the luncheon an informal session was held in the sun parlor of the club, which was open for the attendance of the public also. In the evening at 8 p. m. the visiting suffragists not having spoken the day before were heard in a public assembly held at Cable Hall. This concluded the conference, after which the committee members returned to their respective homes.

Girl Dies From Eating a Turnip.

Birmingham.—Elvira Durrough, a 11-year-old school girl in the Hammond quarters, between Irondale and Woodlawn, is dead as the result of picking up and eating an old turnip that was found on the roadside. Coroner Spain has given a certificate that death was caused by acute indigestion.

Pythians Will Meet in Attalla.

Gadsden.—The next meeting of the Eleventh District Knights of Pythias will be held at Attalla next summer.

Macon Holds Primary.

Tuskegee.—In the Macon county primary, O. S. Lewis defeated W. E. Huddleston for the State Senate. H. O. Merritt, present speaker pro tem of the lower house, won for the Legislature over Ernest W. Thompson. W. S. Webb, present deputy sheriff, was chosen overtwo active candidates for sheriff of the county.

Want New Depot.

Lineville.—The citizens of this town are exerting every effort for a new depot.

SOCIALISTS NAME STATE TICKET

W. C. Spain Is the Party Nominee for Governor.

Birmingham.—The socialist party of Alabama put the following ticket in the field for State officers at a recent convention of the party in Birmingham.

For governor, W. C. Spain; lieutenant governor, W. H. Chichester; attorney general, Clement R. Wood; secretary of State, R. E. L. Connolly; state treasurer, John M. Norton; commissioner of agriculture, S. Hinton, and congressman-at-large, J. F. A. Genaty; state superintendent of education, John Phillips; state auditor, R. W. Robbins; United States senator, F. C. Maxwell.

AN INNOCENT PARTY SACRIFICED, SAYS LACY.

Montgomery—Theodore Lacy broke his silence for the first time since he surrendered by giving to the press through Sheriff Horace Hood a statement to the effect that "an innocent man is about to be sacrificed to shield another." Lacy's statement was given to Sheriff Hood and the prisoner requested that it be given wide publicity. His statement does not say who is "about to be sacrificed or who is being shielded."

Lacy's statement in full follows:

"To the Public:

"I have remained silent until this time and it may be to my interest not to talk now. I have read several articles in the newspapers about the convict department shortage. Some of these pretended to come from friends of mine, others from unknown sources. None of these were authorized and inspired by me, and I knew nothing about them until I read them in print. Many of them reflect upon an innocent man about to be sacrificed for something he did not do to shield another. My sense of fair play compels me to make this statement.

"The man about to be sacrificed has been misled by a friend he trusted for the benefit of another who knows the facts."

STATE BRIEFS.

LACY GETS 10 YEARS MAKES STATEMENT

DECLARES HE SURRENDERED ON STRENGTH OF BARGAIN MADE WITH STATE OFFICIALS.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

A maximum sentence of ten years imprisonment was imposed on Theodore Lacy, convicted convict department chief clerk, by Judge Armstead Brown. Lacy heard his sentence without a quiver and immediately thereafter requested the court to dismiss the remaining cases against him on the ground that the governor, the solicitor and friends of the convicted man had agreed that he should be tried on only one case.

Solicitor Seibels denied knowledge of any such agreement.

Lacy was calm and collected. He answered in the negative when asked if he had any reason to offer against passage of sentence. He gave his age as 37 years; said his health was good.

Attorneys for Lacy gave notice of appeal to the higher tribunals. Sentence was suspended pending this.

Statements Cause Sensation.

Following are the statements of the governor of Alabama, Theodore Lacy, Daniel W. Troy, Solicitor Wm. T. Seibels, E. W. Pettus, and Charles A. Patterson, which caused a state-wide sensation:

"There was an agreement entered into with the governor of this state that I should be tried on only one case."—Theodore Lacy.

"I understand that Mr. Lacy, after being sentenced, stated to the court that his friends had an agreement with me whereby he was to be prosecuted in one case only.

"I have never made an agreement with his friends, representatives or counsel or any one else that he should be tried on only one case, or that he should receive less than the full measure of punishment which his crime deserved, and I have had no communication of any kind or character with Mr. Lacy himself since he stole the state's money."—The Governor of Alabama.

"I am informed that Mr. Lacy stated to the court that his friends had an agreement with the governor and myself, as the representative of the solicitor, that he should be tried only in one case. I have never represented the solicitor in any agreement with Mr. Lacy or with his friends, nor assumed to do so.

"Mr. Lacy's friends approached me with propositions for his return, which I understood to involve the return of the money also, and on this understanding I did put them in touch with the solicitor. So far as I know no other agreement was made than thaa shown by the statement of the solicitor in court."—Daniel W. Troy.

That negotiations looking to the return of Theodore Lacy, sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary for the embezzlement of $50,000 of state convict department funds, were begun in July of last year and that an agreement was made with the governor of Alabama, Daniel W. Troy, special counsel, Wm. T. Seibels, solicitor of Montgomery county, whereby Lacy would be tried on only one case, and that he would be allowed to make bond in the sum of $50,000 or less, was the statement given out by E. W. Pettus and Chas. A. Patterson, both of Selma.

Solicitor William T. Seibels of Montgomery declared that no agreement had been entered into which would in any way compromise the interests of the State.

Four Candidates for Governorship.

All four candidates for governor are now qualified, they having sent their checks to Tyler Goodwyn, chairman of the state committee.

Captain Franson Qualifies.

Capt. Paul Q. Franson, of Montgomery, who recently defeated G. O. Dickey, of Luverne, for major of the Second regiment, passed his examination successfully and will be commissioned at once. He retired from the captaincy of the Montgomery True Blues.

Inspecting Militia.

Adjutant General J. B. Scully and Capt. W. P. Screws, U. S. A., are conducting an annual inspection of the Alabama National Guard.

Won't Run for Short Term.

Frank P. Glass, of Birmingham, authorized an announcement that he would not enter the race for United States Senator for the unexpired term of the late Senator Joseph F. Johnston. Mr. Glass was appointed to fill the vacancy by the governor of Alabama, but was refused his seat.

Short Term Race.

State Senator Watt T. Brown, of Ragland, qualified with Chairman Tyler Goodwyn, of the State Democratic Committee, to enter the race for short term United States Senator, as did also Ray Rushton, of Montgomery. Capt. Frank S. White, of Birmingham, qualified shortly after the date of holding the primary was announced.

Chairman Goodwyn gave out a statement clearing up the technical complications which might have arisen relative to the nomination and election of a short term Senator.

"The primary election law provides that where the time is too short in which to certify a nomination," stated Chairman Goodwyn. "The chairman of the State Committee is authorized to provide the inspectors of election with pasters to be placed on the ballot, which pasters will have printed thereon the name of the party candidate. Under this provision, arrangements can be easily made in the special election of May 11, for the election of the short term senatorial nominee, even if a second primary on April 20 to secure that nominee becomes necessary.

"The State Committee was confronted with a difficult problem and it solved the difficulty properly and in the best manner it could do so.

"I think the idea of having the special election on May 11, the same date for the holding of the regular second Democratic primary, was a good idea. I have great hopes that in many counties we may be able to arrange so that the same managers, clerks and returning officers may be used for both the primary and the special election. Where this can be done, much of the expense of the second primary will be borne by the county treasurers and in that way enable the State Committee to make some proportionate return to the candidates of the high assessments made necessary by the two primaries.

"I have no doubt but that the probate judges, sheriffs and circuit clerks in the various counties will cooperate with me in securing these benefits as far as possible."

Election Date Must Stand.

Governor O'Neal states that the special election date, May 11, set for the naming of a United States Senator for the short term will not be changed. He said the State Democratic Committee would have to change its primary dates if it were not possible for the election laws to be complied with.

Ray Rushton, probable candidate for the Senatorship, had pointed out that a run-off primary April 20 would not give the necessary thirty days for certifying the nomination by the Democratic party.

It was the consensus of opinion here that the State Committee would have to meet again and set the primaries for earlier dates or declare for the plurality plan insofar as it relates to the Senatorship. This would give the runner-up in the April 6 election the nomination.

Suggestion that a second primary be held two or three days after April 6 in order to give the necessary thirty days was met with the argument that votes and certification of the first primary could not be in shape that early.

Rushton Raises Point.

Ray Rushton, of Montgomery, raised the point that time required by law is not allowed between the date set for the second Senatorial primary, April 20, and the date of the general election, May 1.

Jones Dismisses State's Appeal.

A decree dismissing the State of Alabama's appeal to the United States Supreme Court in the passenger rate litigation began in 1907 and won by the railroads was issued by Federal Judge Thomas G. Jones, and an order was also issued abrogating and nullifying the railroad bonds and declaring void the supplemental bills filed by the railroads after three Federal judges had refused to grant injunctions.

Judge Jones' action is sweeping in nature, and was taken following requests from the Attorney General of the State and local railroad attorneys. The most important feature of the court's order was the nullification of the railroad companies' bonds which were given in assurance of granting a refund of one-half cent for every mile traveled by a person in Alabama during the existence of temporary restraining orders issued last year. It is understood that several thousand dollars will be lost to persons holding the rebate coupons, they now being worthless.

Band Asks to Be Mustered Out.

Because of lack of interest and support from the National Guard and of the regiment to which it is attached the Second regimental band, of Eufaula, has voluntarily asked to be mustered out of service.

The band at Eufaula was organized several years ago, its members being prominent citizens of that town. Following organization the band became part of the Second regiment and since that time has attended all encampment and state events where bands were used.

Travelers to Meet in May.

The annual state convention of the Travelers' Protective Association of America will be held in Montgomery during the month of May, according to arrangements made at the annual banquet of the organization held in Montgomery. Delegates will be present from Montgomery, Birmingham, Mobile, Selma and Demopolis, and at least 75 members are expected to attend. The following officers were elected for the coming year: W. B. Nelson, president; L. J. Marchbois first vice president.

DROVE GUORMET TO SARCASM

Evidently French Restaurant Wine Was Not Exactly the Quality He Had Ordered.

William E. Corey praised at a Pittsburgh club the wines of California.

"Our California wines," said the steel magnate, "are much better than wines of a similar price in France, for French wines are so adulterated today that even a high-priced one often tastes like burnt sugar and water."

"But the fine wines, the 'grand cru' wines are wonderful," a young banker interrupted.

Mr. Corey shook his head.

"Not always," he said. "A friend of mine, a gourmet with whom I lunched not long ago at a fashionable boulevard restaurant in Paris, ordered a bottle of very old celebrated Margaux. Pouring out a little of the wine and rolling it on his tongue in true gourmet fashion he made a wry face.

"'Waiter!' he demanded. 'What wine is this you brought me?'

"'It is what monsieur ordered,' was the reply. 'Margaux 1895, grand cru.'

"'Humph,' sneered by friend, 'how lucky it is to be so old and to conceal its age so well.'"

Ugliness a Qualification.

Some bygone housewives appear to have regarded ugliness as a quality to be desired in their servants. When Eliza Coke, daughter of Coke of Norfolk, was about to marry, she wrote to her prospective mother-in-law: "Pray, have the goodness to decide as you think best about the pretty housemaid. I wish she were less pretty and less fond of dress, but if her conduct and principles are good neither are really objectionable faults. I think our establishment will be a pattern of morality, particularly if Mr. Stanhope engages the squinting butler and the terrible house maid he mentioned to me."

The Effect.

"Well, how did you sleep last night? Goethe spent the night there once."

"Very badly. My husband adores Goethe, and he was spouting him all night."

An Economical Man.

"We can't finish Europe. It will cost entirely too much."

"We gotta finish it. I ain't going to let this $4 guide book go to waste."

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sassoon were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. Valiant explores his ancestral home. He is surprised by a fox hunting party which invades his estate. He recognizes Shirley at the head of the party. He gives sanctuary to the cornered fox.

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

"Wonders will never cease!" said the young man easily, shrugging. "Well, our quarry is here somewhere. From the way the dogs act I should say he's bolted into the house. With your permission I'll take one of them in and see." He stooped and snapped a leash on a dog-collar.

"I'm really very sorry," said Valiant, "but I'm living in it at present."

The edge of a smile lifted the carefully trained mustache over the other's white teeth. It had the perfectly courteous air of saying, "Of course, if you say so. But—"

Valiant turned, with a gesture that included all. "If you care to dismount and rest," he said, "I shall be honored, though I'm afraid I can't offer you such hospitality as I should wish."

The judge raised his broad soft hat. "Thank you, sir," he said, with a soft accent that delightfully disdained the letter "r." "But we mustn't intrude any further. As you know, of course, the place has been uninhabited for any number of years, and we had no idea it was to acquire a tenant. You will overlook our riding through, I hope. I'm afraid the neighborhood has got used to considering this a sort of no-man's land. It's a pleasure to know that the Court is to be reclaimed, sir. Come along, Chilly," he added. "Our fox has a burrow under the house, I reckon—hang the cunning little devil!"

He waved his hat at the porch and turned his horse down the path, side by side with the golden chestnut. After them trooped the others, horses walking wearily, riders talking in low voices, the girls turning often to send swift bird-like glances behind them to where the straight masculine figure still stood with the yellow sunshine on his face. They did not leap the wall this time, but filed decorously through the swinging gate to the Red Road. Then, as they passed from view behind the hedges, John Valiant heard the younger voices break out together like the sound of a bomb thrown into a poultry-yard.

John Valiant stood watching till the last rider was out of sight. There was a warm flush of color in his face.

At length he turned with a ghost of a sigh, opened the hall door wide and stalking a hundred yards away, sat down on the shady grass and began to whistle, with his eyes on the door.

Presently he was rewarded. On a sudden, around the edge of the sill peered a sharp, suspicious little muzzle. Then, like a flash of tawny light, the fox broke sanctuary and shot for the thicket.

* * * * * * * * *

The brown lvied house in the village was big and square and faced the sleepy street. A one-storied wing contained a small door with a doctor's brass plate on the clapboarding beside it. Doctor Southall was one of Mrs. Merryweather Mason's paying guests—for she would have deemed the word boarder a gratuitous insult, no less to them than to her. Another was the major, who for a decade had occupied the big, old-fashioned corner-room on the second floor, companioned by a monstrous gray cat and waited on by an ancient negro named Jereboam, who had been a slave of his father's.

The doctor was a sallow taciturn man with a saturnine face, eyebrows like frosted thistles, a mouth as if made with one quick knife-slash and a head nearly bald, set on a neck that would not have disqualified a yearling ox.

On this particular morning neither the major nor the doctor was in evidence, the former having gone out early, and the latter being at the moment in his office, as the brassy buzz of a telephone from time to time announced. Two of the green wicker rocking-chairs on the porch, however, were in agitant commotion. Mrs. Mason was receiving a caller in the person of Mrs. Napoleon Gifford.

"After all these years!" the visitor was saying in her customary italics. (The broad "a" which lent a dulcet softness to the speech of her hostess was scorned by Mrs. Poly, her own "a's" being as narrow as the needle through which the rich man reaches heaven.) "We came here from Richmond when I was a bride—that's twenty-one years ago—and Damory Court was forsaken then. And think what a condition the house must be in now! Cared for by an agent who comes every other season from New York. Trust a man to do work like that!"

"I'm glad a Valiant is to occupy it," remarked Mrs. Mason in her sweet flute-like voice. "It would be sad to see any one else there. For after all, the Valiants were gentlemen."

Mrs. Gifford sniffed. "Would you have called Devil-John Valiant a gentleman? Why, he earned the name by the dreadful things he did. My grandfather used to say that when his wife lay sick—he hated her, you know—he would gallop his horse with all his hounds full-cry after him under her windows. Then that ghastly story of the slave he pressed to death in the hogshead of tobacco."

"I know," acquiesced Mrs. Mason. "He was a cruel man and wicked, too. Yet of course he was a gentleman. In the South the test of a gentleman has never been what he does, but who he is. But his grandson, Beauty Valiant, who lived at Damory Court thirty years ago, wasn't his type at all. He was only twenty-five when the duel occurred."

"He must have been brilliant," said the visitor, "to have founded that great corporation. It's a pity the son didn't take after him. Have you seen the papers lately? It seems that though he was to blame for the wrecking of the concern they can't do anything to him. Some technicality in the law, I suppose. But if a man is only rich enough they can't convict him of anything. Why he should suddenly make up his mind to come down here I can't see. With that old affair of his father's behind him, I should think he'd prefer Patagonia."

"I take it, then, madam," Doctor Southall's forbidding voice rose from the doorway, "that you are familiar with the circumstances of that old affair, as you term it?"

The lady bridled. Her passages at arms with the doctor did not invariably tend to sweeten her disposition. "I'm sure I only know what people say," she said.

"'People?'" snorted the doctor irascibly. "Just another name for a community that's a perfect sink of meanness and malice. If one believed all he heard here he'd quit speaking to his own grandmother."

"You will admit, I suppose," said Mrs. Gifford with some spirit, "that the name Valiant isn't what it used to be in this neighborhood?"

"I will, madam," responded the doctor. "When Valiant left this place (a mark of good taste, I've always considered it) he left it the worse, if possible, for his departure. Your remark, however, would seem to imply demerit on his part. Was he the only man who ever happened to be at the lucky end of a dueling-ground?"

"Then it isn't true that Valiant was a dead shot and Sassoon intoxicated?"

"Madam," said the doctor, "I have no wish to discuss the details of that unhappy incident with you or anybody else. I was one of those present, but the circumstances you mention have never been descanted upon by me."

"I see by the papers," said Mrs. Gifford, with an air of resignedly changing the subject, "they've been investigating the failure of the Valiant Corporation. The son seems to be getting the sharp end of the stick. Perhaps he's coming down here because they've made it so hot for him in New York. Well, I'm afraid he'll find this county disappointing."

"He will that!" agreed the doctor savagely. "No doubt he imagines he's coming to a kindly countryside of gentle-born people with souls and imaginations; he'll find he's lit in a section that's entirely too ready to hack at his father's name and prepared in advance to call him Northern scum and turn up its nose at his accent—a community so full of dyed-in-the-wool snobbery that it would make Boston look like a pea-white barbecue. I'm sorry for him!"

Just then from the rear of the house came a strident voice:

"Yo', Raph'el! Take yo' han's outer dem cherries! Don' yo' know ef yo' swallahs dem ar pits, yo' gwineter hab 'pendegeetus on lump up en die?"

The sound of a slap and shrill yelp followed, and around the porch dashed an infantile darkey, as nude as a black Puck, with his hands full of cherries, who came to a sudden demoralized stop in the embarrassing foreground.

"Raph!" thundered the doctor. "Didn't I tell you to go back to that kitchen?"

"Yes, suh," responded the imp. "But yo' didn' tell me ter stay dar!"

"If I see you out here again," roared the doctor, I'll tie your ears back—and grease you—and SWALLOW you!'" At which grisly threat, the apparition, with a shrill shriek, turned and ran desperately for the corner of the house.

"I hear," said the doctor, resuming, "that the young man who came to fix the place up has hired Uncle Jefferson and his wife to help him. Who's responsible for that interesting information?"

"Rickey Snyder," said Mrs. Mason. "She's got a spy-glass rigged up in a sugar-tree at Miss Mattie Sue's and she saw them pottering around there this morning."

"Little limb!" exclaimed Mrs. Gifford, with emphasis. "She's as cheeky as a town-hog. I can't imagine what Shirley Dandridge was thinking of when she brought that low-born child out of her sphere."

"There's Major Bristow at the Gate Now."

Something like a growl came from the doctor as he struck open the screen-door. "'Limb!' I'll bet ten dollars she's an angel in a cedar-tree at a church fair compared with some better-born young ones I know of who are only fit to live when they've got the scarlet-fever and who ought to be in the reformatory long ago. And as for Shirley Dandridge, it's my opinion she and her mother and a few others like her have got about the only drops of the milk of human kindness in this whole abandoned community!"

"Dreadful man!" said Mrs. Gifford, sotto voce, as the door banged viciously. "To think of his being born a Southall! Sometimes I can't believe it!"

Mrs. Mason shook her head and smiled. "Ah, but that isn't the real Doctor Southall," she said. "That's only his shell."

"I've heard that he has another side," responded the other with guarded grimness, "but if he has, I wish he'd manage to show it sometimes."

Mrs. Mason took off her glasses and wiped them carefully. "I saw it when my husband died," she said softly. "That was before you came. They were old friends, you know. He was sick almost a year, and the doctor used to carry him out here on the porch every day in his arms, like a child. And then, when the typhus came that summer among the negroes, he quarantined himself with them—the only white man there—and treated and nursed them and buried the dead with his own hands, till it was stamped out. That's the real Doctor Southall."

The rockers vibrated in silence for a moment. Then Mrs. Gifford said: "I never knew before that he had anything to do with that duel. Was he one of Valiant's seconds?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Mason; "and the major was the other. I was a little girl when it happened. I can barely remember it, but it made a big sensation."

"And over a love-affair!" exclaimed Mrs. Gifford in the tone of one to whom romance was daily bread.

"I suppose it was."

For a time the conversation languished. Then Mrs. Gifford asked suddenly: "Who do you suppose she could have been?—the girl behind that old Valiant affair."

Mrs. Mason shook her head. "No one knows for certain—unless, of course, the major or the doctor, and I wouldn't question either of them for worlds. You see, people had stopped gossiping about it before I was out of school. There's Major Bristow at the gate now. And the doctor's just coming out again."

The major wore a suit of white linen, with a broad-brimmed straw hat, and a pink was in his buttonhole, but to the observing, his step might have seemed to lack an accustomed jaunt'ness. As he came up the path the doctor opened his office. "How do you feel this morning, Major."

"Feel?" rumbled the major; "the way any gentleman ought to feel this time of the morning, sah. Like hell, sah."

The doctor bent his gaze on the hilarious blossom in the other's lapel. "If I were you, Bristow," he said scathingly, "I reckon I'd quit galivanting around to bridge-fights with perfumery on my handkerchief every evening. It's the devil of an example to the young."

The rocking-chairs behind the screening vines became motionless, and the ladies exchanged surreptitious smiles. If the two gentlemen were aware of each other's sterling qualities, their mutual appreciation was in inverse ratio to its expression, and, as the Elucinian mysteries, cloaked before the world. In public the doctor was wont to remark that the major talked like a Caesar, looked like a piano-tuner and was the only man he had ever seen who could strut sitting down. Never were his gibes so barbed as when launched against the major's white-waistcoated and patrician calm, and conversely, never did the major's bland suavity so nearly approach an undignified irritation as when receiving the envenomed darts of that accomplished cynic.

The major settled his black tie. "A little wholesome exercise wouldn't be a bad thing for you, Doctor," he said succinctly. "You're looking a shade pasty today."

"Exercise!" snapped the other viciously, as he pounded down the steps. "Ha, ha! I suppose you exercise—lazying out to the Dandridges once a week for a julep, and the rest of the time wearing out good cane-bottoms and palm-leaf fans and cussing at the heat. You'll go off with apoplexy one of these days."

"I shall if they're scared enough to call you," the major shot after him, nettled. But the doctor did not pause. He went on down the street without turning his head.

The major lifted his hat gallantly to the ladies, whose presence he had just observed.

"Do sit down, Major," said Mrs. Gifford. "There's a question I'm just dying to ask you. We've had such an interesting conversation. You've heard the news, of course, that young Mr. Valiant is coming to Damory Court?"

The major sat down heavily. In the bright light his face seemed suddenly pale and old.

"No?" the lady's tone was arch. "Have all the rest of us really got ahead of you for once? Yes, it's true. There's some one there getting it to rights. Now here's the question. There was a woman, of course, at the bottom of the Valiant duel. I'd never dream of asking you who she was. But which was it she loved, Valiant or Sassoon?"

CHAPTER XII.

The Echo.

When the major entered his room, Jereboam, his ancient body-servant, was dawdling about putting things to rights, his seamed visage under his white wool suggesting a charred stump beneath a crisp powdering of snow. "Jedge Chalmahs done telly-foam ter ax yo' ovah ter Glahden Hall ter suppah ter-night, suh," he said.

"Tell him not tonight, Jerry," said the other wearily. "Some other time."

The old darky ruminated as he plodded down to the doctor's telephone. "Whut de mattah now? He got dat ar way-off-yondah look ergen." He shook his head forebodingly.

The major had, indeed, a far-away look as he sat there, a heavy lonely figure, that bright morning. It had slipped to his face with the news of the arrival at Damory Court. He told himself that he felt queer.

Suddenly he seemed to hear elfin voices close to his ear:

"Which was it she loved? Valiant or Sassoon?"

It was so distinct that he started, vexed and disturbed. Really, it was absurd. He would be seeing things next! "Southall may be right about that exercise," he muttered; "I'll walk more." He began the projected reform without delay, striding up and down the room. But the little voices presently sounded again, shouting like gnomes inside a hill:

"Which was it? Valiant or Sassoon?"

"I wish to God I knew!" said the major roughly, standing still. It silenced them, but the sound of his own voice, as though it had been a preconcerted signal, drew together a hundred inchoate images of other days. There was the well-ordered garden of Damory Court—it rose up, gloomy with night shadows, across his great clothes-press against the wall—with himself sitting on a rustic-bench smoking and behind him the candle-lighted library window with Beauty Valiant pacing up and down, waiting for daylight. There was a sun-lighted stretch between two hemlocks, with Southall and he measuring the ground—the grass all dewy sparkles and an early robin teetering on a thorn-bush. Eight—nine—ten—he caught himself counting the paces.

He wiped his forehead. Between the hemlocks now were two figures facing each other, one twitching uncertainly, the other palely rigid; and at one side, held screen-wise, a raised umbrella. In some ghostly way he could see right through the latter—see the doctor's hand gripping the handle, his own, outstretched beyond its edge, holding a handkerchief ready to flutter down. A silly subterfuge those umbrellas, but there must be no actual witnesses to the final act of a "gentlemen's meeting"! A silly code the whole of it, now happily outgrown! The scene blurred into a single figure huddling down—huddling down—

"Which did she love?" The major shook his head helplessly. It was, after all, only the echo, become all at once audible on a shallow woman's lips, of a question that had always haunted him. It had first come to him on the heels of that duel, when he had stood, somewhat later that hateful morning, holding a saddled horse before the big pillared porch. It had whispered itself then from every moving leaf. "Sassoon or Valiant?" If she had loved Sassoon, of what use the letter Valiant was so long penning in the library? But—if it were Valiant she loved? The man who, having sworn not to lift his hand against the other, had broken his sacred word to her! Who had stained the unwritten code by facing an opponent maddened with liquor! Yet, what was there a woman might not condone in the one man? Would she read, forgive and send for him?

The major laughed out suddenly, harshly, in the quiet room, and looked down as if he expected to see that letter still lying in his hand. But the laugh could not still a regular pulsing sound that was in his ears—elfin like the voices, but as distinct—the sound of a horse's hoofs going from Damory Court.

He had heard those hoof-beats echo in his brain for thirty years!

GUILTY OF ONE SMALL LAPSE

The Following, Taken From Unwritten History, Proves George Washington Was Only Human.

On the afternoon of October 14, 1768, George Washington stepped into the private office of his good Philadelphia friend and dentist, Silicum Stradles. 'Twas an elegant fall afternoon and Chestnut street was alive with colonial damsels out in their new furs.

"Good-day, friend George," quoth the dentist, as he finished polishing a long, wicked-looking spear and picked up a gleaming crowbar.

"What brings you downtown thus early?" pursued Stradles, as he laid down the crowbar and picked up an eight-pound monkey wrench. "Nothing wrong with the teeth, I trust?" And he put down the monkey wrench and picked up a bone-handled iron mallet weighing it carelessly in his hand.

"I beg pardon," said George Washington, rather nervously. "What did you say?"

"I say, is it your teeth that brings you here this beautiful day?" said the dentist, as he put down the mallet and picked up a pair of gas pliers.

"No, my feet," said Mr. Washington, with a forced laugh. "Ha, ha, Silicum, my feet brought me here, to be sure. Well, I am glad to have seen you, I'm sure—I must go now."

Outside on the pavement he held his hand to his aching jaw and murmured guiltily: "Ah, well, just one little lie in a lifetime won't do any harm, and mayhap the historians will never get hold of it."

Girls Do the Courting.

Burton Holmes says that the natives believe in certain forms of women's rights in the Philippines, especially when it comes to choosing a husband. For instance, the Bontoc Igorotes leave all the courting to the girls. While the worldly goods of the proposed father-in-law have some bearing upon the ardor of the young lady's wooing, still there are certain requirements which must be lived up to by the young man, namely, he must either have secured the head of an enemy or he must be in the employ of an American; in other words, he must either be a brave man—according to Igorote standards—or he must be in a fair way to attain a good living.

Writes Lady Who can Now Walk Four Miles a Day Without Feeling Tired.

Boydton, Va.—Mrs. Fannie Boyd, of this town, says: "I am sure I would have been in my grave, had it not been for Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I certainly cannot praise it enough, for it is worth its weight in gold. I am, today, a walking advertisement for Cardui.

Before taking Cardui, I could hardly walk across the floor, I was so weak. I underwent an operation last spring for womanly trouble, but felt no better.

After using 8 bottles of Cardui, the woman's tonic, my ulcers were all gone, I can eat hearty without suffering any pain, feel fine in every way, work all day, and can walk four miles a day without feeling tired.

Please publish this letter, as I would like for every woman to know what Cardui did for me."

Many letters, similar to the above, come to us, unsolicited, every day. This one should surely convince you of the merit of Cardui, as it expresses the earnest sentiment of a lady who has tried it.

If you suffer from any of the numerous ailments so common to women, such as headache, backache, nervousness, weakness, pains in sides and limbs, sleeplessness, etc., begin taking Cardui today. It will help you, as it has helped so many others, in the past half century.

Too Good.

"To say that honesty is the best policy—to say in other words, that the more honest you are the richer you will become—that is a silly and self-evident lie."

The speaker, Harvey Woodruff, the well-known G. A. R. historian of Houston, had been discussing the honesty of George Washington. He continued:

"To be virtuous means to be poor and wretched. Take the case of Auntie Martha Washington Clay.

"Auntie Martha visited the office of a Nola Chucky lawyer and said:

"'Ah wants a divorce from mah husband Cal.'

"'Why, auntie, what has Cal been doing?'

"'He's done got religion, sah, an' ah hain't tasted chicken fo' free months.'"

Griffo Gets Religion.

"Dowling's" burned out on Times square the other night, and those who for years had occupied rooms above the famous old billiard hall were forced to run for their lives in what raiment they happened to be wearing at that nocturnal moment. Among them was Kid Griffo, who was at one time a fighter between midnight and one o'clock in an uptown music hall.

"I did a nut trick," Griffo is quoted as saying. "I took two flights of stairs in two jumps, wi' the fire bitin' at me. If I'd been left at the past you coulda buried me in a fryin' pan."

"And what did you get?" asked his friend.

"On them stairs," said Mr. Griffo, "I gets a pair of singed hands and religion."

LIFE'S ROAD
Smoothed by Change of Food

Worry is a big load to carry and an unnecessary one. When accompanied by indigestion it certainly is cause for the blues.

But the whole trouble may be easily thrown off and life's road be made easy and comfortable by proper eating and the cultivation of good cheer. Read what a Troy woman says:

"Two years ago I made the acquaintance of Grape-Nuts and have used the food once a day and sometimes twice, ever since.

"At the time I began to use it life was a burden. I was for years afflicted with bilious sick headache, caused by indigestion, and nothing seemed to relieve me.

"The trouble became so severe I had to leave my work for days at a time.

"My nerves were in such a state I could not sleep and the doctor said I was on the verge of nervous prostration. I saw an adv. concerning Grape-Nuts and bought a package for trial.

"What Grape-Nuts has done for me is certainly marvelous. I can now sleep like a child, am entirely free from the old trouble and have not had a headache in over a year. I feel like a new person. I have recommended it to others. One man I know ate principally Grape-Nuts while working on the ice all winter, and said he never felt better in his life."

THE TWO TREES

Editor Press:

It is as necessary to know the trees and their fruits as it was in the day of Adam.

The first man Adam is of the earth earthly. The second man Adam is the Lord from heaven, as they cannot represent two bodies, they must represent the two spirits on the two trees. Isaiah 65, 25, reads thus: "And the wolf and the lamb shall feed together." The first man Adam and the wolf represents the evil spirit in humanity or the tree of knowledge of good and evil, and the fruit thereof is sin.

The second man Adam and the lamb represents the tree of life, and its fruits is to do the will of God.

In regard to the prohibition question. As far as local option is concerned it would not hurt me direct, but I see so many little children that look like they don't have sufficient food and clothing, and growing up in ignorance on account of their fathers spending their earnings for liquor. So we see these children are degraded for the lack of culture.

I would ask who is to blame? Their fathers, only. Are not the law makers partly to blame?

I would ask if Mr. Underwood gets his fruit from the tree of life in regard to local option, and if humanity will rejoice and God be glorified under his platform. If so I would hollow hurrah for local option. But, fellow-citizens, we are commanded to show the appearance of evil which is local option as I see it.

Mr. Hobson says give us nation-wide prohibition, and then I think humanity will rejoice and God be glorified under prohibition. I think the platform of Mr. Hobson on prohibition is the fruit of the tree of life which God said to Adam put forth thy hand and eat of the tree of life and live forever.

Yours truly,
J. POPWELL.

A REAL NERVE AND BODY BUILDING MEDICINE

We believe Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is the best remedy made for toning the nerves, enriching the blood, building up wasted tissues, renewing health, strength and energy—the best medicine you can use if you are run-down, tired-out, nervous and debilitated, no matter what the cause. It doesn't depend for its good effect upon alcohol or habit-forming drugs, because it contains none. It may not make you feel better in a few hours, but it will make you feel better, we are sure, just as soon as the tonic and food properties it contains have a chance to get into the blood and, though the blood, into the rest of the system. Pure Olive Oil and the Hypophosphites have long been endorsed by successful physicians, but here, for the first time, they are combined into one preparation which, as a nerve-food and a builder of strength and health, has no equal

If you don't feel well, begin taking Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion to-day, and build your health and strengthen your system against more serious illness. To convalescents, old people, puny children and all others who are weak, run-down or ailing, we offer Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion with our personal promise that, if it doesn't make you feel strong again, it will cost you nothing. Mr. Editor:

I live in Precinct No. 13, not far from the Shelby line. I was in Montevallo and Calera both last week and I want to tell you of some of my experience. In Montevallo I found two men for Mr. Blackmon for Congress, and all the balance for Judge Deason. One of the Blackmon men had never seen him and did not know what county he was from. The other man said that he wanted to vote for Judge Deason, but that he had waited so long to say so that he was afraid that his vote would not be appreciated.

In Calera I found the people solid for Judge Deason, and one man wanted to scrap with me because I did not know that he was for Deason without even asking him. If Deason runs over the balance of this district like he is running in Shelby and Chilton he certainly will be able to spare enough votes for Blackmon to keep him from feeling too badly.

BEAT 13 DEMOCRAT.

Mr. Blackmon's Record.

We have in the campaign of the Fourth District the same old fight between the allied interests and the people

Our present Congressman, Hon. Fred L. Blackmon, in his first political utterances of the campaign show where he stands, and above all things he says he stands on his record to ask the people of the Fourth Congressional District to return him to Congress. In another paragraph of this article we will show to the people of this district by his record what he has accomplished for them and convince them of the astounding fact that none of the bills which he introduced became a law.

We believe with all our might and patriotism that it is beyond the power of human knowledge to legislate out of a man the appetite for the desires that afflict frail humanity, but we do believe in the cardinal principles of local self-government, and that the particular locality should have the absolute right to determine this question. The Webb bill, introduced in the Congress of the United States, and which became a law, was for the purpose of prohibiting the shipping of liquor into dry territory for unlawful purposes. We find our Congressman casting his vote against the law which prohibits the shipping of liquor into dry territory.

Mr. Blackmon says that he rests his claims for re-election upon his record. We do not care to scrutinize him too closely, but submit the following as Mr. Blackmon's record of achievements:

Mr. Blackmon during his service in the Sixty-second Congress introduced a total of 21 private bills and 14 public bills, none of which were enacted into law. He introduced no private bills in the first session of the Sixty-third Congress; he introduced eight public bills during his service in the first session of the Sixty-third Congress, none of which were enacted into law.

Mr. Blackmon's record is rather an unfortunate one. It very rarely happens that a representative is not able to procure the passage of some private bills during an entire Congress, especially when that Congress had three sessions in which to accomplish favorable action on some of them.

During Mr. Blackmon's record enumerated above, no bills introduced by him ever passed beyond the committee stage, with the exception of two joint resolutions.

A FAMILY RE-UNION

On the 15th of March there was a meeting of the relatives and friends of Mr. J. W. Baker, aged 82 years. There was fifty-two present, including J. A. and J. S. Colley, of Mountain Creek, who visited with Jeff Baker, a son of J. W. Baker. A splendid dinner was enjoyed by all, and, in the afternoon there was Bible reading and comment on the selections read.

CANTON CHINA

It might be of interest to some to know what kind of a city I am living in, so I shall try to tell you something of it. A real description would be almost impossible, as it is so unlike our American cities.

Canton is situated on the banks of the Pearl river, about 75 miles from the Pacific coast, or from Hong Kong, which is the nearest seaport. It is one of the old walled cities of China. The circumference of the walled city is about six miles. But the city has long spread out in some places a long distance from the wall.

Instead of the wide beautiful streets as they are in American cities, there are only very narrow ones. They are from four to eight feet wide; while the widest are about eight, the average width is six feet. Someone might think it strange that they can get along with such narrow streets, and wonder how the wagons pass along, but they do not have wagons of any kind. Everything is carried by hand. The coolies swing their burdens across their backs on a pole. If the burden is very heavy, two men take it swung on a pole between them. So they do not have any special need for wide streets. I think one reason they made them so narrow was to get as many people as possible in a small space. There have always been robbers in China, and the people had to live in walled cities to protect themselves; so the closer together they built their houses the less space they would have to build a wall around. The houses are mostly two stories high, but they range from one to three stories, and to a large extent they are used as a shop and dwelling combined, the shop, or store in front and the family lives in the back and on the second floor.

The population of Canton has never been correctly counted, but there are various estimates ranging from two to three millions. There is no doubt at all that there are two millions here, and it is very likely there are many more. There are nearly as many people in this city as there are in the whole state of Alabama, for there are just a little over two million in Alabama.

There is one small section of the city that is owned by foreigners, mostly English and French. This is built up as a modern city, having also one wide street along the bank of the river. A company got hold of it and built a rock wall near the edge of the water and filled in behind it, making room for a nice wide street and for many houses.

There are electric lights here and telephones, but no street car lines. They cannot have the car lines because the streets are so narrow. Just after the revolution the officials wanted to pull down the wall and put a car line around the city in place of the wall, but there is a reaction toward the old ways now, and it will probably be some time before the wall is torn down and the car line built.

MY FIRST VISIT TO THE CITY.

We arrived here on Sunday night, November 9th. On Monday afternoon one of the other missionaries asked me if I would like to take a walk into the city. I agreed, and soon we were off to the city. (We live just a little way from the city wall). In just a few minutes we were walking along a narrow street paved with solid granite, as are all the streets in Canton. As we went on, the street became narrower, till it was no more than six feet wide, and the houses became higher as we went along till most all of them were three stories high. And people, it seemed to me that all the people in town were [illegible] learned that all the streets were full of people nearly all the time.

On the sides of the streets there were all kinds of shops and stores. On one side might be a blacksmith shop, on the other side a brass beater's shop, next door a fruit stand, then a meat market, next a dried fish stand. Then I had to hold my nose. Big fish, little fish, old fish, new fish, dried fish, rotten fish and all kinds of fish. My two companions began talking about taking a meal at a Chinese restaurant, and said the supplies for the restaurant were bought on this street. That thought did not give me an appetite, but I thought I could stand anything they could. So we went into a place which was quite clean and nice, compared with the street. Some Chinese dishes were served which were delicious. The only thing that was out of the ordinary was shark fins. The strange thing about it all was that I had to eat with chopsticks, and could not handle them well. The older missionaries had their fun off of me, but I enjoyed it too.

Then out for half an hour's walk through those dirty, filthy, slimy streets to the "Bund" (the wide street along the river) where we took "rickishas" toward home. As we rode along the "Bund," I saw thousands of little lights twinkling in the river, for it was night by that time. It is said that almost 200,000 people live in little boats in the river here. Their little boats are covered over and are called house-boats. They cook, eat, sleep and do all their work on these little boats. They carry freight and an occasional passenger across the river. One wonders how they live. They drink the water from the river, with all the filth of the city in it. You may go up the river almost any time and see one woman washing clothes, worn by someone with smallpox, or any other contagious disease, and another woman in the next boat dipping up water to do her cooking with.

But, we finished that ride down the "Bund" and were soon at home, outside the city, where the air is pure and fresh; I was glad I do not have to live in the city.

Killing Near Thorsby

Dr. B. A. Walker, Birmingham Dentist, Shot and Almost Instantly Killed By Father-in-Law.

Sunday morning last, Mr. R. L. Carter, a prosperous farmer, living near Thorsby, shot and mortally wounded his son-in-law, Dr. B. A. Walker, of Birmingham, death resulting soon after the fatal shot was fired.

Dr. Walker and his wife had become estranged several months ago, and he is said to have written threatening letters to both her and his father-in-law, saying among other things that he was coming down to shoot up the whole bunch.

On Saturday, Dr. Walker, in company with his brother and a friend left Birmingham in an automobile, and arrived in Clanton and spent the night, leaving for Thorsby about six o'clock Sunday morning.

According to the evidence submitted at the Coroner's inquest, which was held by B. E. Collum, soon after the killing. Dr. Walker left his pistol with Mr. Sam W. Collins, saying, "Sam, bear witness that I am going to see my wife unarmed, and that I am not going to look for trouble."

Arriving at his father-in-law's house, Dr. Walker alighted from the machine and entered the home and tried to bring about a reconciliation. Unsuccessful in his efforts he began to curse his wife and threaten her life, saying he was going to have possession of his four year old son, Odom Walker. Mr. Carter hearing the fuss and fearing for his daughter's safety, came upon the scene in time to see Dr. Walker strike or shove his daughter, and, seizing a shot gun, he fired one shot, the load entering the left shoulder.

After the shooting Dr. Walker got into his automobile and instructed his chauffeur to drive to Jemison, but before they could reach Jemison Dr. Walker died from the awful wound he had received.

Although Dr. Walker left his pistol with Mr. Sam Collins, two pistols and a pump gun were found in the automobile after the shooting.

Immediately after the shooting Carter came to Clanton and surrendered to the Sheriff and was put in jail on a charge of murder. On Monday Mrs. Julie Walker, wife of the dead man was brought to Clanton and placed in jail, charged with being implicated in the crime. Her preliminary trial is set for to-day (Thursday) before Justice of the Peace Bice, at Thorsby. The preliminary trial of Mr. Carter has not as yet been set.

The remains of Dr. Walker were carried to Birmingham Sunday night for interment.

The deceased was 34 years of age and is survived by a wife and one child, father and a number of brothers and sisters.

All of the parties in the automobile are said to have been drinking heavily on the way down to Clanton and while here, and those remaining in the automobile while Dr. Walker entered the house are said to have drunk in [illegible]

OLD CHILTON'S POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Chilton has a candidate for lieutenant governor, in Mr. Thomas A. Curry, who is a good, strong man. As Mr. Kilby, the other candidate for that office, is also from the Fourth district, the race assumes an interesting attitude.

Chilton also has a candidate for Congress from the Fourth district, in Judge Deason, her probate judge, a very able and popular man.

So Chilton has all the politics she needs and has attracted state-wide attention because her two sons force a kind of district fight, or at least, Chilton against Calhoun in both contests, for both Blackmon and Kilby are Calhoun men. Both of the counties give as much time to politics as they do to religion or business, and all the state looks at these battles with more than usual interest.—Ledger

THIS NEW MEDICINE SAVES YOU MONEY

We are druggists right here in your town and make a living out of the drug business, but it is because people have to have drugs and not because we like to see people suffer—we don't. Our duty is to render the best service we can, and when some one is ailing, we are interested in seeing them take the best medicine there is for their particular trouble. We don't recommend "cure-alls," as we don't believe there are such things. We don't want you to spend more than you have to. Some of you get small wages, and when you're sick, none at all, and you should get the most you can for your money.

We recently came across a new remedy for increasing strength and building up people who are run-down and emaciated. We know that a slight trouble sometimes grows into a serious one, and to stop it in the beginning, will save you money in the end. This new compound is called Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. It is the best remedy, when you are run-down, tired out, nervous—no matter what the cause. It doesn't merely stimulate you and make you feel good for a few hours, but takes hold of the weakness and builds you up to a healthy, normal condition. It is a real nerve-food tonic-builder of good blood, strong muscle, good digestion. It contains Hypophosphites, which feed the nerves, and pure Olive Oil, which nourishes the nerves, the blood and the entire system. Pleasant to take. Contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. We promise that if you are not perfectly satisfied with it, [illegible]

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, luster and luxuriance which is so beautiful. Direful Predicament.

"My hat blowed off," said Margie, in relating a recent experience, "an' I tomed clear home wiz my head barefooted."

Too Insignificant.

Young Mr. Ellis was very much in love, and one evening he determined to ask the momentous question.

"It occurs to me, Agnes," he began, "that in the relations which will some days exist between us the thought of—er—money might assume undue proportions. I should hate to think that any discussion as to my salary would give rise to any painful scenes."

"Believe me, Alan," said the girl, "that never, under any circumstances, would I allow such a little thing as that to come between us."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Artists 25,000 Years Ago.

"Man began to be an artist subsequent to the last ice age, which period is roughly estimated at from 25,000 to 50,000 years ago," said Prof. George Grant MacCurdy at the University Museum lecture the other afternoon. "At least that is the time the fundamentals first appear. Therefore, man was an artist before he was a maker of hieroglyphics. He produced objects of beauty before he tamed the wild beasts.

"The cave artist was practically without an artistic background, but climatic, faunal and other environment played no important part in the origin of troglodite art. The models were game animals, and ran largely to profiles, for the cave artist had not learned perspective, but he understood motion. He made single figures, but was long in acquiring composition."

NOT A MIRACLE
Just Plain Cause and Effect.

There are some quite remarkable things happening every day, which seem almost miraculous.

Some persons would not believe that a man could suffer from coffee drinking so severely as to cause spells of unconsciousness. And to find relief in changing from coffee to Postum is well worth recording.

"I used to be a great coffee drinker, so much so that it was killing me by inches. My heart became so weak I would fall and lie unconscious for an hour at a time.

"My friends, and even the doctor, told me it was drinking coffee that caused the trouble. I would not believe it, and still drank coffee until I could not leave my room.

"Then my doctor, who drinks Postum himself, persuaded me to stop coffee and try Postum. After much hesitation I concluded to try it. That was eight months ago. Since then I have had but few of those spells, none for more than four months.

"I feel better, sleep better and am better every way. I now drink nothing but Postum and touch no coffee, and as I am seventy years of age all my friends think the improvement quite remarkable."

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A heaping teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about one-quarter.

"There's a Reason" for Postum—sold by Grocers.

SCOTTISH RITE MASONS MEET

DEGREES FROM FOURTH TO THIRTY-SECOND CONFERRED ON CANDIDATES.

High Officials of the Order Also Attend Annual Reunion in Birmingham.

Birmingham.—An event of unusual interest to the Scottish Rite Masons of Birmingham and state was the spring reunion of the Ancient and Accepted Rite held in Birmingham March 17 to 20, inclusive. The Scottish Rite degrees from the fourth to the thirty-second were conferred on a large class of candidates.

Members of the order from all parts of the state were in attendance as well as prominent members from adjoining states. Among the high officials of the order in attendance were George F. REPORT ON COAL MINES.

Output Runs to Nearly 18,000,000 Tons Official Figures.

Birmingham.—Alabama produced 17,884,745 tons of coal, an output valued at approximately $24,742,403.75, during 1913, according to official figures compiled and announced by Chief State Mine Inspector Charles H. Nesbitt.

This is the largest tonnage in the history of the State, having been produced with the lowest death rate per ton mined, and in consideration of the number of men employed, for the past ten years.

Coke production also shows a highly satisfactory increase, now that all of the official figures have been submitted to the Chief State Mine Inspector. The output in that line for 1912 was 2,881,861 tons, while in 1913 these figures ran to 3,562,624 tons, an increase of 644,763 tons.

Jefferson County produced more than 50 per cent of the output for the entire State, both in coal and coke. The following comparative table of the counties of the State having coal mines as prepared by the Chief State Mine Inspector for 1913:

County.	Tons.
Jefferson	9,011,808
Walker	3,944,381
Bibb	1,948,542
Blount	300,850
Tuscaloosa	987,972
Shelby	498,009
Cullman	61,556
Winston	27,195
Etowah	60,394
Marion	60,455
Jackson	22,231
St. Clair	981,152
DeKalb
Total	17,884,745

To produce this enormous output, 25,000 men were employed in the mines. With every 144,222 tons, a life was lost. Comparing this with the records for the past ten years, this, however, is very encouraging and indicative of the good results of the safety rules being applied underground. Especially is this encouraging as it includes the Acton explosion, and then shows only three more men killed in 1913 than in 1912. Nearly 2,000 more men found employment in the mines last year than during the same period just previous, the exact increase being 1,941 persons.

SAYS COUPONS REDEEMABLE.

Railroad Commissioner Henderson Makes Statement.

Birmingham.—In a statement given out here, Railroad Commissioner Henderson declares that passenger coupons issued since the order of the Railroad Commission last year, prescribing the two and one-half cent rate, are redeemable.

In the recent compromise the railroads agreed to give the reduced Alabama rate on interstate travel. That is, the purchaser buying a ticket from Birmingham to Atlanta, Ga., will be given the two and one-half cent rate to the state line. In other words, all transportation in Alabama, to any point, will be based on the two and one half-cent rate.

Mr. Henderson says the coupons issued before the order of the Commission putting on the two and one-half cent rate are not redeemable.

Knew One of 'Em Must Be Johnson.

A Sunday school teacher in Lindsborg, instructing a class of little boys, asked them to name the three men in the fiery furnace, to which a boy responded: "Shadrach, Meshbach and Johnson." The astounded teacher pressed the boy for an explanation, and he said: "My father says whenever you see three men talking together in Lindsborg you can be reasonably sure one of 'em is named Johnson."—Kansas City Star.

MEAT CLOGS KIDNEYS THEN YOUR BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You—Drink Lots of Water.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

MUST BENEFIT ALL

National Banks See Wisdom of New Currency Law.

Practically All the Big Financial Institutions of the Country Have Accepted It as a Worthy Reform Measure.

Ninety-nine per cent of the national banks of the United States, representing 99¾ per cent of the national banking capital of the country, have accepted President Wilson's currency and reserve law.

It is the biggest triumph ever scored by a reform measure in America. What makes it greater is the fact that these banks came in voluntarily; they were not clubbed. No one swung a big stick over their heads. No one denounced the banker who hesitated about renewing his national charter as a malefactor of great wealth.

The states stood ready to license any worthy institution which did not like the new law, and in this connection it should be borne in mind that a majority of the banking capital of this country is held by state banks. Yet without any legal, moral or financial compulsion, with an easy and profitable alternative open to them, practically all the national banks of the land have accepted the law which many of them were wildly denouncing a few months ago.

The explanation of this change of front is simple—but not very flattering to high financiers.

The Wilson currency law was drawn for the benefit of the entire nation. Therefore, it benefits bankers, too, but for a time they could not see this. The big financial powers have grown so used to seeing their will written into law at Washington that they resented the idea of having laws imposed on them by a mere president and congress. They wanted a measure which took care of high finance first and of the country afterward, and it graveled them beyond measure to find themselves rated merely as also present in the list of interests to be served by the new law.

Closer study has convinced them that the financial liberty and security guaranteed by the federal reserve law is the best possible basis for sound and profitable banking—and they have acted accordingly. Perhaps next time they will not be so hard to convince.

Making Excuses.

There may be some relaxation of the civil service regulations where sufficient reason can be shown for exceptional treatment, but the president's position on the general question of the reformed civil service, in contrast with the spoils system, is too well defined to admit any possibility that he will allow the bars to be thrown down in the interest of the patronage mongers. The trouble with Republican criticisms of Democratic action is that every time a Republican administration displaces a Democrat it is solely for the good of the service. But when a Democratic administration displaces a Republican it is a wild raid of the patronage brokers.—Philadelphia Record.

Democratic Opportunity.

This is the situation confronting the Democratic party. We have captured the presidency, retained the house and won the senate. We have relegated to private life the chief dispensers of the loaves and fishes of privilege. We have placed at the head of the government a man who commands universal respect both for character and capacity. We are squarely on trial. We accept the ordeal. All true Democrats make haste to acknowledge that the exact measure of the value of the Democracy to our national life is about to be determined by the kind of test from which there is no appeal. We rejoice in the fact. We believe the party has come to its kingdom for such a time as this.

President Leads United Party.

If the president continues to hold his party together, which seems likely to be the case, it will go before the country next fall with a united front. This is a fact of no small importance. It means that the Democratic party has learned a lesson from the bitter experience of the past, and that it does not propose to jeopardise its position by an exhibition of lack of harmony. In fact, the remarkable outcome of the year has been the demonstration that the Democratic party is a disciplined and cohesive organization.

Collecting the Income Tax.

No more than the present system of collecting tariff revenue, much less than local personal taxation, does the proposed income tax offer a premium on perjury. The great majority of those liable to it will be unable to swear falsely about it if they would. Collection will be automatic.

Must Yield to Circumstances.

The quadrennial announcements of political parties do not offer a sufficiently elastic rule to control the activities of the government. Even an intense partisan might deny that an affirmation in convention was a final pronouncement upon a question of policy that might result an entire stage one, two or three years later.

It would only be necessary for committees on resolutions to be a little more prudent and the government would have its hands tied in all its diplomatic operations.

Corn Oil for Cooking.

The discovery that oil made from corn can be used economically as a substitute for other oils in cooking has been made by Prof. L. E. Sayre of the school of pharmacy of the University of Kansas. Corn oil is a by-product from cereal manufacturing. It is comparatively cheap, selling at 50 cents a gallon for the refined grade. Olive oil sells at $3 a gallon, and cottonseed oil at 75 cents. Corn oil has a pale yellow color and a pleasant taste similar to freshly ground cornmeal. Its properties, according to Professor Sayre are very similar to those of olive and cottonseed oils.

Ridgely Lady Tells of Her Fierce Struggle and How She Finally Won.

Ridgely, Tenn.—"If it had not been for Cardui, the woman's tonic," says Mrs. Jennie Estes, of this town, "I honestly believe I would have been in my grave today. Therefore, I want to say something good for Cardui, but I can't begin to say enough.

I was sick abed with womanly troubles, from February until October, and was in very bad condition. I was treated three or four times a week, but it did me no good.

I battled between life and death, and my husband thought surely I would die.

One day, I thought I would give Cardui, the woman's tonic, a trial. I had no confidence in it, at all, but bought a bottle. In a few days, I was up and doing my housework. Now, I have gained 15 pounds and feel as well as I ever felt in my life.

I advise all sick and suffering women to try Cardui. It cured me when all other medicines failed."

If you are weak, tired, worn-out, or suffer from any of the pains peculiar to weak women, such as headache, backache, pains in arm, side or limbs, or any other symptoms of womanly trouble, you are urged to try Cardui, the woman's tonic. We think it will help you.

Yeast the Best Medicine for Boils.

One of the most efficient cures for a boil is common yeast—about one-third of a compressed yeast cake dissolved in a glass of water and taken once or twice a day.

Besides this, the bowels should be kept open and the food changed. There is no one best local treatment, but Dr. D. Macfarlan of Philadelphia gives some sound common sense advice. The boil should not be lanced until it has "come to a head." As soon as it begins to develop it should be poulticed with warm bread and milk to which a small quantity of yeast has been added. The poultice should not be too hot and should be changed at least three times a day. As soon as the tissues begin to soften and the abscess is well defined it should be lanced in the form of an X and the core removed at the first dressing, if possible.

The wound should be syringed and swabbed with a solution of potassium mercuric-iodide, one part in 2,000 of water, and wet dressings of the same solution should be applied until the sore has healed.

AS A SENSIBLE PROPOSITION

Damsel Put Question of Little Nap or Silly Talk Up to Her Escort, and It Was a "Go."

He was taking her home from the theater. The car was crowded, but they had obtained a seat together, and they were in each other's exclusive company for 45 minutes.

"Are you thinking of going away this summer?" said he, trying to conceal a yawn.

"I guess so," she answered, making a lady-like motion with her muff.

"I went away last summer," he continued, several blocks later. Did you?"

"I think we did," she said. "Say, may I ask you something?"

"Anything."

"Now, listen. I'm having just as hard a time to stay awake as you are. If you'll just shut up until we get to my street, I can have a nice little nap. So can you. And you'll like me a lot better than if we'd try to converse, and I'd fairly love you. And maybe I'd invite you out to call. Is it a go?"

"Angel! It is!" It was with difficulty that he kept from embracing her. Girls like that are so rare. Later they lived happily ever after.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.—Adv.

Head Waiter Not Worried.

Mr. H—— was in the habit of stopping at a quiet, conservative hotel during the frequent absences of his family. On one of these occasions he observed during dinner that the waiter when serving the coffee produced the coffee spoon from his waistcoat pocket.

Mr. H—— did not use the spoon. Instead, he sent for the head waiter and told him what he had seen. That individual blandly and gratefully assured him:

"Oh, that's all right, Mr. H——. They're all searched before they leave the house, you know."

CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Adv.

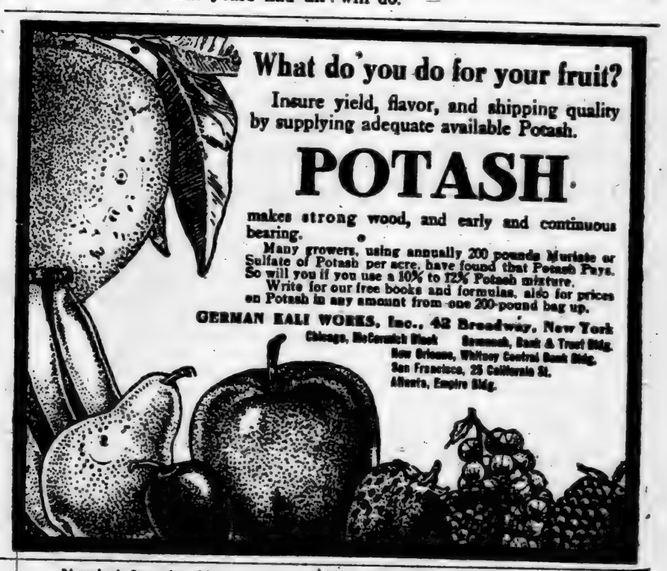
Eats Freely But Has No Dyspepsia

A Little Pepsin in a Mild Laxative Promptly Corrected a Bad Indigestion.

J. W. GOUCHER



Fortunate is the one who can eat "anything" without suffering the tortures of dyspepsia, but as few are so fortunate, care should be taken in the matter of diet. Eating slowly, masticating the food thoroughly and taking a short walk after the heavy meal of the day will do much towards assisting digestion. Any grown-up person ought to know the peculiar foods that do not agree, and these should be avoided.

When these common-sense aids fail, the next thing to do is to take a mild digestive tonic with laxative properties, and there is none better than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains the greatest of all aids to digestion, good pepsin. It has other ingredients that act mildly on the bowels, which together form a combination for the relief of dyspepsia or indigestion that is unsurpassed.

Its action is to tone and strengthen the stomach and bowel muscles so that they can again do their work naturally without outside aid, and when that happy moment comes all medicine can be dispensed with. It is the best remedy obtainable for any disorder of the stomach, liver and bowels, for dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, headaches, drowsiness after eating, gas on the stomach, etc. Thousands of users will testify to this, among them Mr. J. W. Goucher, Stites, Idaho, who for several years had all the worst symptoms of chronic dyspepsia. Since taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin these have all gone, and although Mr. Goucher says he is 64, he does not look more than 40.

Syrup Pepsin is sure in its results, and a vast improvement over chewing or swallowing tablets and mints, or taking cathartics, salts, etc., all of which are harsh and nauseous and at best do but temporary good. You can obtain Syrup Pepsin at any drug store for fifty cents or one dollar a bottle. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Can it be true that Mr. F. L. Blackmon has promised the Clanton post office to a man who has never voted the Democratic ticket?

Fifteen automobiles are rolling over the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama today carrying and making supporters for Judge E. B. Deason.

We understand that a frost fell around the Court House in Anniston last Saturday, and that the speaker got cold feet. Even the applauding of the reliable twenty-three husky supporters failed to restore the necessary vitality.

Wonder if Blackmon's Chilton county representative told the genial Freddie that if today was the 6th of April that he could not vote for him in our primary election. Didn't Frederick write him to meet him in the cold storage rally at Anniston?

With Talladega, Dallas, Shelby and Chilton lined up, and the good people of Calhoun and Cleburne helping us there will certainly be a Deason man on the train for Congress from the 4th Congressional District after the election.

In a city of 15,000 population, and on Saturday with 1,500 additional people in the city, and a number of letters to adjoining counties urging friends to be present, 150 men, women and children was not as large a crowd as Mr. Blackmon expected.

What a pity! They do say that the manager of Mr. Blackmon's campaign in Chilton county has never voted a Democratic ticket. Who would have thought it? Knowing what we do we can not say that we are surprised.

After the primary every voter in the Fourth Congressional District will know the name of their Representative in Congress—he will no longer be a stranger. The majority of the men who have voted for Mr. F. L. Blackmon would not recognise him if they were to meet him in the road.

Mr. W. P. Acker in introducing Congressman Blackmon at Anniston Saturday stated that the next Legislature in all probability would re-district the State and leave Chilton and Dallas counties out of the Fourth District. Is the wish father to the thought? We 'spect after the April primary he will wish it all the more so.

YOUR CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE.

We notice from the Anniston Star and Hot Blast that Mr. F. L. Blackmon returned from Washington last Saturday and addressed an audience of about five hundred at the Court House at Anniston. Our information, furnished by parties who were present at this meeting, is that there were not present at this meeting, or rather reception of Mr. Blackmon, more than one hundred and fifty persons, counting men, ladies and children, notwithstanding the fact that letters and invitations had been sent out calling and urging their presence. That this audience of 150 also included visitors from the different counties of this District.

It is with a great deal of pleasure and pardonable pride that we note the volume of approval, endorsement and unqualified support that Judge E. B. Deason is receiving from every part of the Fourth Congressional District in his candidacy. There is not a single precinct or even a community in this District that is without avowed Deason enthusiasts who are working both day or night for him. We attribute this enthusiasm to the fact that voters of this District, regard Judge Deason as being a man truly of the people, one in whose ability, integrity and sobriety, in whose fidelity to his friends, they have unbounded confidence.

Among his most active supporters will be found the farmers, bankers, judges, lawyers and ministers of this District. The masses appear to have espoused his cause and are determined to nominate him. There is not a single county in this District that is not being covered by automobiles and buggies. From the reports received from Talladega, Dallas, Shelby, Calhoun and Cleburne counties it certainly looks like a land slide for Judge Deason. A better man could not have been found in the District.

MARTIN IS VIGOROUS IN PRESENTING THE RECORD OF RIDDLE

Cites Records of Various Courts

WILLIAM L. MARTIN

Montgomery March 10.—(Special.)—William L. Martin, of Montgomery, candidate for attorney general, in an address at Luverne today, handled without gloves the private and professional character of D. H. Riddle, of Talladega, one of his opponents. It was the first speech Mr. Martin had delivered during his campaign for the attorney generalship, and his attack on Mr. Riddle was one of the most vigorous delivered against any candidate during the present state campaign. Mr. Martin was fortified with various court records, and he stated all of the charges he made were based on certified copies obtained from clerks of various courts of the state. Mr. Martin's speech was as follows:

Regrets Present Controversy.

"I regret being forced to engage in a personal controversy with one of my opponents, but I am compelled to do so in defense of my reputation. I find that Mr. Riddle has made me the object of his public addresses and while making no direct charges against me which are based on any particular fact, he endeavors by insinuation and by inuendo to cast slurs upon my name and upon my reputation. These are more important to me than the office I seek, and part of the remainder of the campaign will be devoted to their defense and to a disclosure of Mr. Riddle's private and professional character.

"Mr. Riddle has figured extensively in both the civil and criminal courts. He began the practice of law in 1894, and the following year was indicted twice by the grand jury of his own county. From that time on down to the present day he has been the defendant in more than 20 civil and criminal prosecutions."

Mr. Martin cited the following list of criminal and civil prosecutions against Mr. Riddle:

In Criminal Court.

State of Alabama vs. Henry Riddle, assault to murder; circuit court, Coosa county, spring term 1895; plea of guilty of assault and battery and payment of fine.

State of Alabama vs. Henry Riddle, carrying concealed weapon, circuit court, Coosa county, spring term 1895; plea of guilty and payment of fine.

State of Alabama vs. Henry Riddle, appearing in case without being employed; circuit court, Coosa county, spring term 1897; acquitted by jury.

State of Alabama vs. D. H. Riddle, alias Henry Riddle, willfully injuring or defacing a building; circuit court, Clay county, spring term 1898 (unable to obtain disposition of this indictment on account of leaf missing from court record).

In Civil Court.

Arnold, Henegar, Doyle & Co. vs. D. H. Riddle; circuit court, Coosa county, spring term 1903; suit for $1,129.14; judgment for the plaintiff.

Smith-Briscoe Shoe Co. vs. D. H. Riddle; circuit court, Coosa county, fall term 1903; suit for $795.80; judgment for plaintiff.

W. C. Gunn vs. D. H. Riddle, justice court, Goodwater, 1903, detinue for one clay bank colored horse and one muzzleloading rifle; judgment for the defendant.

Nina Ragan vs. D. H. Riddle, justice court, Goodwater, June 6, 1904; suit for $75 as damages for unlawful seizure of one white and brindle cow, one calf, one black milch cow, one black and white spotted heifer, one black and white spotted yearling, one buggy and harness, one sewing machine, 10 bushels corn, 300 bundles of fodder and two hogs; dismissed by plaintiff.

Union Manufacturing Co. vs. D. H. Riddle, justice court, Goodwater, September 6, 1905; suit for $60 (unable to find disposition).

Edward Thompson co. (law book publishers) vs. D. H. Riddle, circuit court, Coosa county, spring term 1906; suit for $200; judgment for plaintiff.

Standard Bunt Co. vs. D. H. Riddle, circuit court, Coosa county, spring term 1906; suit for $42.61; settled between parties.

Birmingham Dry Goods Co. vs. D. H. Riddle, circuit court, Coosa county, spring term 1906; suit for $219.51; judgment for plaintiff.

Bransroft-Whitney Co. (law book publishers) vs. D. H. Riddle, circuit court, Coosa county, fall term 1906; suit to recover 100 volumes American decisions, 60 volumes American reports, 104 volumes American State reports and other books; settled between the parties.

M. A. Guy vs. D. H. Riddle, circuit court, Coosa county, fall term 1906; suit for $150; nonsuit by plaintiff.

Mrs. M. A. Guy vs. D. W. Baker and D. H. Riddle, circuit court, Coosa county, fall term 1906; suit for $150; nonsuit by plaintiff.

West Publishing Co. (law book publishers) vs. D. H. Riddle, circuit court, Coosa county, fall term 1910; suit for $856; nonsuit by plaintiff, the defendant pleading that plaintiff could not collect because all books had not been delivered at the time of the institution of the suit.

L. D. Powell Co. (law book publishers) vs. D. H. Riddle, city court of Talladega, fall term 1911; suit for $90; judgment for plaintiff, defendant Riddle pleading that J. W. Kelly, a member of his firm, hand no authority to bind it.

In re F. G. Courtney, bankrupt, D. H. Riddle, representing the bankrupt, was ordered on July 12, 1911, to return to the estate $150 of the trust funds. From this order Riddle appealed, the decree of the referee being affirmed by District Judge Grubb July 29, 1911. The trust funds not having been paid into court by September 19, 1911, the district judge made an additional order, allowing 10 days for the payment, otherwise the attorney would be held in contempt of court. The amount was paid on the tenth day.

West Publishing Co. (law book publishers) vs. D. H. Riddle, city court of Talladega, fall term 1913; suit for $1,110; now pending.

John A. Carter, Jr. vs. D. H. Riddle, justice court, Talladega, January 10, 1914, suit for $50; judgment for plaintiff.

Kaul Lumber Co. vs. D. H. Riddle, city court of Talladega, March, 1914, bill in equity to enforce five vendors' lien on real property, balance due being $400; now pending.

Information Due the Public.

"It is due the public that it know the character of the man who seeks the highest prosecuting office in the State.

"I owe it to myself to make this public exposure. A witness on the stand is subject to an impeachment of his character. Mr. Riddle is the witness against me and the people of Alabama are the jury. I, therefore, submit these facts for the people to determine whether or not any credit shall be given any of his accusations.

"I owe this duty to the Democratic party. Mr. Riddle has been running for office for 15 years; if he is nominated for this one, the Republican party, by nominating an honest man, could defeat him.

"I owe this duty to the State of Alabama. The office of attorney general, which is one of the most important in the State, has heretofore been filled by men of unquestioned honesty. The attorney general prosecutes 400 criminal cases a year. If he be dishonest he may be induced by an appellant to bargain for the reversal of his case and gain a new trial. If he be dishonest a convict can find a way of obtaining at least one vote for a favorable recommendation upon his application for pardon, for the attorney general is a member of the board of pardons.

"The question of special counsel, upon which Mr. Riddle is also making his fight, is a moot question. The law passed by the last legislature authorizing the governor to employ counsel has been declared unconstitutional by the city court of Montgomery, and is now pending in the supreme court. In my opinion there is no doubt of the unconstitutionality of the act. Under this law counsel has been employed to assist solicitors under section 3646 of the code and in criminal prosecutions. It has rarely been exercised to perform any duty imposed by statute upon the attorney general.

"For the past seven years Messrs. Selheimer and Weakley have devoted all their time to the rate legislation. If this litigation should ever be resumed, and if it should be as heavy in the future as it has been in the past it would be impossible for the attorney general to handle it and to devote his time to his regular duties. In the recent South and North case, which was appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, there were 30,000 pages of testimony in the form of direct question and answer, which had to be changed into narrative form to meet the requirement of the new rule of the supreme court of the United States. Two months had already been consumed by Messrs. Selheimer and Weakley in the preparation of approximately one-fourth of this transcript. Briefing the case would have taken both gentlemen anywhere from three to five months each.

"The preparation of the brief by any lawyer not already familiar with the work, who did not hear the testimony, would have been impossible. It certainly would have been unjust to the state if this voluminous litigation had passed from these experienced lawyers into the hands of other attorneys who had not appeared in the taking of the testimony, which covered a period of 10 months in 1910.

"I had hoped to base my campaign entirely on my experience in the general practice, as assistant solicitor of the city court of Montgomery, on a four-year period of service as assistant attorney general, and on what ability, if any, I might possess.

"I regret the personal issues. They are distasteful to me. The public has grown tired of the candidate who seeks an office, not on his merit alone but on the shortcomings of his opponent. But I cannot longer remain silent and these issues cannot be longer avoided." — Birmingham Age-Herald March 11, 1914.

Entered at the post office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Can it be true that Mr. E. L. Blackmon has promised the Clanton post office to a man who has never voted the Democratic ticket?

Fifteen automobiles are rolling over the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama today carrying and making supporters for Judge E. B. Deason.

We understand that a frost fell around the Court House in Anniston last Saturday, and that the speaker got cold feet. Even the applauding of the reliable twenty-three husky supporters failed to restore the necessary vitality.

Wonder if Blackmon's Chilton county representative told the genial Freddie that if today was the 6th of April that he could not vote for him in our primary election. Didn't Frederick write him to meet him in the cold storage rally at Anniston?

With Talladega, Dallas, Shelby and Chilton lined up, and the good people of Calhoun and Cleburne helping us there will certainly be a Deason man on the train for Congress from the 4th Congressional District after the election.

In a city of 15,000 population, and on Saturday with 1,500 additional people in the city, and a number of letters to adjoining counties urging friends to be present, 150 men, women and children was not as large a crowd as Mr. Blackmon expected.

What a pity! They do say that the manager of Mr. Blackmon's campaign in Chilton county has never voted a Democratic ticket. Who would have thought it? Knowing what we do we can not say that we are surprised.

After the primary every voter in the Fourth Congressional District will know the name of their Representative in Congress—he will no longer be a stranger. The majority of the men who have voted for Mr. F. L. Blackmon would not recognise him if they were to meet him in the road.

Mr. W. P. Acker in introducing Congressman Blackmon at Anniston Saturday stated that the next Legislature in all probability would re-district the State and leave Chilton and Dallas counties out of the Fourth District. Is the wish father to the thought? We spect after the April primary he will wish it all the more so.

Montgomery March 10.—(Special.)—William L. Martin, of Montgomery, candidate for attorney general, in an address at Luverne today, handled without gloves the private and professional character of D. It was the first speech Mr. Martin had delivered during his campaign for the attorney generalship, and his attack on Mr. Riddle was one of the most vigorous delivered against any candidate during the present state campaign. Mr. Martin was furtified with various court records, and he stated all of the charges he made were based on certified copies obtained from clerks of various courts of the state. Briefing the case would have taken both gentlemen anywhere from three to five months each.

"The preparation of the brief by any lawyer not already familiar with the work, who did not hear the testimony, would have been impossible. It certainly would have been unjust to the state if this voluminous litigation had passed from these experienced lawyers into the hands of other attorneys who had not appeared in the taking of the testimony, which covered a period of 10 months in 1910.

"I had hoped to base my campaign entirely on my experience in the general practice, as assistant solicitor of the city court of Montgomery, on a four-year period of service as assistant attorney general, and on what ability, if any, I might possess.

"I regret the personal issues. They are distasteful to me. The public has grown tired of the candidate who seeks an office, not on his merit alone but on the shortcomings of his opponent. But I cannot longer remain silent and these issues cannot be longer avoided." —Birmingham Age-Herald March 11, 1914.

JUDGE E. PERRY THOMAS.

Judge Thomas is at present an Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals of Alabama, and is a candidate in the approaching primary to succeed himself. The only candidate opposing him is Mr. J. B. Brown, of Cullman, Ala. Judge Thomas has already heard from an overwhelming majority of the leading lawyers of the State, who are for him, and who assure him that in their opinion he has made good as an Appellate Judge. Ask those in your county as to his fitness and competency. He would greatly appreciate your support.

A PROPOSED SYSTEM OF STATE HIGHWAYS

Under the recent bill which has passed the Federal House at Washington appropriating $25,000,000 for GOOD ROADS, Alabama's portion would be between $500,000 and $750,000. The State could easily appropriate an equal amount, and each county through which the proposed highways are to run could appropriate its pro rata share of the amount, and in this way these counties would have good roads built at about one-fourth or one-fifth (counting labor of convicts) of what it would ordinarily take to build the roads, and it would not be a burden on the County or State. This would give between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 actual cash to the State to put down these highways; and then, again, to work convicts on the highways (that is, the State donate the convicts the same as the County), and put the working of the roads under the supervision of the State Highway Commission and the County Board of Revenue, or Commission, in connection with the National Government, these roads could be built in a short time at a very small cost to any County or the State and the men would not be great; yet, this system would put Alabama foremost among the States in GOOD ROADS, and you might say with sufficient money in sight on the above plan to complete it, or at most, put down the main highways.

At best we need a highway North and South and one East and West through the State, and they are needed badly at the present time. This would increase the value of farm lands ranging three, four and five miles along these highways, depending on the distance, to triple their present value.

At a representative meeting of the Jefferson County Good Roads Association, held in the Chamber of Commerce on March 6th, 1914, Mr. L. A. Whitehead presented a map of a system of highways of the State, which is shown above. The map and plan of constructing this system of highways was thoroughly discussed by the various members present. After the discussion, the following resolution was introduced by Mr. J. A. Rountree and unanimously adopted:

"Resolved 1st, That the Jefferson County Good Roads Association heartily endorse the above plan of a system of highways that is proposed by L. A. Whitehead in the above map and that we believe same feasible and for the greatest benefit to the majority of the people of the State.

"Resolved 2nd, That the Jefferson County Good Roads Association appeals to all voters of the State to elect a delegation to the House and to the Senate that will favor GOOD ROADS and that will pledge them selves to put through a reasonable bill looking forward to the construction and maintenance of these roads. Our slogan is, 'Better Roads and Better Schools,' which unquestionably will put the State of Alabama in the front, where it rightfully belongs, as it is already first in alphabetics and other."

FOR SHORT TERM

SENATOR WATT T. BROWN of Ragland, Alabama.

Who is asking for your support in his candidacy for short term only in the U. S. Senate. He is an active worker in the cause of vocational education. He believes that the greatest good can come to the masses by giving them a practical education and training; also, that the greatest asset of the State is the development of its boys and girls, and that Nation and State should assist. If elected to the Senate, he can immediately take hold of legislation which is now pending in Congress along this line.

Senator Brown is also an advocate of the improvement of public roads and highways; the opening of our streams and rivers for navigation; the improvement of harbors; more recognition of the debt due to Confederate Veterans, one of whom was his father; and the upholding of President Wilson and his administration.

Senator Brown was reared on the farm; is a successful merchant, banker and independent coal operator. He is the only business man in the race, and, if elected, will be one of the few men who go to the Senate who are not lawyers. Under no circumstance will he be a candidate for the long term in the Senate.

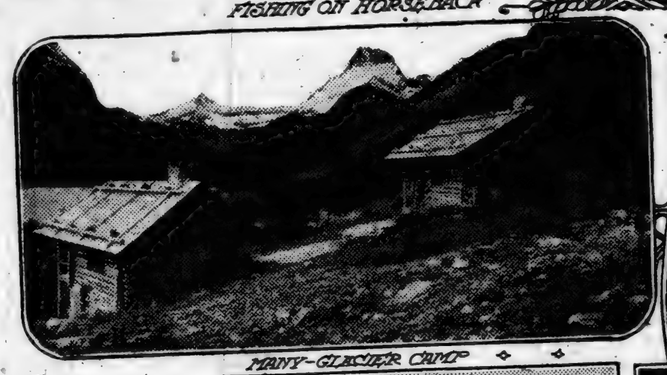
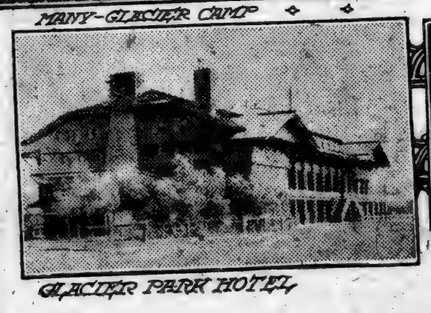
AMONG the GLACIERS

BY E. W. PICKARD



AVALANCHE LAKE



ICEBERG LAKE

FISHING ON HORSEBACK

MANY-GLACIER CAMP

GLACIER PARK HOTEL

GOING-TO-THE-SUN MOUNTAIN

BY some it is called the "Switzerland of America." True, it has the majestic, snow-topped mountains crowded closely together, the glittering ice fields of glaciers, the sparkling little lakes lying cupped between the heights, and the magnificent forests of pine and fir. But not, as in Switzerland, are there towns and hamlets and scattered cottages; the visitor must gain the summits afoot or on horseback, without the aid of "funicular" or cog railway; over and through and about it there are not the immense swarms of "trippers" that infest the old world country; hordes of guides do not dog your footsteps, and ravenous hotelkeepers are not found at every turn.

Others have dubbed it "Uncle Sam's Newest Playground," and so it is, but it will not be that very long. So some writer with a vivid imagination must find a new name for the Glacier National Park.

About 14,000 persons visited Glacier park last summer, and in the coming season it is probable fully twice as many will view its beauties and wonders. Although as a national park it is only three years old, its name is already familiar in this country because of the extensive advertising it has received and of the enthusiastic accounts of those who have seen it; and it seems destined to become one of the most popular regions for persons who like to spend their holidays in a somewhat unconventional way and at moderate expense.

Occupying 1,400 square miles near the northwest corner of Montana, Glacier park is right in the heart of the Rockies and in the matter of mountain scenery it yields to no place. Dozens of magnificent peaks crowd the landscape, some towering to heights of more than 10,000 feet. On the upper slopes of many of them shine the glaciers that give the park its name, and from these everlasting beds of snow and ice are born scores of torrents that dash down the mountain sides and hurl themselves over tremendous cliffs. Scattered all about among the mountains are deep lakes that lie like burnished mirrors in the calm of a sunny day or are lashed into black rage when the storm sweeps down on them from the heights.

Perilous passes, steep and rocky climbs, slippery scrambles across glaciers and miles of dense forest are there for those who like the more strenuous life. For the others there are automobile, coach, launch and horseback trips, rest and recreation in an excellent hotel and delightful "chalet camps," and always mellow days and cool nights.

If one wishes to get away from hotel life entirely he can have camping trips in the wilderness, and it is really wilderness, in which he can wander for weeks without seeing a human habitation. Big game is there in abundance—bears, mountain sheep, mountain goats and various kinds of "varmints"—but of course it is strictly protected by Uncle Sam. But fish are there, too, especially trout, and the visitor is free to catch them if he can. Adding their own touch of picturesqueness are the Indians of the Blackfeet tribe, whose home is in the reservation immediately east of the park.

The usual entrance to the park is at its southeast corner, where, at Glacier Park station, is one of the most remarkable and attractive hotels in the country. The main building is constructed largely of immense logs from Washington and Oregon and the spacious lobby is flanked by these natural pillars which tower three stories to the roof. Enormous fireplaces, scores of pelts of wild animals and the heads of buffalo and deer add to the attractions; and more comfort and better food cannot be obtained in metropolitan hotels. Tourists, guides and Indians mingle here, and formality is discarded.

I haven't the slightest intention of writing a guidebook to the Glacier National Park, but I do wish to tell of some of its wonders and beauties that can be seen in a visit of a few days. So first let's climb into this big touring car and go to Lake St. Mary. Our chauffeur is a "breed," capable, courteous and well educated, who knows the country as you know your back yard. For some 20 miles our route lies through the Indian reservation and we skim along the boulevard road across sweeps of prairie, up hills and along the edges of precipices, now dipping down into lovely valleys, now crossing rushing streams, with the mountains ever growing more imposing and more fascinating. Twisting up a long climb and swerving to the west, we come to the continental watershed near Triple Divide mountain. Thence the waters flow on one side to Hudson bay, on another to the Pacific and on the third to the Mississippi valley and the gulf. This is truly the roof of the continent. Now for 16 miles the road runs through the great pine forests and winds gradually downward, on the slopes of the mountain, until with a loud honking our motor car draws up beside the charming log chalets of St. Mary camp that cling to the steep shores of the lake, whose waters sparkle and ripple under the midday sun. Dinner awaits in the biggest chalet—plain food, well cooked and plentiful, served by attractive waitresses. It is eaten with a relish and without formalities, and then, after a few minutes in the "recreation" chalet with its player piano and dance floor, we all pile aboard a powerful gasoline launch and head up the lake for Going-to-the-Sun camp.

On the right stretches the long ridge of Single Shot mountain, and on the left rise Citadel, Almost-a-Dog (lovely name) and other fine peaks. But our eyes are fixed forward to where Going-to-the-Sun mountain rears its magnificent snow-topped head. It is one of the most picturesque mountains in America, and hanging near its summit is a large glacier whose stream, dailing headlong, is constantly blown upward into spray by the never-resting winds. From the camp, built high on a promontory that projects far into the lake, the view of this mountain, of Blackfeet glacier, of Citadel, Reynolds, and Fusillade mountains and of the heights about Gunsight pass far beyond is most impressive.

While we linger here marveling at the "upside down" waterfall, the vivid colors of the mountains and the ice-green lake spread at our feet, the sharp peak of Fusillade is veiled by clouds that pour swiftly over and about the nearer heights, and away up there a snowstorm is raging. For us it is rain, however, and driven to shelter, we crowd into the cabin of the launch and hustle back to St. Mary camp.

From St. Mary camp the automobile road has just been extended some 20 miles to Many-Glacier camp on Lake McDermott. This place, in itself fine enough, is the headquarters from which we make short trips to some of the park's greatest attractions—Morning Eagle falls, Cataract creek, Swift Current pass and, most wonderful of all, Iceberg lake. This little body of exquisitely blue water is almost wholly surrounded by serrated, splintered ridges that tower 3,000 feet above its surface. On a kind of shelf lies what is left of the ancient glacier that scooped out this basin ages ago, and from its edges icebergs, large and small, are continually breaking off to go floating lazily about in the lake. Iceberg lake is the habitat of the polar trout discovered by Hoke Smith, who says they have fur instead of scales.

Now back to the Glacier Park hotel for mail and a little rest, for we are seeing the park in a lazy, leisurely fashion. And what next? Well, suppose we give at least one day to Two Medicine lake, a region that for sheer beauty can hold its own with any in the park. The trip is made by stage in about three hours, and on the way up the lovely valley we tie up the horses and are led through the forest to the Trick falls. Here in high water times Two Medicine river plunges over the edge of a mass of rocks down among huge boulders; but in the dry season it drops into a hole above and emerges more quietly through a cavern in the rocky wall. The mountain that especially dominates Two Medicine lake is Rising Wolf, and it is almost as handsome as Going-to-the-Sun. Here, too, is another of those delightful chalet camps, and what with the view, the food and the air, it is hard to tear one's self away from it.

If there are any real fishermen in our party the best thing they can do is to go to St. Mary's camp again, and from there by trail to Red Eagle lake, three hours distant. This beautiful green lake, only a mile long and half a mile wide, is from 200 to 500 feet deep, and fairly swarms with cutthroat trout, while in the streams that flow into and out of it the Dolly Varden trout is found in great numbers. These fish are good fighters and the angler who gets one on his hook and undertakes to yank it from its ice-cold home has a task that delights his soul. Since there is a stretch of shallow water in front of the camp, the fisherman often rides out on horseback to deeper water and there, still astride his steed, casts for the trout. The first time you sit on a horse and try to land a ten-pound cut-throat you will forget there is anything else on earth except that little lake surrounded by a dozen magnificent mountains, that horse and that trout.

Being still somewhat averse to strenuous exercise, we are now going to board the train at Glacier Park station and ride luxuriously over the Great Northern's pretty Swiss chalet hotel and climb aboard a stage coach for the ride to Lake McDonald. For an hour we travel a boulevard cut through a dense forest of pine, spruce and balsam, and then, where a group of cottages are clustered on its shore, the lake opens out before us. This 11-mile stretch of water is so beautiful, in setting and color, that no words are adequate to describe it. Lake McDonald was a popular resort long before the national park was established, and there are several hotels and camps about its northern end. To one of these, the Glacier hotel, we are taken by launch to be greeted cordially by its proprietor, J. E. Lewis, who for years has been taking care of fishermen and other folk who wanted to spend a week or a summer in the open. So near that it seems but a moment's walk from the shore, the mountains of the park tower to the skies, casting their jagged reflections in the still waters of the lake. A ten-mile ride through the forest that clothes their lower slopes brings us to Avalanche lake. Pea green in color, reflecting the spruce and pine and hemlock that crowd to its very edge, it lies like a precious gem in a deep basin that is a veritable mountain garden. At one end the rock wall rises almost perpendicularly for 6,000 feet, and over its edge and down its face dash four torrents discharged from Sperry glacier, two miles away.

Not very easy of access, but wonderfully impressive when you get to it after some five hours of climbing, is Sperry glacier. Just a great field of ice and snow, about three miles in extent and of unknown depth, it lies glittering and sparkling under the midsummer sun. Crevasses cross its expanse here and there, and the tourist must be exceedingly careful if he ventures out on its surface. Indeed, the authorities do not permit this, unless with guides and ropes, on any of the glaciers in the park. The wind is always high up there, and snow and rock slides are frequent.

The mountains and glaciers and lakes and passes we have seen are only a few of the wonders of this wonderful park—only a few, indeed, of that part that is open to ordinary sight-seers. Almost half of the park, the northern part, is known to few except forest rangers, guides, Indians and some scientists. Doubtless before many years the whole region will be opened up, and the remarkably satisfactory system of camps established by the Great Northern Railway company will be extended to the Canadian border. Within the last year these accommodations have been enlarged greatly to meet the demands of the rapidly increasing stream of visitors.

One more thing must be said for Glacier National Park: It is a pleasure ground for the people, not for the millionaire. No fine clothes, no expensive luxuries there. All charges are regulated by the government, and it is the ambition of Louis Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern, to keep the necessary expenses of visitors down to the minimum. Glacier park is his hobby and his pride, and he is as familiar with its trails and passes as are the guides and the Indians. Of course, tourist travel to the park helps his railway, and at some time in the far future the company may begin to [illegible] on its lavish expenditure of money to make [illegible]

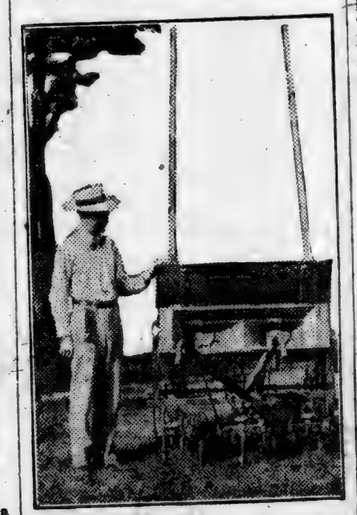
SUGAR BEETS THRIVE ON ANY GOOD SOIL

Thinning Sugar Beets, Which Owing to the Closeness of the Young Plants Must Be Done by Hand.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is generally conceded that the best soils for the production of sugar beets are the sandy loams and the clay loams. However, any good soil, if properly handled, will produce satisfactory sugar beets, provided climatic conditions are favorable, states Farmers' Bulletin 568 of the department of agriculture. In general, more depends upon the physical condition of the soil than upon its strict classification.

Select the field for sugar beets with reference to the quality of the surface and subsoil, conditions of drainage and the fitness to follow the preceding crops. Plow thoroughly and deeply in the fall if possible. Make the seed bed firm below as well as near the surface. Plant in the spring as soon as the soil and weather conditions are right. Use plenty of seed to insure a good stand, and do not plant too deep. Hold the moisture in contact with the seed by use of the press wheel and rollers. Cultivate as soon as the rows can be seen, but do not throw the dirt over the beets. Block and thin the beets just as soon as they are large enough to handle. Space with reference to the strength and moisture-holding capacity of the soil.



Rotate with other crops to improve the soil condition and to eliminate pests. Keep plenty of live stock to utilize the beet tops and other feed and supply stable manure. In harvesting the beets see that they are all gathered, properly topped, and as free as possible from dirt. Cover the beets as soon as topped to prevent evaporation, and utilize beet tops, pulp and lime with a view to improving soil conditions.

The by-products of the beet field and sugar mill that are of particular importance to the farmer are the beet tops, the pulp and the waste lime. If properly handled, the beets form a valuable asset for the beet grower, and in considering the value of a beet crop they should be reckoned at their real worth as a stock food. Many farmers sell their tops at a cash price ranging from $2.50 to $5 per acre, in which case the grower is the loser for the reason that the tops are of greater value to him as a stock food, and if he allows the tops to leave his farm he loses their manurial value, consisting of a large part of mineral plant food taken up by beets in the process of growth, and also their humus value, which results from returning the tops to the soil in the form of stable or barnyard manure.

The most economical way to handle the tops is to gather them into piles soon after they wilt and before they become thoroughly dry. In this condition they can be gathered with much less loss than would be the case if they were left scattered over the ground until dried. After they have cured in the piles they should be hauled to the feed yard, where they should be fed in properly constructed racks to avoid waste.

Beet pulp is an excellent stock food. This by-product is the refuse that remains after the beets have been sliced and the sugar extracted. As a stock feed it may be used either as green pulp, that is, just as it comes from the mill, or it may be dried.

Waste lime is a by-product of the sugar mill which under certain conditions is of considerable value to the farmer for correcting the acid condition of the soil. It is well known that a soil should be neutral or slightly alkaline in order to produce the best

Poultry as Food.

Although not as many varieties of poultry are in common use in the United States as in Europe, and although eggs form perhaps the most important part of the total poultry industry in the United States, enormous birds are raised and sold for their flesh to make poultry an important item in the list of foods, says the department of agriculture. Chickens are, of course, far the most common of the kinds of poultry. Next come turkeys; then ducks and geese, followed by capons and squabs, the other varieties, such as guinea fowl, pheasants and quail being least common of all.

In raising birds for the market special fattening has not heretofore been practiced in this country with anything like the same frequency as in Europe; but American breeders are gradually coming to it more and more, especially on the large poultry farms which are springing up in many places. The extreme methods used so much in France are not, however, considered advantageous by most American breeders.

Live poultry is very commonly marketed, especially in the southern states, where it is the custom to kill a short time before cooking, but considering the country as a whole, it is doubtless true that the dressed birds are marketed more than those alive, and the buyer must depend mainly on the appearance of the skin and flesh to tell him how fresh the bird is, and whether it has been properly dry-plucked or plunged into boiling water to make the plucking easier. In most cases, also, the age must be determined by the pliability of the breastbone or, in duck and goose, the windpipe.

The methods of cooking poultry in general the same as those for other kinds of meat. The tougher the bird the more cooking will be needed to make it tender and easily digested, and the larger it is the more heat will be required to cook it thoroughly.

As regards composition poultry does not differ as much as is commonly supposed from meat of other domestic animals used for food. Individual kinds and specimens, of course, vary in the relative amounts of protein and fat contained, and there are certain flavors in poultry which differ from those in other meats. But these differences are so small that they are practically negligible in ordinary diet. Nor is there as much difference in digestibility as is often stated. On the average, poultry is somewhat more easily digested than beef and mutton, but only very slightly. The difference in digestibility between the various kinds of poultry probably depends upon the amount of fat contained, the lighter sorts being least easily digested. Tenderness of fiber may have something to do with both ease and thoroughness of digestion, and, if so, young birds are more easily digested than old, and the less-used muscles of the chicken, such as the breast, more easily than the much-used tissues of the legs.

Similarly, white-fleshed birds may be more easily digested than dark-fleshed, because the fibers of white flesh are less closely set; but this is not fully proved. Indeed, very little is positively known on this subject, and that little seems to indicate that the differences in thoroughness of digestion are very slight, and that cooking has much more to do with the digestibility of the birds than the slight differences in composition.

AMONG the GLACIERS

GLACIER PARK HOTEL

GOING-TO-THE-SUN MOUNTAIN

BY some it is called the "Switzerland of America." True, it has the majestic, snow-topped mountains crowded closely together, the glittering ice fields of glaciers, the sparkling little lakes lying cupped between the heights, and the magnificent forests of pine and fir. But not, as in Switzerland, are there towns and hamlets and scattered cottages; the visitor must gain the summits afoot or on horseback, without the aid of "funicular" or cog railway; over and through and about it there are not the immense swarms of "trippers" that infest the old world country; hordes of guides do not dog your footsteps, and ravenous hotelkeepers are not found at every turn.

Others have dubbed it "Uncle Sam's Newest Playground," and so it is, but it will not be that very long. So some writer with a vivid imagination must find a new name for the Glacier National Park.

About 14,000 persons visited Glacier park last summer, and in the coming season it is probable fully twice as many will view its beauties and wonders. Although as a national park it is only three years old, its name is already familiar in this country because of the extensive advertising it has received and of the enthusiastic accounts of those who have seen it; and it seems destined to become one of the most popular regions for persons who like to spend their holidays in a somewhat unconventional way and at moderate expense.

Occupying 1,400 square miles near the northwest corner of Montana, Glacier park is right in the heart of the Rockies and in the matter of mountain scenery it yields to no place. Dozens of magnificent peaks crowd the landscape, some towering to heights of more than 10,000 feet. On the upper slopes of many of them shine the glaciers that give the park its name, and from these everlasting beds of snow and ice are born scores of torrents that dash down the mountain sides and hurl themselves over tremendous cliffs. Scattered all about among the mountains are deep lakes that lie like burnished mirrors in the calm of a sunny day or are lashed into black rage when the storm sweeps down on them from the heights.

Perilous passes, steep and rocky climbs, slippery scrambles across glaciers and miles of dense forest are there for those who like the more strenuous life. For the others there are automobile, coach, launch and horseback trips, rest and recreation in an excellent hotel and delightful "chalet camps," and always mellow days and cool nights.

If one wishes to get away from hotel life entirely he can have camping trips in the wilderness, and it is really wilderness, in which he can wander for weeks without seeing a human habitation. Big game is there in abundance—bears, mountain sheep, mountain goats and various kinds of "varmints"—but of course it is strictly protected by Uncle Sam. But fish are there, too, especially trout, and the visitor is free to catch them if he can. Adding their own touch of picturesqueness are the Indians of the Blackfeet tribe, whose home is in the reservation immediately east of the park.

The usual entrance to the park is at its southeast corner, where, at Glacier Park station, is one of the most remarkable and attractive hotels in the country. The main building is constructed largely of immense logs from Washington and Oregon and the spacious lobby is flanked by these natural pillars which tower three stories to the roof. Enormous fireplaces, scores of pelts of wild animals and the heads of buffalo and deer add to the attractions; and more comfort and better food cannot be obtained in metropolitan hotels. Tourists, guides and Indians mingle here, and formality is discarded.

I haven't the slightest intention of writing a guidebook to the Glacier National Park, but I do wish to tell of some of its wonders and beauties that can be seen in a visit of a few days. So first let's climb into this big touring car and go to Lake St. Mary. Our chauffeur is a "breed," capable, courteous and well educated, who knows the country as you know your back yard. For some 20 miles our route lies through the Indian reservation and we skim along the boulevard road across sweeps of prairie, up hills and along the edges of precipices, now dipping down into lovely valleys, now crossing rushing streams, with the mountains ever growing more imposing and more fascinating. Twisting up a long climb and swerving to the west, we come to the continental watershed near Triple Divide mountain. Thence the waters flow on one side to Hudson bay; on another to the Pacific and on the third to the Mississippi valley and the gulf. This is truly the roof of the continent. Now for 16 miles the road runs through the great pine forests and winds gradually downward, on the slopes of the mountain, until with a loud honking our motor car draws up beside the charming log chalets of St. Mary camp that cling to the steep shores of the lake, whose waters sparkle and ripple under the midday sun. Dinner awaits in the biggest chalet—plain food, well cooked and plentiful, served by attractive waitresses. It is eaten with a relish and without formalities, and then, after a few minutes in the "recreation" chalet with its player piano and dance floor, we all pile aboard a powerful gasoline launch and head up the lake for Going-to-the-Sun camp.

On the right stretches the long ridge of Single Shot mountain, and on the left rise Citadel, Almost-a-Dog (lovely name) and other fine peaks. But our eyes are fixed forward to where Going-to-the-Sun mountain rears its magnificent snow-topped head. It is one of the most picturesque mountains in America, and hanging near its summit is a large glacier whose stream, falling headlong, is constantly blown upward into spray by the never ceasing winds. From the camp, built high on a promontory that projects far into the lake, the view of this mountain, of Blackfeet glacier, of Citadel, Reynolds, and Fusillade mountains and of the heights about Gunsight pass far beyond is most impressive.

While we linger here marveling at the "upside down" waterfall, the vivid colors of the mountains and the ice-green lake spread at our feet, the sharp peak of Fusillade is veiled by clouds that pour swiftly over and about the nearer heights, and away up there a snowstorm is raging. For us it is rain, however, and driven to shelter, we crowd into the cabin of the launch and hustle back to St. Mary camp.

From St. Mary camp the automobile road has just been extended some 20 miles to Many-Glacier camp on Lake McDermott. This place, in itself fine enough, is the headquarters from which we make short trips to some of the park's greatest attractions—Morning Eagle falls, Cataract creek, Swift Current pass and, most wonderful of all, Iceberg lake. This little body of exquisitely blue water is almost wholly surrounded by serrated, splintered ridges that tower 3,000 feet above its surface. On a kind of shelf lies what is left of the ancient glacier that scooped out this basin ages ago, and from its edges icebergs, large and small, are continually breaking off to go floating lazily about in the lake. Iceberg lake is the habitat of the polar trout discovered by Hoke Smith, who says they have fur instead of scales.

Now back to the Glacier Park hotel for mail and a little rest, for we are seeing the park in a lazy, leisurely fashion. And what next? Well, suppose we give at least one day to Two Medicine lake, a region that for sheer beauty can hold its own with any in the park. The trip is made by stage in about three hours, and on the way up the lovely valley we tie up the horses and are led through the forest to the Trick falls. Here in high water times Two Medicine river plunges over the edge of a mass of rocks down among huge boulders; but in the dry season it drops into a hole above and emerges more quietly through a cavern in the rocky wall. The mountain that especially dominates Two Medicine lake is Rising Wolf, and it is almost as handsome as Going-to-the-Sun. Here, too, is another of those delightful chalet camps, and what with the view, the food and the air, it is hard to tear one's self away from it.

If there are any real fishermen in our party the best thing they can do is to go to St. Mary's camp again, and from there by trail to Red Eagle lake, three hours distant. This beautiful green lake, only a mile long and half a mile wide, is from 200 to 500 feet deep, and fairly swarms with cut-throat trout, while in the streams that flow into and out of it the Dolly Varden trout is found in great numbers. These fish are good fighters and the angler who gets one on his hook and undertakes to yank it from its ice-cold home has a task that delights his soul. Since there is a stretch of shallow water in front of the camp, the fisherman often rides out on horseback to deeper water and there, still astride his steed, casts for the trout. The first time you sit on a horse and try to land a ten-pound cut-throat you will forget there is anything else on earth except that little lake surrounded by a dozen magnificent mountains, that horse and that trout.

Being still somewhat averse to mountain climbing, we are now going to board the train at Glacier Park station and ride luxuriously over the continental divide, in itself a delightful experience, to Belton, where we have a delicious meal in the Great Northern's pretty Swiss chalet hotel and climb aboard a stage coach for the ride to Lake McDonald. For an hour we travel a boulevard cut through a dense forest of pine, spruce and balsam, and then, where a group of cottages are clustered on its shore, the lake opens out before us. This 11-mile stretch of water is so beautiful, in setting and color, that no words are adequate to describe it. Lake McDonald was a popular resort long before the national park was established, and there are several hotels and camps about its northern end. To one of these, the Glacier hotel, we are taken by launch to be greeted cordially by its proprietor, J. E. Lewis, who for years has been taking care of fishermen and other folk who wanted to spend a week or a summer in the open. So near that it seems but a moment's walk from the shore, the mountains of the park tower to the skies, casting their jagged reflections in the still waters of the lake. A ten-mile ride through the forest that clothes their lower slopes brings us to Avalanche lake. Pea green in color, reflecting the spruce and pine and hemlock that crowd to its very edge, it lies like a precious gem in a deep basin that is a veritable mountain garden. At one end the rock wall rises almost perpendicularly for 6,000 feet, and over its edge and down its face dash four torrents discharged from Sperry glacier, two miles away.

Not very easy of access, but wonderfully impressive when you get to it after some five hours of climbing, is Sperry glacier. Just a great field of ice and snow, about three miles in extent and of unknown depth, it lies glittering and sparkling under the midsummer sun. Crevasses cross its expanse here and there, and the tourist must be exceedingly careful if he ventures out on its surface. Indeed, the authorities do not permit this, unless with guides and ropes, on any of the glaciers in the park. The wind is always high up there, and snow and rock slides are frequent.

The mountains and glaciers and lakes and passes we have seen are only a few of the wonders of this wonderful park—only a few, indeed, of that part that is open to ordinary sight-seers. Almost half of the park, the northern part, is known to few except forest rangers, guides, Indians and some scientists. Doubtless before many years the whole region will be opened up, and the remarkably satisfactory system of camps established by the Great Northern Railway company will be extended to the Canadian border. Within the last year these accommodations have been enlarged greatly to meet the demands of the rapidly increasing stream of visitors.

One more thing must be said for Glacier National Park: It is a pleasure ground for the people, not for the millionaire. No fine clothes, no expensive luxuries there. All charges are regulated by the government, and it is the ambition of Louis Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern, to keep the necessary expenses of visitors down to the minimum. Glacier park is his hobby and his pride, and he is as familiar with its trails and passes as are the guides and the Indians. Of course, tourist travel to the park helps his railway, and at some time in the far future the company may begin to benefit even on the lavish expenditure of money to make things comfortable for those who go all the way in stages to see the mountains of America—I

SUGAR BEETS THRIVE ON ANY GOOD SOIL

Thinning Sugar Beets, Which Owing to the Closeness of the Young Plants Must Be Done by Hand.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is generally conceded that the best soils for the production of sugar beets are the sandy loams and the clay loams. However, any good soil, if properly handled, will produce satisfactory sugar beets, provided climatic conditions are favorable, states Farmers' Bulletin 568 of the department of agriculture. In general, more depends upon the physical condition of the soil than upon its strict classification.

Select the field for sugar beets with reference to the quality of the surface and subsoil, conditions of drainage and the fitness to follow the preceding crops. Plow thoroughly and deeply in the fall if possible. Make the seed bed firm below as well as near the surface. Plant in the spring as soon as the soil and weather conditions are right. Use plenty of seed to insure a good stand, and do not plant too deep. Hold the moisture in contact with the seed by use of the press wheel and rollers. Cultivate as soon as the rows can be seen, but do not throw the dirt over the beets. Block and thin the beets just as soon as they are large enough to handle. Space with reference to the strength and moisture-holding capacity of the soil.

Rotate with other crops to improve the soil condition and to eliminate pests. Keep plenty of live stock to utilize the beet tops and other feed and supply stable manure. In harvesting the beets see that they are all gathered, properly topped, and as free as possible from dirt. Cover the beets as soon as topped to prevent evaporation, and utilize beet tops, pulp and lime with a view to improving soil conditions.

The by-products of the beet field and sugar mill that are of particular importance to the farmer are the beet tops, the pulp and the waste lime. If properly handled, the beets form a valuable asset for the beet grower, and in considering the value of a beet crop they should be reckoned at their real worth as a stock food. Many farmers sell their tops at a cash price ranging from $2.50 to $5 per acre, in which case the grower is the loser for the reason that the tops are of greater value to him as a stock food, and if he allows the tops to leave his farm he loses their manurial value, consisting of a large part of mineral plant food taken up by beets in the process of growth, and also their humus value, which results from returning the tops to the soil in the form of stable or barnyard manure.

The most economical way to handle the tops is to gather them into piles soon after they wilt and before they become thoroughly dry. In this condition they can be gathered with much less loss than would be the case if they were left scattered over the ground until dried. After they have cured in the piles they should be hauled to the feed yard, where they should be fed in properly constructed racks to avoid waste.

Beet pulp is an excellent stock food. This by-product is the refuse that remains after the beets have been sliced and the sugar extracted. As a stock food it may be used either as green pulp, that is, just as it comes from the mill, or it may be dried.

Waste lime is a by-product of the sugar mill, which under certain conditions is of considerable value to the farmer for correcting the acid condition of the soil. It is well known that a soil should be neutral or slightly

Poultry as Food.

Although not as many varieties of poultry are in common use in the United States as in Europe, and although eggs form perhaps the most important part of the total poultry industry in the United States, enormous numbers of birds are raised and sold for their flesh to make poultry an important item in the list of foods, says the department of agriculture. Chickens are, of course, far the most common of the kinds of poultry. Next come turkeys; then ducks and geese, followed by capons and squabs, the other varieties, such as guinea fowl, pheasants and quail being least common of all.

In raising birds for the market special fattening has not heretofore been practiced in this country with anything like the same frequency as in Europe; but American breeders are gradually coming to it more and more, especially on the large poultry farms which are springing up in many places. The extreme methods used so much in France are not, however, considered advantageous by most American breeders.

Live poultry is very commonly marketed, especially in the southern states, where it is the custom to kill a short time before cooking, but considering the country as a whole, it is doubtless true that the dressed birds are marketed more than the live, and the buyer must depend mainly on the appearance of the bird and flesh to tell him how fresh the bird is, and whether it has been properly dry-plucked or plunged into boiling water to make the plucking easier. In most cases, also, the age must be determined by the pliability of the breastbone or, in duck and goose, of the windpipe.

The methods of cooking poultry are in general the same as those for other kinds of meat. The tougher the bird the more cooking will be needed to make it tender and easily digested, and the larger it is the more heat will be required to cook it thoroughly.

As regards composition poultry does not differ as much as is commonly supposed from meat of other domestic animals used for food. Individual kinds and specimens, of course, differ in the relative amounts of protein and fat contained, and there are certain flavors in poultry which differ from those in other meats. But these differences are so small that they are practically negligible in ordinary diet. Nor is there as much difference in digestibility as is often stated. On the average, poultry is somewhat more easily digested than beef and mutton, but only very slightly. The difference in digestibility between the various kinds of poultry probably depends upon the amount of fat contained, the latter sorts being least easily digested. The coarseness of fiber may have something to do with both ease and thoroughness of digestion, and, if so, young birds are more easily digested than old, and the less-used muscles of the chicken, such as the breast, more than the much-used tissues of the legs.

Similarly, white-fleshed birds would be more easily digested than dark-fleshed, because the fibers of the latter are less closely set; but this is not fully proved. Indeed, very little is positively known on this subject, and that little seems to indicate that the differences in thoroughness of digestion are very slight, and that cooking has much more to do with the digestibility of the birds than any slight differences in composition.
